In addition to operating without reserve requirements the European rural co-operative credit societies are organized, as before stated, without capital and without the view of profits. The loaning rate is regulated just to meet the expenses of operation. Such expenses are held down to the minimum, with little or no taxes to pay. The cashier draws but a nominal salary, usually getting his livelihood largely from other sources, and holds his position as a secondary matter. The president and directors serve without compensation. Unless there is a considerable volume of business no bookkeeper is employed. Bookkeeping is simple, as there is no checking done, as is done with our banks. Such societies seldom cash or receive for deposit checks or drafts on other banks. Doors are not opened every day in the week, but possibly once each week or sometimes twice a month. The furniture and fixtures account is nominal, as usually a table, desk and chairs constitute the entire equipment—often not even a safe. Rent is occasionally saved by using a room in the home of the cashier. I doubt if our American farmer would be satisfied with this sort of banking facilities and at the same time render himself liable for all the deposits and debts of the bank in order to be able to obtain his money at a less rate of interest, or at least I doubt if the more responsible farmer, who would give strength and standing to such a bank, would be. So in comparing the rates of interest paid by the European farmer to those paid by the American farmer for short time credit, all these facts should be understood and considered.

Undoubtedly the fact has already been noted that European co-operative rural credit societies are associations of borrowers. This is one of the most marked distinctions between the European and American systems of banking, for in our country banks are associations of lenders. Our national and state laws either restrict or prohibit bank owners from borrowing from their own bank.

Our investigations proved, beyond doubt, that in order to keep pace with European countries we need in the United States a change in our present banking system that will permit our banks to be more liberal with their borrowing customers. I do not mean to be more liberal in the acceptance of secur-

COLORADO CONVENTION

At the twelfth annual convention of the Colorado Bankers Association, held at the Brown Palace Hotel, Denver, Wednesday and Thursday of this week, an attractive program was presented.

Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Company, St. Louis, made an analysis of the banking and currency bill, and Gordon Jones, president of the United States National of Denver, delivered an address on European country banking systems. Mr. Jones recently returned from an extended trip abroad, where he went as a representative of Colorado, being appointed by the governor to study banking as conducted in foreign countries. He took up the subject of land credits and explained especially how they are carried on in the countries which he visited.

Denver bankers proved to be capital hosts and provided a fine line of entertainment. Wednesday evening there was a dinner at Lakeside and all were provided with tickets to the various concessions, including the theater. The ball room also was reserved for the evening. The afternoon of the second day the ladies were entertained at a tea and in the evening the gentlemen were given a smoker and Dutch lunch at the Denver Athletic Club.

President's Address

I am sure that it is with feelings of pleasure and satisfaction that the members of the Colorado Bankers Association assemble together to-day in the capital city of Colorado to celebrate the twelfth annual convention of our association. While other sections of our country have been suffering from intense heat and destructive drought our state has had seasonable rains and an ample supply of water for irrigation purposes.

Not only are the crops on irrigated lands uniformly good, but in the dry farming districts ample yields promise prosperous results. We can with entire consistency call the attention of the whole country to this condition, which, when it is more fully known and appreciated, cannot fail to draw to Colorado many farmers who are meeting with failure in sections not so blessed by favorable climatic conditions.

I am pleased to note that the agricultural interests of our state are being promoted and materially aided by the efforts of our association. I believe that we should continue our efforts to assist in building up in our midst a greater, and if possible, a more prosperous, community of farmers, horticulturists and stock growers. I believe a still greater prosperity awaits our people, to be more fully realized when the maximum area of land is put under cultivation both in districts that have been brought under irrigation and those that can be brought under irrigation, and even in the development of our vast areas susceptible to dry farming lies boundless possibilities. I believe also that our farmers should be encouraged to turn their efforts more and more to intensive cultivation of the soil and to stock raising on more scientific methods.

I desire to call the attention of our membership to the splendid work that has been done by the protective department of this association during the past year. This will be covered more fully and in detail by the report of our secretary. Our various committees have worked harmoniously throughout the year for the advancement of the interests of our association.

The last legislature enacted a new banking code which went into effect on July 15th last. It is the duty and to the personal interest of every banker in the state to study carefully the provisions of this law, and then so adjust his business as to comply with its provisions. There may be and doubtless are some features of the new banking law that are not satisfactory to all bankers, but the governor and the state bank commissioner are reasonable men and will doubtless so administer the law as to aid our state banks to attain to a still higher plane of safety and efficiency. Of course the new law applies to state banks only, but national banks are interested as well in seeing that its provisions shall work for the common good. As testimony to the present soundness of our state banks we can point to the fact that there has been but one failure in our ranks during the past year, nor does it yet appear that any serious loss will result from this one.

There is now pending in congress a new banking code for national banks. It has many proposed features that are startling departures from the present laws with which we are familiar. Bankers throughout the country have been called upon to consider amendments and to make suggestions for amendments to this proposed law, and it is hoped by the bankers of this nation that those in congress having in charge this important proposed legislation will give heed to the advice of the bankers of this country who have devoted their lives and fortunes to this line of business. Their advice inspired by years of practical experience, involving seasons of financial prosperity and seasons of financial tribulation, cannot fail to be sound and of great value. We believe that it will also be patriotic.

I believe that this advice will be heeded at Washington, and that the legislation finally adopted with reference to our national banking system will result to the benefit of the banks as well as to our whole people.

It is quite likely that the new national banking law will be adopted before the end of the present year. With the adoption of this law, and with the state banking code now in effect in our own state, we can reasonably hope that there will be no more disturbing financial legislation for some years to come, and that we, as bankers, can give more of our attention to progressive effort, and less to warding off dangerous and freakish financial legislation.

Bankers can develop sound and prosperous institutions only by undivided attention and constant effort. It seems to me that when our banking laws are finally adopted, they should be given a thorough trial, and that politicians for selfish ends should not be allowed to disturb the business of the country by changing these laws, until some of their provisions be found oppressive or detrimental.

Stability in business conditions is often assured by stability of laws and statutes. Stability in business conditions not only insures stability in banks, but permanence in prosperity.

During the past year a number of prominent bankers, members of our association, have passed to the great beyond. Among these are the following: Jared L. Brush, John A. Thatcher, R. F. Lytle, W. P. Benedict, Morton Strain, H. Van Buskirk and J. W. Beaty.

I trust the committee on resolutions to be appointed at this session will take especial pains to express the sympathy of the Colorado bankers to the relatives and friends of the deceased.

Last year our association met in Pueblo and enjoyed one of the best conventions in its history. I hope this convention will be as productive of good. Since the eleventh annual convention was held, under the efficient work of our secretary and treasurer, a number of new members have been added to the association. There are yet others who should join us. I urge upon every member the importance of soliciting those banks that are not members of our association to join with us. It is not only for their benefit, but our own as well. I believe that if the bankers of this state realized to the full extent the benefit this association has been to the banking interest of the state during the past few years it would be considered almost an act of disloyalty for any bank to remain outside of its membership.

Inasmuch as some of the activities of this association have necessitated some considerable outlay during the past ten years, which outlay seems to have been made for the common benefit and to have resulted in the common good for all the banks of the state, and inasmuch as there are some obligations which have not been paid, as well as a necessity for a small fund for unforeseen contingencies, I would suggest that at this session it be taken into consideration as to whether or not it would be advisable to ask each bank now a member of the association to pay for this year only twice the annual dues usually paid.

To the bankers of Denver I wish to express the gratitude and appreciation of our association for their generosity in providing for this convention and for the preparations they have made toward its entertainment. Denver bankers never fail in their generosity to the fraternity throughout the state, and I am sure that on this occasion, from what I have learned of their plans, we who are their guests are to enjoy unusual courtesies throughout this convention.

In our business sessions I trust that we will be brief and to the point, as bankers should be, and that we will be benefited by what we learn and what we do in this, the twelfth session of this association.

SOME METHODS OF FINANCING THE FARMER

ity, but to be enabled to be more liberal in credit expansion for the purpose of facilitating the maturing and marketing of crops. Our country banks are mostly owned by the farmers themselves and as we have about the same ratio to the population that exists in the country where co-operative rural credit societies are most highly developed, I cannot, at the present, see the necessity for establishing an entirely new system of rural banking for the United States for the purpose of rendering short term personal credit to our farmers. Our present banking laws, if modified to enable the system already established to respond to the needs of the farmer in a manner I shall endeavor to point out, would amply suffice. Abuses of present banking privileges, such as charging exorbitant interest rates and commissions on the side by bankers in name only, should be remedied by strict state regulation. It may be necessary for some state legislatures to enact entirely new banking laws, as has been done but recently in Colorado, where the better class of bankers themselves co-operated with the authorities to bring about needed changes. But it is beyond the power of state legislatures to remedy more than local conditions. The need of an elastic currency and credit expansion system would still exist. Congress is now taking serious cognizance of these defects and it is to be hoped that in the enactment of a new financial system, the peculiar needs of the farmer for the maturing and marketing of his crops will be met.

It should be kept in mind that "the maturing and marketing of crops" contemplates, as well, the maturing and marketing of live stock and its by-products, for the reason that a large part of our crops are thus marketed. The bankers of this country have realized for years the inadequacy of our present financial system. Contrary to the operations of the banking systems of European countries, we have a fixed or static circulating medium and no method of increasing our circulation or of obtaining credit in times of greatest need. It is almost inconceivable that a great nation like our own should have, for such a length of time, left its agricultural, commercial and industrial interests so poorly provided for. This lesson has been impressed upon our minds time and again in the repeated needs for an increased money supply both in the moving of crops and in the demands of an excited banking public. As stated by me several years ago in an address on the subject of needed banking legislation (a copy of which was recently asked for by the librarian of congress and is now on file in Washington with others on the same subject), a banker is better able to take care of himself under adverse conditions than are his borrowers, for the reason that he suffers no loss until his borrower becomes bankrupt, and that in order to protect himself, in case of need to contract, the banker early begins to force his loans, which not only embarrasses his borrowers, but renders even more acute an already delicate situation. This action retards the wheels of commerce and throws upon the market an oversupply of commodities of all kind and invariably brings stagnation to real estate values. These conditions have been guarded against in European countries by providing government banks of issue upon which the commercial banks, as well as co-operative credit societies, can rely for needed assistance.

The pending bank and currency bill, in many respects an admirable one, if enacted in its present form will fall short of the needs of our country banking and agricultural interests. From the standpoint of the country banker one of the principal objections to the pending measure is the restriction placed upon the time limit of paper to be accepted by the proposed federal reserve bank for rediscount. Forty-five days is the maximum proposed unless the legal reserve of the federal reserve bank is at certain figures, when one hundred and twenty day paper could be accepted, provided that not more than 50 per cent of the total paper so discounted for any bank shall have a maturity of more than sixty days. Why it was deemed necessary to restrict the maturity of paper in such a manner I cannot conceive. It is easily understood why it should be necessary to require a reasonably short time and perfectly liquid paper; but I see no reason sufficiently strong to restrict the maturity so that little of that held by our country banks would be available, and especially that made by our producers, who require a longer time to mature and prepare their products for market. Would it not be a wiser provision to leave the maturity of the paper to the wisdom of the board of the regional banks, where local conditions are better known and understood? A fixed rule is not applicable over the entire United States for the reason that conditions and requirements vary greatly in the different sections. In some sections at certain seasons of the year the time limit might suffice, while in other sections at the same season the time limit would not suffice. The time limit named would always be adequate for the distributor or the middle man. The contention has been for years that the American producer is handicapped and that the middle man is absorbing too much of the price paid by the consumer. Why make it still easier for the middle man to finance himself and at the same time decline to remove the handicap of the producer? In the name of the American farmer, I protest.

This cannot be considered in any way a digression for it is a matter directly touching upon the subject in hand. It is drawing a deadly parallel of our present and proposed credit system with those of European countries for building up and fostering our agricultural industry.

Passing from the short-term credit societies as organized and operated in European countries, we have now to consider the long-term mortgage associations as another phase of the subject under discussion. Here also we have much to learn from European methods. It is a recognized fact that in our country, financiers have devoted themselves more to the financing of railroads, utility corporations and the urban builder than they have to financing the farmer. Let us keep in mind, in our discussion of this subject, the relative importance of the city and the country. Destroy the city and the country surrounding it would soon rebuild that city, but destroy the country surrounding a city and the city could not rebuild the country, but of itself could not long survive. The more prosperous the country, the greater and more prosperous the city, and as the city becomes greater and more prosperous it is in stronger position to render financial assistance to the country. As the city increases its manufacturing output and enlarges its industrial activities, its population of consumers increases and a greater market is thereby made for the products of the country. There is indeed an interlocking of interest and a consequent need of "co-operation" between the city and country, and the best results can only be obtained by a spirit of harmony and proper understanding.

The builders of our cities have been able to obtain financial assistance, the payment of which is extended over a long period of years upon buildings erected even upon leased grounds. The value of nearly all of our investments and properties depends chiefly upon the success of our agricultural interests. Yet we have never devised a workable plan to finance those engaged in that industry to safely carry themselves over a sufficient period to retire even a fair portion of the purchase price of their fixed investment. I am not criticising those engaged in the farm loan business as now conducted. They are but continuing the business along the line of recognized customs. A market has been established for real estate security on the present basis, and our lenders have been and are handling the business along the only recognized method employed in America.

It would not be feasible to adopt the long-term plan with small partial payments where the loan itself is lodged with the individual investor. He will not accept of a loan on those terms and it would be only through the intermediary of some bond or debenture issuing organization, that funds could possibly be obtained for the farmer under such conditions.

The European countries have adopted such a method for their farm borrowers, by the organization of their long-term mortgage associations, which are not banks of deposit. This system contemplates the return of the principal in small amounts at the same time interest is paid. Only income producing property of dependable value is loaned upon. The annuity to be paid is fixed, which includes the amount of interest and amount of amortization, as well as amount allowed the lending association for its expenses and profits. The longer the loan the smaller the annuity. When speaking of rates the European farmer and money lender on land mortgages always includes the amount to be paid in amortization. Thus when he tells you the rate is 6 per cent per annum, he means that $60 on each $1,000 borrowed is the amount to be paid each year, including interest and amortization, in order to retire the loan by the time of its maturity. This annuity remains the same throughout the life of the loan, but as the amount of the principal is gradually reduced the amount necessary for interest becomes less each year, and the amount applicable for amortization increases correspondingly. It is this calculation that retires the loan within a less period than at first impression seems possible. Thus by the gradual reduction of the mortgage the security is constantly enhanced.

There are some matters that enter into the negotiation of these long-term mortgage loans affecting interest rates that do not appear on the face. For instance, in the operation of some of their land mortgage associations the borrower is given bonds issued by the land mortgage association in exchange for his mortgage. The borrower accepts the bonds at one hundred cents on the dollar, and often has to market it himself. These bonds, however, have a ready market on the bourse or with commercial and private banks, but do not sell at par when drawing the low rates of interest.

Some of the land mortgage associations have perfected arrangements for cashing their bonds, thus accepted by the borrowers, through commercial banking institutions, which they themselves control or with which they are affiliated, so that their borrowers need not be forced to find their own market.

Originally the land mortgage associations came into existence through a combination of borrowers who united for their mutual assistance. As at first organized they were co-operative to the highest degree, although it did not reach the point of either communism or socialism. The owners of farms severally mortgaged their properties to a co-operative association and the collective mortgages thus became liable for the debts of one and all. This association, with no other capital than possibly a nominal membership fee charged, would issue its own bonds, allowing each borrower to use of such bonds to the extent of his individual needs from time to time up to the amount of his own mortgage. In retiring his loan to the association the borrower would repurchase the bonds on the market, or from whatever source available, delivering them to the association in payment of his loan, or repaying cash, if preferred, and the association would call in the equivalent amount in bonds. Often the borrower would not ask for the cancellation of his mortgage, leaving it of record in case of future needs against which he could draw bonds in such denominations as needed from time to time. This system has now been modified so that each borrower is responsible only for his own individual debt, but in all other respects remains the same.

Many of the co-operative land mortgage associations are fostered by government grants, loans or special privileges of law. Indefinite loans are sometimes extended them by the government without interest, or at a very low rate, as is done with the short-time rural credit societies.

In Germany these associations are granted exceptional legal privileges, and in foreclosing a mortgage it is unnecessary to go through any process of law, as the right is given to immediately dispossess the borrower. He has no redress at court, the association being a law unto itself. There are no redemption privileges given the borrower, neither has he any exemptions. The maintenance of the farm is one of the conditions of the mortgage. The borrower is required to keep up the improvements on his property, keep it insured, and maintain the fertility of the soil. In case this is not done it is a cause for foreclosure the same as default in interest or amortization payments.

Private capital is now successfully competing with these government fostered associations in the organization and operation of long-term mortgage banks. Such privately capitalized banks do not operate upon deposits, nor do they receive or accept government subsidy. They are less hampered in their operations and having laws that fully protect their securities prefer to operate independently of the government.

Bonds issued by both government fostered and privately owned land mortgage associations are considered among the safest and most desirable form of investments for savings, and private capital, and are invested in by commercial banks. In some countries, Austria particularly, a special effort is made to place these bonds outside their own country in order to bring in new capital, but in Germany exactly the opposite is pursued, they having proven to be such safe and dependable securities that the savings of the working class as well as trust and court controlled funds are invested in them. The large commercial and private banks often underwrite the issues, replacing them with the investing public. These bonds command a price, after reaching the market, near that commanded by government bonds, and usually sell on an equality with state or provincial bonds, and on better terms than industrials.

In endeavoring to make applicable any long-term mortgage system for this country, the fact must be kept constantly in mind that the farmer of America is quite different from the farmer of European countries. There the farmer operates under nominal expense as compared with the farmer in this country, as well as operates on a much smaller scale. He applies himself to a greater degree and is more scientific in the handling of his land and products. While the average sized farm in Europe is small, varying in size with the different countries, about twice the yield is obtained per acre that is obtained by the American farmer, owing to intense cultivation and scientific methods. The earning capacity of the European farm is an established fact. This in turn establishes its value. So settled are the values that the basis of assessment for taxation purposes, which is made at one hundred cents on the dollar, is generally used as the basis for valuing property when granting loans. Among the most important advantages for facilitating loans on real estate in Europe is the title registration law, which, in effect, places the government behind the title to all property. Some modification of these title registration laws could undoubtedly be made applicable to every state in the Union, and is highly essential to obtaining cheaper rates of interest on mortgage loans.

It must be understood that the method to be pursued in this country, should any long-term mortgage system be devised, necessarily would be quite different from the European methods; the rate of interest to be paid by our farmers would of necessity have to be higher, because of the expense incident to appraisal; because of exemption and redemption laws; because of the general lack of title registration laws, and the consequent need of abstracting and title examination; because of the necessity of safeguarding the loan by watching the security, that has not such a stable or definite income producing value, over an extended period; and for the further reason that a market would have to be built up for this class of investment, whereas throughout all European countries this class of investment is now well established, their land mortgage associations having been in successful operation for over a century without a loss of a dollar to an investor so far as we could learn. However, I do not believe the need of the American farmer is so much for a low rate of interest, if he is furnished a reasonable one, as for a method that will give him a sufficient period to work out of debt by amortization.

Through operation of the long-term amortization loan system the European countries have revolutionized the land ownership, passing titles from large tracts of landlordism into small tracts belonging to the individual farmers, making permanent home-owners out of former tenants. They have assisted in making farm life more inviting and in improving farm property to a high state of cultivation, thereby increasing the production of the land and as a natural result, enhancing the value of the land itself. If it is possible to devise some system for financing the American farmer on some

In other words, if we can make easier the ownership of farms, farmers will multiply. We would thereby assist the successful tenant to become a land owner, and the more land owners within a state the more stable and permanent its population, and the more stable and permanent its population the safer and more certain is invested capital and the happier and more contented its citizens.

INTERNATIONAL TRUST COMPANY OF DENVER

International Trust Company of Denver is capitalized at $350,000. Possessing surplus and profits of $790,000, it has deposits amounting to $6,800,000.

Officers are as follows: A. V. Hunter, chairman of the board; Theodore G. Smith and F. G. Moffat, vice-presidents; P. E. Cleland, treasurer; H. H. Brooks, secretary and trust officer, and F. G. Harrington, assistant secretary.

The first trust company organized in Colorado was the International Trust Company, established in Denver, in a small way, in 1892. It began business in two small rooms, in an upstairs location, offering its services to the public in a modest way. So ready was the business community to appreciate the high character of service rendered that the business of this trust company grew by leaps and bounds. It soon moved into larger quarters, established additional departments, and rapidly gained a widespread reputation for efficiency in handling business problems.

PRESIDENT NOT FAVORABLE TO BANKERS' RECOMMENDATIONS

President Wilson intimated this week that the recommendations of the Chicago conference, so far as they relate to the essential features of the currency bill, will not receive favorable consideration at the hands of the administration. The officials at Washington are not disposed to entertain any proposition designed to transfer the control of the federal reserve board from the government to the bankers or any change which will in any way impair the powers now conferred upon it.

The issue of notes by the government instead of the banks is regarded as one of the essential features of the bill and the number of reserve banks, while more or less controversial, is regarded generally as one of the fundamentals of the proposed law. It is believed that a reduction in the number from twelve to five regional reserve banks would be an approach to the central bank idea, which is not at all favored by the democrats.

McADOO APPORTIONS CROP MONEY

Secretary McAdoo has issued a statement of the apportionment of the $50,000,000 crop fund so far as it has been completed. It develops that Chicago banks will receive $4,000,000, the entire amount allotted to Illinois. J. V. Farwell will represent the government in acting with the clearing house in passing upon commercial paper offered as security for deposits.

Indiana will receive $1,150,000 to be distributed among Evansville, Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, and Iowa $1,000,000, deposited in Des Moines and Sioux City. Missouri will receive more of the fund than any other one state, $5,000,000 being deposited in St. Louis and Kansas City so far. Milwaukee will act as the depository for Wisconsin, getting $1,000,000. Western banks have asked that the money be deposited in September, October and November and the southern banks want it in August and September. All of the money must be returned to the treasury not later than next April.

UNITED STATES NATIONAL OF DENVER

United States National of Denver, with capital stock of $400,000 and surplus and profits amounting to $396,000, has a line of deposits of seven millions.

Gordon Jones, the president, is a prominent figure in the banking world. He was on the program at the Colorado convention this week and told in his usual interesting way of European country banking systems. Mr. Jones recently went to Europe as Colorado's representative for the purpose of studying European banking methods.

Other officers of the bank are as follows: A. C. Foster and Henry T. Rogers, vice-presidents; W. B. Morrison, cashier, and Jas. Ringold and E. C. Ellett, assistant cashiers.

POSTPONE "BLUE SKY" TEST

Detroit, August 26.—Because it has been found impossible to get the three United States judges required to hear the arguments on the case brought to test the "blue sky" law in Grand Rapids to-day, Attorney General Grant Fellows, representing the securities commission, has agreed to interpose no objections to a petition for an order which will be asked from United States Judge Clarence W. Sessions in Grand Rapids, restraining the securities commission from enforcing the law.

Pending the settlement of the case, the five companies which are parties to the petition will be allowed to continue in business in Michigan if the restraining order is granted. Judge Sessions informed the attorneys that he could not get the three United States judges to Grand Rapids this week, and that it would be necessary to put the case over until September 15th.

The issue of the restraining order will not affect the powers of the commission with respect to other firms selling securities in the state, but it is not expected that the securities commission will make any effort to enforce the law until the test case has been decided.

BONDS FIND READY SALE

St. Paul scored this week in the financial market when the sinking fund committee received a bid for $400,000 worth of 30-year 4½ per cent bonds at a premium.

The bid was received from Perry, Coffin & Burr, bond brokers, Boston. The price offered was 100.02 and accrued interest. While the premium is small, amounting to only $80, W. C. Handy, city comptroller, declares it significant in view of the fact that 4½ per cent bonds of New York, Baltimore and other cities have been going begging, while in other instances they have sold only at a discount.

Denver Stockyards Bank of Denver is the only bank located at the stockyards. With capital of $100,000 and surplus of half that sum, undivided profits amount to $70,000 and deposits to a million. Rival Candidates for Illinois Treasurership

C. H. FOX
CHICAGO

TAYLORVILLE

As the dates for the Illinois convention in Chicago approach, great interest is being manifested in the race for the treasurership. The two leading candidates for this honor are C. H. Fox, assistant secretary of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company, and Homer Brents, cashier of John B. Colegrove & Co., bankers at Taylorville.

Mr. Fox recently was elected an officer of his institution. He has traveled for the Chicago Savings about four years, during which time he has formed an extensive acquaintance.

Mr. Brents has occupied his position since the organization of the bank in 1908. It has had a steady growth during the past five years, being one of the strongest of the down state institutions and possessing resources of more than a million. Mr. Brents has been a potential factor in this development.

Both of the candidates are young men, full of energy and force, either of whom is well qualified to discharge the duties of treasurer satisfactorily. The association is to be congratulated on having such splendid material from which to choose.

RETURNS FROM VACATION

Addison Corneau, assistant cashier of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, has returned from a vacation spent at Harbor Point, Mich. Mr. Corneau reports cool weather and a fine time.

SHUMAN TO SELECT OWN AIDS

Washington, Sept. 4.—Senator Lewis stated that he had obtained an order from Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo authorizing Irving Shuman, whose appointment as assistant treasurer at Chicago is expected to be sent to the senate within a few days, to appoint his own assistants in the subtreasury office.

In issuing this order, which is in defiance of the civil service regulations, Secretary McAdoo stated that, inasmuch as Mr. Shuman will be responsible for all that is done in the Chicago office, he has a right to choose his own men for the positions.

It is thought that the plan for wholesale removals, which will affect thirteen employees holding responsible positions, may have some connection with the mysterious disappearance several years ago of $173,000.

COLONIAL TRUST'S NEW STOCK

The Colonial Trust and Savings received $640,000 Tuesday in payment of subscriptions to the 4,000 shares of new stock at $160 per share offered to the stockholders. The bank's capital is now $1,000,000.

NEW CHICAGO BANK

State Auditor Brady to-day issued a permit to Moses C. Schiff, Isaac and Herman Schiff to organize the Schiff State Savings Bank of Chicago, with a capital stock of $200,000.

A. H. Smith, president of the Warren County National, Belvidere, N. J., died last week of paralysis. He was seventy-six years old.

THE agricultural conference at Kansas City was partially overcome by the heat, and the attendance was cut down to a fewer than usual number of states.

B. F. HARRIS, the new chairman, has called another meeting of the conference for Boston on the same day of the Trust Company Section meeting.

THE conference has done a great work. It was called into existence by Joseph Chapman and fifteen states sent their agricultural committees to the first one three years ago.

LAST year forty states were represented, probably the high-water mark. The proceedings book has come to be a text book on agricultural and educational subjects.

REALLY the conference has revolutionized the schools of many states and has a place in the utility schedule of the A. B. A.

THIS year the general subject of education and farming will be given a whole session at the Boston convention at which Joseph Chapman, chairman of the A. B. A. committee, will preside.

JAMES J. HILL and George E. Vincent will be the principal speakers.

WE predict that no other session will draw such a large crowd.

THE conference passed a resolution to continue its identity and separate meetings but they may be held annually at the A. B. A. conventions as a matter of convenience and economy of time and money.

THE work of the conference has been done in many states. This week the agricultural committee of the Minnesota bankers, one from each of the eighty-four counties in the state, met at the state fair.

TWENTY-FIVE county demonstrators, part of the school system, met with them, and 125 agricultural teachers, who demonstrate two months each year.

SUCH an organization will need no new stimulus from the conference but other states are less forward.

HEADQUARTERS for the Illinois Bankers Association will be at the La Salle hotel. The out of town guests of the Boston-Chicago special will gather there, en route. Special plans are being made for them.

"IMPRESSED by Joseph Chapman's address on agricultural development and vocational education, delivered at the last convention of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association," says the New York Financier, "W. D. Husted, cashier of the Grange National of Mansfield, Pa., has had it printed in booklet form by the bank and distributed in the cause of education."

COMMENTING editorially the same paper says: "Spontaneous action of this sort is a real tribute. It ought to make Mr. Chapman feel proud of his part in the work whose success owes so much to his efforts."

DON. S. CULVER'S bank, the Merchants National, St. Paul, is temporarily in the Old Second National building. A new skyscraper home is being erected at Fourth and Robert streets.

MR. CULVER was out to the Montana convention and reports "amazing" crops en route and "great prosperity."

MICHIGAN test case on the new "Blue Sky" law has gone over to September 15th on account of absence of U. S. district judges.

HAVE you noted the growth of the Third National, St. Louis, under Mr. Watts? Deposits stand at thirty-three millions.

P W. GOEBEL, president of the Kansas City, Kan., Clearing House, says his state has had a splendid wheat yield, two fine alfalfa crops and can stand a shortage on corn. The state is prosperous.

A RECEIVER has been appointed for the Peoples Bank of Sycamore and the Bloomville Exchange Bank of Bloomville, Ohio, both of which are headed by George A. Klahr.

THE assistant attorney-general of the state of Washington has handed in a ruling that after 1915 all private banks of the state of Washington will pass out of existence or incorporate as state institutions.

THE prize boy corn farmer in Minnesota drew a scholarship in the agricultural college. He wants to change it for a business course since he has "decided to be a banker."

THIS is another nut for the agricultural committees to crack.

ON labor day the Western National, Pittsburgh, moved to its new location at Penn Avenue and Ninth Street, former location of the Second National.

A WRITER in Guaranty News advises that a bank and trust company officers should be supplied with numbered signature slips so that when they sign an important document they can make note of it on a slip and forward it to the audit company. Good dope.

AT this time, one and one-half years before its formal opening day, February 20, 1915, the Panama-Pacific International Exposition is more than two-thirds completed. This estimate is based upon the total amount of work necessary for the complete preparation of the exposition.

DUDLEY E. WATERS and Arthur T. Slaght, of the Grand Rapids National City Bank, will represent that institution at the Boston convention of the American Bankers Association.

JUDGE S. B. MONTGOMERY, vice-president of the Illinois Bankers Association, will remain at Wequetonsing, Mich., until called to Chicago by the state convention September 25-6. He has a compartment on the Chicago-Boston special.

SECRETARY P. W. HALL and Mrs. Hall of Iowa will be among the elect also.

HOMER A. MILLER of Des Moines liked it so well at Detroit that he's going on the big train.

J. F. SARTORI, Stoddard Jess and a dozen others will be on from California.

DENTON (Mont.) State Bank has been organized with $20,000 capital. This is a point on the new Milwaukee railroad between Lewistown and Great Falls. The officers elected are E. O. Hedrick president and Geo. D. Aune cashier.

MR. HEDRICK has been cashier of the State Bank of Moore, which is believed to be behind the new institution.

SEATTLE banks have signified their intention to renew their contributions to the publicity and promotion fund of the new Seattle Chamber of Commerce. The contributions amount to more than $6,000 for the year.

"YOU can plainly see," said the judge, a crusty old bachelor, looking at the setting sun through a diaphanous skirt, "that woman is a biped."

IT isn't easy to make Senator Owen believe that bankers ought to have all the new advantages that can be thought of, in the new currency law, while they retain all of the old.

IT has just leaked out that Missouri's amateur road builders were fed on fried chicken, sweet corn, egg-cornbread and buttermilk, prepared by the most beautiful woman in a state famous for womanly pulchritude.

THIS was inspiration, not mere grub. Such a combination would make a man an expert on telford, macadam, bed rock and top dressing between breakfast and noon dinner.

GOVERNOR DUNNE could get out an army of road builders if he would offer the Missouri bill-of-fare.

J. V. THOMPSON, a Uniontown, Pa., banker, has just sold 5,000 acres of coking coal land at $1,000 per acre. He retains the surface for farm purposes.

T. J. DAVIS, chairman of the A. B. A. executive council (the last if the new constitution is adopted) says the Boston convention will be the biggest ever. Interests in the currency legislation and the attractiveness of the convention city are the reasons assigned.

FOLLOWING is a little roundelay supposed to have been dropped by Burnham, the Lincoln, Neb., delegate to the currency conference. It reads:

THERE was an old fellow from Lincoln
Who kept his eyes constantly blincoln.
When asked what was wrong,
He said "Run along,
When I'm thincoln, I can't keep from wincoln."

BANKERS will be sorry to learn that Col. R. E. James of Easton, Pa., still is in the hospital following a second operation, and cannot hope to be at business for some time.

HE will make an effort to be at Boston to help adopt the new constitution. In his absence it is expected that Chas. H. McNider of Iowa will officiate as "floor leader."

MR. FRANCIS HENRY WILLIAMS, C. S.

Christian Science Practitioner

THE forty-five Illinois convicts at work building good roads and living in an unguarded, sanitary camp, is a feather in the cap of the principal agitator for the movement—President W. G. Edens of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association.

G. W. SMITH, cashier of the Corner Stone Bank at South West City, Mo., was married this week to Mrs. Jesse Jumbrunnen of Hamilton. Mr. Smith is prominent in politics as well as in banking.

NOW that Chapman has brought the farm and school improvement idea up to the point where it is a national movement, there is still an opening for B. F. Harris who has succeeded him at the head of the "States Conference."

HARRIS can make it a section—Educational and Agricultural—of the American Bankers Association. It still can have its independent conferences just as the chapters do, but it can do great and lasting good to the best advantage only as a section of the A. B. A.

POSSIBLY it could be a commission—as the currency body is—but as a section of the powerful A. B. A. it could attain a power and influence in legislation both state and national not otherwise obtainable.

PRESIDENT WM. A. HEATH of the Chicago Bankers Club has exercised a clever bit of diplomacy in landing Chairman Carter Glass as the speaker for the first meeting of the coming season.

ORDINARILY this meeting would come the evening of October 11th, but that date falling in the week of the Boston convention, the date will be fixed for October 18th or 25th, most likely.

THERE will be a record breaking attendance to hear the able chairman of the house committee on banking and currency, joint sponsor for the administration measure.

THE Minnesota proceedings book is one of the handsomest of the 1913 crop, which is some distinction. A beautiful photogravure of Duluth harbor adorns the cover, Duluth being the convention city.

THE portrait work throughout is of the very best. Secretary Richards is to be congratulated.

GUARANTY TRUST of New York sends out a model bond folder entitled "Investments." Copies on request.

A MAN who spent a few weeks in Mason City, Iowa, tells us that President C. H. McNider is down to his desk at the First National very early on Monday mornings.

"FIRST thing he does," said he, "is to open up his copy of THE CHICAGO BANKER," which, Mr. McNider says, "gives both pleasure and benefit."

WE are reminded in the midst of the "Perry Victory" celebrations that Charles William Burrows, the Cleveland publisher, paved the way.

BACK in 1910 Mr. Burrows lectured before the "Sons of the Revolution" in New York, with illustrations by lantern slides, on Perry doings.

HE spoke on the same and other revolutionary subjects before the New York Historical Society. The lectures were delivered in other cities also.

MR. BURROWS has in process of publication the finest history of the United States ever attempted. Eight or ten profusely illustrated volumes already are out. It hasn't a rival.

CHAIRMAN B. F. HARRIS of the educational committee is collecting information from members of the Illinois Bankers Association on farm credit subjects, in preparation for the discussions which will follow the introduction of the subject in congress as planned by President Wilson.

AS president of the conference which recently met in Kansas City Mr. Harris has asked all state associations to send out a list of questions copying or closely following his plan in Illinois so that the answers can be tabulated in an effective way.

PRESIDENT HARRIS says "the conference is to be perpetuated" and he says it as if he meant it.

HARRY P. STIMPSON, manager of the Hotel Cumberland, was formerly a banker in the West and he "looks after bankers" when they come to him as guests in a warmly personal way.

HIS hotel is a strictly modern—on Broadway—on the very edge of the theatrical zone, the farthest of thirty of them not being ten minutes' walk distant. Give him a call for old times account.

CHICAGO directory census gives 2,388,500 population, a gain for the year of 68,000. She is the fourth largest city in the world.

F. O. WATTS, president of the Third National, St. Louis, was in Chicago this week calling on friends. He will be at the Boston convention and bring his golf bag along.

M. R. WATTS for years has been in a four-some at the bankers tournaments which won all the cups. They were Watts, Fuller, Cutler and Barnett, recently succeeded by Patch of Detroit.

AT Detroit this quartette took all the cups they could carry. Mr. Patch modestly declined to "win at home" and set a high mark on golf etiquette.

M. R. WATTS was going to Harbor Springs, up in Michigan, with one of his directors, who has a fine place right next to that of J. B. Forgan.

HE will go East a week in advance and tour to Boston from New York with L. E. Pierson, who always is thinking up nice things to do for his friends. Can you beat him?

JOHN BURNHAM & CO. will send on request the "Hand Book of the Banks" issued five times per year and containing all the statements of the Chicago banks.

COL. J. J. SULLIVAN of Cleveland will give a complimentary dinner to the ex-presidents of the Ohio Bankers Association at the Union Club, on Wednesday evening, September 10th. The colonel when he is at the helm steers straight to a good time.

THE Annual Business Show will be on at the Coliseum all of next week. Two of the most interesting booths will be those of the Rapid Addressing Machine Company and the Burroughs Adding Machine Company.

LAKE AND STATE STREET TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK is just about ready to open for business at the corner designated in the title line.

VAULTS have been put in place and two street entrances arranged and the entire interior renewed in a very attractive way.

THE capital of $250,000 and a surplus of $50,000 are in the keeping of the Continental and Commercial National under the mentorship of Ralph Van Vechten, vice-president.

EDWARD S. GOIT of that bank will be the cashier of the Lake and State institution. He is an able and experienced banker and "placed" all of the stock not taken by the principals where it would bring business and prestige.

MAGNATE FOWLER of the Gypsum crowd will be the president and the directors are hand-picked and of rare strength and character.

M. R. GOIT, who will be at the steering wheel, has come to his present position through splendid training in the Bankers', Commercial and Continental-Commercial National banks.

HE was early in the chapter movement and filled all the important chairs in the big Chicago organization, including the presidency.

ALMOST every kind of business will be represented on the board, from Almer Coe, optician and neighbor to the new bank, to railroading and contracting. The new bank ought to be a hummer.

IT ought to be open before the coming state convention which will be three whole days in Chicago, September 24th, 25th and 26th.

U. S. SUBTREASURER SHUMAN is to name all of his thirteen assistants in the Chicago office. McAdoo hopes in that way to get rid of all traces of that $173,000 mystery of a few years back.

THE board of directors of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York has declared a quarterly dividend of six per cent and an extra dividend of two per cent on the capital stock of the company, payable September 30, 1913, to stockholders of record at the close of business September 24th.

THE National City Bank of Chicago says in its September letter that "The action of the treasury in accepting commercial paper as security for public deposits has been most ingenious, and must be judged with reference to its ultimate bearing upon the relations of the United States treasury with the banks. High grade paper which receives the approval of well known bankers in the leading clearing house cities affords ample protection for the government."

THE regular annual meeting of the Illinois Council will be held in the college room at the LaSalle, September 24th. Col. J. S. Aisthorpe, the chairman, hopes for a full, prompt attendance.

THE group and council dinner on Wednesday evening, September 24th—a combination event—ought to be the biggest thing of the kind ever attempted.

C. N. STEVENS, J. M. Hurst and Frank C. Newhall will be the "gentlemanly" attendants upon the guests and at intervals will "manage" any part of it that flounders about.

WE have had numerous requests for an interpretation of the line in the Wednesday dinner announcement which reads: "A number of the more prominent Chicago bankers will join the visitors at dinner."

PRESIDENT JOHN D. PHILLIPS and his able dinner committee assure that all are welcome—the more the merrier. "Prominence" cuts no figure except in the careless statement.

"MISSOURI and Kansas Bankers Special" is the title line for a neat itinerary booklet issued by Secretary W. W. Bowman of Kansas.

THIS train will leave Kansas City September 30th, using Rock Island, Lake Shore, N. Y. Central, Canadian Pacific and Boston & Maine.

IT is a sight-seeing trip with great attractions. The Western bankers will be in Chicago from 11 A. M. to 5 P. M. on Wednesday, October 1st. The following day they will spend at Niagara Falls, and they will be over night in Montreal.

BOWMAN assures us that all bankers are welcome "going or coming."

JOHN FLETCHER, Wm. A. Heath and Nelson N. Lampert are the theatrical censors named to select proper shows for the visiting Illinois bankers.

SNELSON CHESNEY, western representative of the Liberty National, New York, has joined the Chicago-Boston Special. His headquarters are Waldheim building, Kansas City.

FESTUS J. WADE being asked in Washington "which was right, Forgan, who said the new currency bill meant contraction, or Dawes, who said it meant expansion?" testified, so the dispatches report, "they are both mistaken."

Bankers Appear Before Senate Committee

Chicago committee presents recommendations of A. B. A. conference. Bankers make strong plea for modification of some of currency bill provisions

The committee of bankers selected by the Chicago conference to urge upon congress certain changes in the currency bill appeared before the senate committee on Tuesday of this week. Those making up the committee were James B. Forgan, George M. Reynolds, Festus J. Wade, Joseph Chapman, Sol Wexler and E. J. Hill.

The meeting Tuesday lasted three hours and only two members of the committee were heard.

Mr. Forgan, in opening the discussion, said the bankers come into close relation with three important classes whose interests it is their business to study and to harmonize on an equitable basis.

"These are," he continued, "the banks' stockholders, who supply the capital; the thrifty members of the community who supply the bank deposits, and the commercial, industrial and agricultural borrowers, whose business and prosperity depend largely on the credits granted them by the banks. The general prosperity of the country depends on the maintenance of proper relations between these classes and the banks. Bankers would be shortsighted if they should approach the study of banking and currency legislation with purely selfish motives.

"We represent the interests of all on whose patronage the banks rely for success, and especially the interests of the innumerable hosts of thrifty citizens who manifest their confidence in the banks by trusting them with deposits aggregating more than $20,000,000,000."

Cash Reserves Big Problem

It was assigned to Mr. Forgan to present the first change suggested by the Chicago conference which affects the number of federal reserve banks.

"For years the central object of banking reform in this country," Mr. Forgan said, "has been to find some practical method of mobilizing and controlling the lawful money reserves of the banks for the protection of them all, instead of relying on each to individually acquire, maintain, and protect its own.

"The great defect of our present system and the prime cause of our periodical disturbances is that each of the 25,000 banks now in existence, having no adequate means of protecting its reserves or of replenishing them when they fall below its legal requirements, must enter into competition with all the rest for an amount sufficient for its individual needs. Whenever a financial strain becomes general, a scramble among the banks for lawful money occurs which begets fear, and panic follows.

"The citizens of each community measure the strength of their local banks by the amount of cash they hold. The banks, realizing this, undertake to strengthen their position by increasing their cash holding, which, however, no one of them can accomplish without to the same extent decreasing the cash holding of some other bank. What is necessary is to establish a system whereby this public method of estimating the strength of the banks will be changed from measuring their solidity by the amount of lawful money they carry to basing their estimates on the facilities possessed by the bank for promptly getting either lawful money or a circulating medium that will for all practical purposes pass current in public estimation as being as good as lawful money.

"This, it is believed, could be accomplished by consolidating a sufficient amount of the lawful money reserves of the banks in a central institution which would deal directly with the banks. It would be necessary that such an institution should have the right to protect its own gold reserves and those of all the banks for which it acts by issuing a circulating medium protected by an adequate gold reserve and covered by the commercial assets it would acquire from the banks against the circulating medium with which it supplies them.

"That one institution, with a sufficient number of branches scattered over the country, would more effectually perform these functions than a greater number seems to us an inevitable conclusion.

Would Divide Regional Reserves

"It would be practical to meet the requirements of the various districts into which the country is divided through properly equipped branches even more efficiently than they could be met through separate regional institutions. The establishing of a number of such institutions would divide the consolidated cash reserves of the banks into as many different ownerships as there are separate institutions.

"As no individual bank can now increase its gold or lawful money without to the same extent decreasing the gold or lawful money of some other bank, so would these regional institutions. No one of them could strengthen its cash reserve without drawing them from and depleting to the same extent the reserves of another.

"On the other hand, one central institution with branches could distribute the gold or lawful money reserves over the country as circumstances might call for without change of ownership. Chicago could be supplied with money for New York without publicly attracting attention to the fact that New York reserves had been decreased and Chicago's increased by the transaction.

Regional Banks as Rivals

"The published statement of the one institution would simply show that it owned so much more gold in Chicago and so much less in New York, while its percentage of cash on hand to total liabilities would not necessarily be changed at all. This would not be the case if the Chicago institution were entirely separate and distinct from the New York institution.

"In time of financial stress, when each regional institution would be husbanding its resources for the benefit of its own constituents, an undesirable and awkward situation might be produced. Such a condition would be intensified in direct ratio to the number of regional institutions established.

"A practical reason why it would be wiser to start with not more than five federal reserve banks is that the reserve bank organization committee might find it difficult if not impossible to comply with the requirements that it should organize not less than twelve. It might fairly be assumed that few if any state banking institutions would immediately subscribe for their proportionate amount of the capital stock of the federal reserve banks and contribute their quota of the reserve deposits."

Need for Great Capital

Mr. Forgan contended that in the larger districts much more than the minimum capital of $5,000,000 for each of the twelve federal reserve banks would be necessary.

On the geographical division of the country adopted in the comptroller's statement in June last, disclosing what would be the regional contributions on account of capital, Mr. Forgan contended that the federal reserve banks could not be capitalized for less than the following minimum amounts: New York, $25,000,000; Chicago, $20,000,000; St. Louis, $15,000,000; San Francisco, $10,000,000; New Orleans, $10,000,000; Philadelphia, $10,000,000; Boston, $10,000,000, and five others in different parts of the country at $5,000,000 each, making a total of $105,000,000.

This would require, he said, $20,000,000 more than would be provided if every existing national bank should become a subscriber.

Speaking in regard to a central bank, Sol Wexler of New Orleans said:

"If you have one central bank association," he observed, "which would be able to mobilize all the reserves it would have the greatest gold reserve in the world. We would have the strongest banking power in the world. In ten years France and England would be insignificant in comparison to us, but if you scatter this among twelve institutions you are bound to have competition among them and each will be comparatively insignificant.

"I am in favor of a government controlled bank," Mr. Wexler added, "but I believe the bankers should have representations on the board of control."

Mr. Wexler gave the following illustration of his contention that it would be much safer to have one central reserve bank instead of twelve regional reserve banks.

"The Minneapolis reserve bank might be building up a reserve in order to make loans to handle the shipment of wheat and at the same time the reserve funds of the New Orleans reserve bank may be depleted, making loans to move cotton. In that case there would be danger of discrimination against the Minneapolis bank to help the New Orleans bank."

An unsuccessful effort was made on Wednesday by republican members of the house committee to have new hearings started there. The bill will be reported to the house next Monday morning by Chairman Glass.

Wednesday's proceedings before the senate committee were interrupted frequently by a banker not a member of the Chicago committee. This was John T. M. Johnston, president of the National Reserve Bank of Kansas City who said the central bank idea advocated by many of the bankers tends to "centralization of power." He favors the administration plan as a "decentralization of power."

Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis, the chief representative of the bankers' conference before the committee, said the national banks of the country ought not to be compelled to surrender one-tenth of their capital and one-half of their reserves to the proposed governmental system, if they were to be denied representation on the federal reserve board that will control the entire banking system.

Mr. Wade insisted that the new plan would give national banks few advantages that they would not enjoy under state bank charters, and that many of them would retire to the state bank field.

Advice on Reserve Bank Stock

The witness said the banks did not care to own the stock of the regional reserve banks and would be willing that it should go into the hands of private subscribers; but he did not believe such a plan could be worked out without putting the government into the general banking business.

"Throw the doors open to anybody who wants to own this stock," he said emphatically, "and the banks will offer no objections. We do not want it; we will take it if you don't force us to, and make the plan attractive enough; but no banker would care whether he got the stock or whether it went to the public."

The refusal of only 10 per cent of the national banks in the different sections of the country to join the proposed system would make it impossible to secure the necessary $5,000,000 capital for regional reserve banks in the middle states and in the Pacific coast states, said Mr. Wade. He added, however, that he had figured out the larger national banks as among the number that might withdraw from national bank charters.

Predicts Plan Will Fail

"It is my opinion," he said, "that if the present bill would pass to-day, it would be inoperative to-morrow. You have discouraged, by its force provisions, the men who have built national banking up to its present development. If you attempt to put this bill through, calling for the organization of twelve reserve banks each with a minimum capital of $5,000,000 and confine the subscriptions to stock to national banks, it is our judgment that the plan will be unsuccessful."

Mr. Wade indorsed a suggestion made by Senator Weeks, a republican member of the senate committee, for the selection of a list of fifty or more men by the banks, from which list the president might appoint the four members he selects to serve on the federal reserve board.

"What we want is banking experience, credit experience, and financial wisdom on that board," he said. "We dare not trust the entire control of the financial structure of the country to cabinet officers, whose time is already occupied, from dawn to dark with matters of routine administration of their departments."

Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska showed a disposition to oppose the enactment of currency legislation at this session of congress.

At the bankers' hearing Senator Reed of Missouri, asked many leading questions, which enabled Sol Wexler to explain the actual workings of a genuine central bank. Senator Reed insisted on proceeding without reference to the administration currency bill, and the result was a liberal education for the senate committee on the fundamentals of the present currency system and the system opposed by the bankers as a substitute. In fact, so friendly was the questioning that many of the bankers expressed the hope that the senators were making inquiries in as good faith as the bankers were answering them.

In reply to an inquiry from Senator Reed, Mr. Wexler opened his series of answers by declaring emphatically that the United States has the poorest banking system in the world. He ascribed this to a lack of flexibility in the circulation medium, an inability to rediscount forms of credit, and to the fact that the reserves of the country are held by the 25,000 banks of the country "in as many little piles instead of in one central pile."

Senator Reed proceeded to require Mr. Wexler to analyze in detail his criticism of the present currency system. In reply Mr. Wexler pointed out that it was impossible to expand the currency by any plan based on the sale of bonds, and that the government could not afford to pay an interest rate which would make such a basis for circulation attractive enough to meet the real necessities of the situation; that what the banks really desired was a plan of transferring credits represented by customers' notes, either into bank notes,

CHICAGO MONEY SITUATION

Money at the local banks continues to rule steady at a minimum rate of 6 per cent. Sentiment shows an easy tendency, and it is probable but for the presumed advisability of holding business at normal there might be a shading of the minimum.

Events, however, have so shaped themselves that in the minds of bankers it is desirable to wait a while longer before yielding to demands which would readily be made should there appear relaxation in the attitude of the bankers toward the autumn money situation. It may not be agreeable to interests which would like to borrow at this time for purposes of speculation or expansion, but it still appears that the general good is paramount to that of a few, and a steady 6 per cent market is preferable to a present lower one which might be expected to rise to a higher one later on.

With the uncertainties of currency legislation and the uncertainty as to the immediate results following tariff legislation, the status quo appears desirable as a condition of insurance and safety.

COUNTRY LIFE CONFERENCE

At the country life conference held in De Kalb this week, W. G. Edens of the Central Trust, Chicago, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, in speaking of the use of convict labor for road improvement, said:

"The action of the new warden at Joliet in putting forty-five convicts to work on the public highways in citizen's garb and on the honor system pleases me greatly." Work in the open air will improve the health and the hope for the future of the convicts and will create in them a desire for honorable labor when they have finished their prison terms.

"I spent three days recently at the state penitentiary of Colorado and found the honor system working successfully there. Under the competition of convict labor in other forms of industry a convict may be in competition with his own wife or he may be making brooms in competition with the blind, but in working on the road he is benefiting the state and is not a competitor in legitimate industry. Less than 1 per cent of the convicts try to break away from prison when thus employed, and 80 per cent of them go into legitimate pursuits when released."

A large number of bankers were present at the meeting. Others who were on the program were S. E. Bradt of DeKalb, member of the state highway commission and chairman of the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers Association, A. N. Johnson, state engineer, and the Hon. Homer J. Tice, author of the present road law.

One Cent Letter Postage—Is it Feasible and Desirable

By James J. Britt, former third assistant postmaster-

The postal establishment of the United States is the largest, the most widely distributed, and the most beneficent single governmental agency in the world, requiring an army of more than 500,000 employees, a yearly expenditure of more than a quarter of a billion of dollars, and an annual travel, for the carriage of the mails, by the various modes of conveyance, of more than 965,000,000 miles. It is preeminently the one arm of our government that reaches every nook and corner of the republic, and touches the hearth-stone of every American home.

Because of the great volume of postal business transacted and the tremendous number of pieces of mail-matter handled, our post-office department has not, as yet, found it practicable regularly to count, weigh, and record the number of pieces of mail of the various classes received, transported, and delivered, but is compelled to rely upon occasional countings and weighings, made for limited periods of time, from the ratios and extensions of which approximate estimates are made of the number of pieces carried annually, their weight, classification, cost of carriage and other data.

The postal statistics for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, are not yet available, and I shall therefore base my comparisons and estimates upon the returns for the fiscal year 1912.

The total audited postal revenues for the year 1912, from all sources, were $246,744,015.88, while the total audited expenditures were $248,525,450.08, an excess of expenditures over receipts of $1,781,434.20. For the previous year, 1911, the receipts were $237,879,825.60 and the expenditures $237,648,926.68, an excess of revenue over expenditure of $230,896.72. From these figures it will be seen that the postoffice department is substantially on a self-sustaining basis, which, as I shall hereafter contend, is the best and wisest postal policy.

Upon a careful estimate there were carried in the mails during the year approximately 16,863,000,000 pieces of domestic mail, weighing 1,607,000,000 pounds, an average of 1.5

ounces per piece, or 10.5 pieces to the pound, 175 pieces per capita, yielding a postage-paid revenue of $225,269,445.08, or $2.34 per capita.

Under our present postal laws mail-matter is divided into four classes, namely, first-class matter, that is, letters, postal-cards, and other sealed matter, including, in treatment, free legislative and official mail-matter; second-class matter, or all newspapers and periodicals published as frequently as four times a year and possessing certain statutory requisites; third-class matter, or books, pamphlets, and other printed matter; and fourth-class matter, including all mailable matter not included in the first, second or third classes, or what is now known as parcel-post matter.

During the year there were transported and delivered 9,159,648,117 pieces of first-class mail, at an average of .3, or an ounce per piece, aggregating 203,115,365 pounds, or 13 per cent of the weight of all mail-matter, yielding a revenue of $168,636,706.59, or 75 per cent of the income derived from the four classes of postage-paying mail-matter.

There were carried and delivered 4,934,002,777 pieces of second-class mail, at an average of 3.3 ounces per piece, aggregating 1,035,033,555 pounds, or 67 per cent of all mail-matter, yielding $11,556,522.53, or only 5 per cent of the revenues arising from postage on domestic mail-matter.

Of books, pamphlets and circulars there was carried 2,219,355,307 pieces, at an average of 1.6 ounces per piece, aggregating 231,734,225 pounds, or 15 per cent of the total of mail-matter, yielding $32,551,454.81, or 15 per cent of the revenue derived from revenue-producing domestic mail-matter.

Of merchandise there were carried 239,982,313 pieces, at an average of 5 ounces per piece, aggregating 75,943,770 pounds, or 5 per cent of the whole, yielding $12,524,981.15, or 5 per cent of the total stamp-paid revenue.

Of frank and official mail there were carried 310,437,878 pieces, being the congressional and official matter carried free of postage in the course of the administration of the legislative, executive and judicial branches of the government, averaging 3 ounces per piece, 3.2 pieces per capita, aggregating 61,415,335 pounds, or 3.8 per cent of the total domestic mail-matter carried, and upon which no postage whatever was paid, but representing a service for which private persons would have paid approximately $20,000,000 in postage.

As previously stated, these figures, except as to mailings of second-class matter at the cent-a-pound rate and free-in-the-county, are estimates based upon ratios and extensions of occasional countings and weighings for periods of time, and only approximate correctness is claimed for them.

While it is true that most of the nations of the world are deriving a surplus revenue from their postal establishments, making them a source or general income, particularly in continental European countries, it is nevertheless the consensus of the best American opinion that for us the only safe and sound policy is that our postal institution shall be entirely self-sustaining; that its credits and debits shall at all times be either in actual or approximate balance, with neither a deficit nor a surplus. Our people are economically and financially too business-like to be content with a deficit, and, in my judgment, any appreciable surplus should be returned to them either by way of cheaper postage rates or in improved mail facilities. A self-supporting policy is not only sound as a business proposition, but is profitable as a national stimulus and as a means of public information, giving the people a clearer insight into, and a fuller knowledge of, the workings of their postal system, experience proving that when the service is fully paid for, and paid for when rendered, and just and honest returns are demanded, there is observed a more watchful care over the institu-

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

Banker-farmers will be interested in reading the contents of a new law passed by the last Illinois legislature which seeks to help county associations in maintaining the services of a county soil expert. The law provides for an annual appropriation by county boards in the various counties for the encouragement of agriculture. Many counties which have heretofore found it difficult to employ a county soil expert will now be greatly aided. Illinois farmers are in no way discouraged this year in spite of very adverse weather conditions and are proceeding entirely upon the assumption that "a good man cannot be kept down" and apply the same proverb to the good soil as well. Land values remain high and many good judges believe that a half crop or more of corn will yet be husked, which, with the prevailing high prices, will make good money for thousands of farmers and landowners, with a corresponding good business for bankers and business men generally. General business remains brisk, bankers have experienced one of the busiest summers in many years and a far more optimistic feeling prevails than did six weeks or a month ago. The text of the law follows:

"Be it enacted by the people of the state of Illinois, represented in general assembly: That the county boards of several counties of this state are hereby authorized and empowered to appropriate to and for the use of county soil and crop improvement associations organized for the improvement of general agricultural conditions, a sum not to exceed five thousand dollars ($5,000) per annum, which is hereby declared to be for county purposes and to be paid to the treasurer of such associations as soon as the annual taxes shall have been collected in like manner, as all other expenditures are authorized and expended by the said boards."

Citizens National of Princeton

Among the new bank buildings for 1914 will probably be the new structure of the Citizens National of Princeton. Cashier A. H. Ferris reports that the directors are considering building a new bank building but have so far made no definite plans whatever. The Citizens of Princeton is one of the best banks in that part of the state, and should the new building be erected it will be one of the best appointed and equipped in Illinois. The bank was established in 1879 and has capital and surplus of $190,000. Douglas Moseley is the president. The correspondents are the National City of New York and the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago.

University Urges Use of Silo

The agricultural college of the University of Illinois has been for a number of years urging the greater use by farmers of silos. A silo on a farm is considered as a great asset and with more dairy and beef cattle and more hogs upon the average Illinois farm the fertility of the farms can be maintained far better than in simple corn and oats rotation. The University has built a number of silos and builds them upon different plans so that various materials in construction may be tested. The University builds silos in the center of its gigantic round barns and urges upon the farmers of the state to come to Urbana to see for themselves the value of the silo upon the average Illinois farm.

L. V. Jurgensmeyer of Homer, southeast of Urbana, has this summer erected upon his farm one of the largest, if not the largest, silo in the Middle West. The silo is sixty-two feet in height and is sixteen feet in diameter with eight-inch walls. When filled to the top it will contain enough fodder to feed five carloads of cattle. "The man who farms forty acres of corn and allows the fodder to go to waste loses," says Mr. Jurgensmeyer, "on the basis of last year's crop, $156 annually." He believes that the farmers of Illinois are losing annually almost $30,000,000 because they do not save corn fodder and feed it to cattle. Banker-farmers interested in silos should write to the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, Urbana, for detailed information upon this highly important subject and should distribute such information among their farmer customers.

Clinton Banks

Clinton, county seat of DeWitt county, is in the midst of the rich black land of the corn belt and is one of the best cities of the 7,000 class in the state. It is also an important industrial center, as the Illinois Central maintains important railroad shops there.

The John Warner Bank is one of the old banks in central Illinois, having been established as a private bank in 1867. It was incorporated as a state bank in 1911. Its founder was the late Dr. John Warner, who had practiced medicine in DeWitt county preceding and during the Civil War, when country physicians were forced to do much hard horseback riding over almost impassable roads. He naturally saw the future of Illinois land, and, establishing a bank in Clinton, began to buy land. Dr. Warner conducted his bank for many years as a private institution, it being for thirty-five years one of the old substantial private banks of the state. His son,

A Magazine of Unusual Value to Investors

THE Investors' Magazine, published by this House, has been greatly increased in size and is now issued monthly instead of semi-monthly as heretofore. In spite of the fact that no subscription fee is asked for the magazine we have steadfastly endeavored to make each issue of genuine interest and permanent value to every conservative investor. The increased size of the publication in its new form provides for the addition of new departments and a multiplication of the peculiarly interesting and informative features which have characterized it in the past. Every issue will contain one or more carefully prepared articles by men of prominence in the commercial or financial field, discussing those phases of the investment question upon which they are best qualified to speak with authority. We have also prepared a new Booklet which describes in detail the merits of the First Mortgage Bonds we sell, in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000, netting the investor, 5½ to 6 per cent. The soundness of these securities, together with the care with which we safeguard our clients is best shown by the fact that no investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us since this House was founded thirty-one years ago. We will be pleased to add the names of actual investors to our mailing list without any charge or obligation whatever.

Vespasian Warner, was formerly congressman from the nineteenth Illinois district, preceding William B. McKinley, and was later United States commissioner of pensions. He is now president of the bank and manager of the Warner estate. J. Q. Lewis is the cashier. John Warner, son of Vespasian Warner, is assistant cashier. Another son, Clifton Moore Warner, is manager of the estate of his grandfather, the late Clifton Moore, and manages it from an office in the John Warner Bank building. Both the Warner and the Moore estates are worth over one million dollars each. The correspondents of the bank are Kountze Bros., of New York, Corn Exchange National of Chicago and the National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis.

The DeWitt County National was established in Clinton in 1872. It represents the Snell interests and Richard Snell is the president. G. K. Ingham, a prominent attorney of Clinton, is vice-president. J. R. Bosserman is the cashier and J. E. Anger is assistant cashier. The Farmers Loan and Trust Company, with G. K. Ingham president, and W. J. Carter cashier, is managed in close alliance with the DeWitt County National. The latter's correspondents are the Hanover National of New York, First National of Chicago and the Corn Belt Bank of Bloomington. The officers of the DeWitt County National are also interested in private banks in adjacent towns.

The State Bank of Clinton was established in 1892. This bank has recently overhauled its bank building with the result that it has one of the best banking rooms in the state, finished in white marble and thoroughly up-to-date in every respect. George B. Marvel is the president, J. M. Wilcox vice-president, George G. Argo, cashier, and W. R. Parker, assistant cashier. The correspondents are the National City of New York, Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings of Chicago, Peoples Bank of Bloomington and the National Bank of Decatur.

The banks of Clinton are all well housed, white marble fixtures being the finish in all of them. They are all prosperous and are doing satisfactory lines of business.

Illinois Notes

Loopeston friends of John L. Hamilton tendered a banquet in his honor on account of his removal from that city to Columbus, Ohio, where he becomes president of the American Casualty Company. Mr. Hamilton has served as president of the Illinois Bankers Association and of the American Bankers Association.

Two weeks ago we reported heavy yields of alfalfa on the farm of the University of Illinois which produced at three cuttings five tons to the acre. This yield has been equalled on the state experimental ground at William and Vashti College at Aledo. Many other localities report heavy yields of alfalfa and farmers over the state are becoming interested in its culture.

William B. McKinley, founder and president of the Illinois Traction System, former congressman and prominent business man, left Tuesday for a trip around the world. He will go West to Seattle and thence to Japan and home through Europe. Mr. McKinley was tendered a banquet at Peoria by officers of the Illinois Traction System, which was attended by many business and professional men.

Edgar A. Strause, president of the State Trust and Savings of Peoria, is one of the many business men of that city who have been good-naturedly cartooned by the Peoria Daily Star. His various business and social activities are summarized in eight lines of "poetry" below the cartoon, which indicates the popularity of the Peoria banker.

Bankers interested in the good roads improvement advocated by the various state associations, will be interested in reading of the organized fight against the Tice good roads law recently passed by the legislature. Bloomington lawyers have completed a bill which they will file to test the constitutionality of the Tice bill. Central Illinois farmers who oppose the Tice law will ask for a writ of mandamus restraining the state treasurer from paying any money out of the automobile fund to counties making application for state aid. While there is wide demand for better roads in Illinois it is a fact that many farmers and landowners are yet bitterly opposed to any such program.

The Illinois Traction System has increased its profits for the first six months of 1913 $172,000, or at the rate of $350,000 for the entire year. It is said that the dividend upon the common stock, which has been but three per cent, may be raised to either four or five per cent. The I. T. S. has become a member of the Illinois Freight Committee which issues all interline rates within the state and which has been limited heretofore to steam roads exclusively. It is said that the McKinley lines are rapidly equalling the steam roads in handling freight as well as passenger business.

Bloomington banks are doing some excellent publicity work in the papers of that city, the advertisements being especially attractive in form and content and are arranged upon one page of the paper in double column form. The banks using this space are the First National, State National and State Trust and Savings, McLean County Bank, Peoples Bank and the Illinois Savings and Trust Company.

In addition to the Calhoun county banks mentioned last week there are also two banks in Hamburg and Kampsville, both established in 1907, the Bank of Richwoods in Batchtown, established in 1908, and the bank in Brussels, which was opened in 1909. All of the five banks in Calhoun county are members of the Illinois Bankers Association and not all counties in the state can equal the record of this live county.

CHICAGO VISITORS

N. C. Gindorf, cashier of the German Trust and Savings of Dubuque, Iowa, visited Chicago Tuesday. He reports business conditions in his territory as very satisfactory. R. Jewett Jones, with Smith, Moore & Company of St. Louis, investment bonds, passed through the city Monday on his way home from a vacation spent in northern Michigan. Mr. Jones will return to Chicago for the Illinois Bankers convention to be held September 25-6.

PROMOTION FOR W. H. UNDERWOOD

J. W. Daly, passenger traffic manager of the New York Central lines, has announced the appointment of W. H. Underwood as one of his assistants. Mr. Underwood has been twenty-eight years in the service of various roads in the New York Central system. In 1885 he was ticket agent in an obscure New York station. He rose to general eastern passenger agent, then to assistant general passenger agent of the Michigan Central, located at Chicago, where he has "made good" in a very positive degree.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

At the close of an all day session in the Hotel Pfister, representatives of Wisconsin country national banks late Wednesday afternoon unanimously adopted resolutions urging congress to consider certain points of the pending currency legislation with particular bearing on the country bankers. The resolutions follow:

The country national banks of Wisconsin, by representatives assembled in Milwaukee this 3rd day of September, 1913, to consider the federal reserve bank act as amended to date, announce the following recommendations:

Whereas, A conference under the auspices of the currency committee of the American Bankers Association was recently held in Chicago, which conference failed to adopt suggestions made by country bankers to reduce federal reserve bank deposits required of country banks from 5 per cent to 1 per cent of their deposits; at the same time this conference recommended material reductions as to reserve city banks' reserve requirements, which recommendation has since been incorporated in the bill; further, such a reduction of reserves by the central reserve city banks is no burden to them as against a severe burden as placed upon the country banks, which the latter cannot afford to bear because their cash reserves are proportionately much smaller; and,

Whereas, The bill as drawn has many admirable features, yet we as country bankers believe several amendments are very essential. Therefore,

Resolved, That we urge upon congress the following essential principal changes, viz:

a. So amend the bill that country banks not in reserve cities be compelled to contribute not exceeding 2 per cent instead of 5 per cent of deposit liabilities for the reserves of federal reserve banks.

b. As section 27 of the bill (creating savings departments) provides for a segregation not only of securities covering the savings deposits but a segregation of capital—not less than $25,000—to an amount equal to 20 per cent of capital and surplus, and requiring investment of such demand deposits in long term securities, which we believe wrong in principle and not offering such security as is now offered savings depositors, we urge this section be eliminated from the bill.

c. That term of real estate loans be increased from one year to five years

d. That dividends allowed reserve bank stockholders be increased from 5 per cent to 6 per cent.

e. That the 40 per cent of excess earnings allotted to banks be divided among them on the basis of capital stock in reserve banks instead of on average deposits therein.

f. That banks be allowed same interest on deposits as is allowed upon government deposits.

The bankers effected temporary organization in the morning, electing A. J. Frame of Waukesha chairman of the meeting and George D. Bartlett secretary. Mr. Frame and E. M. Wing, La Crosse, explained the new currency bill and the sections particularly affecting country bankers. Mr. Frame headed the committee on resolutions and was assisted in drawing up the protest by W. F. Voss, Watertown; Ernest Perry, Fond du Lac; C. C. Brown, Kenosha, and John P. Shiells, Neenah.

The following state bankers were present: E. M. Wing, La Crosse; L. D. Russell, Medford; W. F. Voss, Watertown; J. G. Liver, Hartford; H. A. Moehlenpah, W. J. Paulsen, Clinton; J. W. Miller, Beaver Dam; A. J. Frame, Waukesha; G. H. Utz, Appleton; R. A. Christie, Berlin; A. H. Grout, Wausau; J. J. Jamieson, Shullsburg; Frank Pierce, Menomonie; John O'Brien, Darlington; John P. The meeting was called last week, the institutions signing the invitation including the Waukesha National, Waukesha; First National, Kenosha; First National, Janesville; First National, Fond du Lac; Old National, Oshkosh; First National, Berlin; Manufacturers National, Racine, and National Exchange, Waukesha. also calling the same percentage of deposits, notwithstanding the fact that the country banks hold small cash reserves, as compared with the reserve centers."

H. A. Moehlenpah, president of the state association, attended the meeting although he did not take part in the discussions. Next week, in company with association presidents of other western states, he will go to Washington to lay the views of the state bankers before the committee.

"I am inclined to favor the principal features of the administration plan," said Mr. Moehlenpah. "The country nationals are probably right in asking changes in the reserve requirements. But I believe the government should not only control the banking systems but the note issues as well. The plan must be compulsory to be successful. I think these are things which bankers will come to realize."

J. W. P. Lombard, president of the National Exchange Bank of Milwaukee, said that the loaning power of country banks is restricted by the bill in its present form. "There will be a shrinkage in the loaning power of the country banks of about $500,000,000 if the bill passes in its present form," said Mr. Lombard. "On the other hand there will be an increase of the loaning power of the central reserve banks of about $80,000,000."

Kasten Will Filed

Personal property amounting to $25,000, and realty scheduled at $15,000 is disposed of in the will of the late Frederick Kasten, vice-president of the Wisconsin National Bank, who died recently. All is left to his widow, Mrs. Jennie Kasten. The instrument was executed in August, 1902.

Wisconsin Notes

The first woman to mount to the top of the new First National bank building, Milwaukee's newest and tallest building, is Miss Elsie Richter, who climbed the scaffoldings Tuesday and took a photograph of the city hall from the dizzy heights.

Railroad capital to the amount of $1,750,000,000; earnings to the amount of $275,000,000, and 22,000 miles of track of four railway systems was represented at a house party given last Sunday by Frederick D. Underwood, president of the Erie railroad, at his summer home and birthplace, Wauwatosa. The guests were all long time friends and subordinates on the "Soo" lines when Mr. Underwood was general manager of the lines in the early eighties. The guests included Edmund Pennington, president of the Soo lines; Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio; F. C. Batchelder, president of the Chicago terminal; W. L. Martin, vice-president of the Soo lines; Charles F. Clement, treasurer of the Soo lines; George Huntington, general manager of the Soo lines; T. A. Fogine, mechanical superintendent of the Soo lines; William Schlafke, mechanical superintendent of the Erie railroad; James Burke, superintendent of roadway and bridges of the Erie road, and E. P. Ripley, president of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe.

George P. Miller, director of the First National Bank and member of the law firm of Miller, Mack & Fairchild, is a member of the new municipal sewerage commission, appointments for which were submitted by the mayor to the common council Monday afternoon. Mr. Miller has for many years been a prominent member of the Milwaukee bar. Aside from his law and banking interests he is president of the T. A. Chapman Company and the Columbia Construction Company.

Commissioner of Banking A. E. Kuolt has appointed J. H. Coe, formerly cashier of the Citizens Bank of Boyd, to be clerk in the state bank commissioner's department.

Three new banks were approved this week by the commissioner of banking. The Laona State Bank is capitalized for $10,000. The incorporators are B. F. Elliott, J. D. Kissinger, R. R. Quade and others.

After holding out for four weeks for a suitable vault in the quarters prepared for him in the new wing of the state capitol building, Banking Commissioner A. E. Kuolt capitulated to the capitol commission last week, when the wreckers commenced work on the south wall of the old wing, adjacent to his present office. A hurried consultation with the attorney-general convinced Mr. Kuolt that the wreckers were in earnest in their intentions and backed by the supreme power of the capitol commission. Then he returned and ordered the retreat of his forces across to the new wing, the transfer being finished by midnight. Mr. Kuolt's refusal to vacate his old office until others were furnished with vault room was based on the fact that he is under heavy bond for the safe-keeping of the records in his charge.

CONVICT LABOR SATISFACTORY

Georgia's road commissioner states that the prisoners employed on the highways are healthy, tractable and more than ordinarily contented and that their labor is satisfactory. Alabama's highway engineer reports that when properly managed convict labor on the roads is more effective than paid work, and the cost of thus using convicts is from forty to sixty-five cents a day. Georgia employs 5,000 convicts on the roads, and estimates the cost at about one-half that of paid labor. California adopted the system last year and is pleased with it. Colorado's convicts built 157 miles of mountain road in 1912 at a cost of thirty-two cents a day per man. In Illinois sixty-six convicts are kept at work in quarries and at crushing stone at a cost of fifty cents a day. (Illinois has just adopted a road law permitting the use of convict labor on the highways and it is expected that the results obtained will fully justify this feature of the law.) Kansas officials think the effect good on convicts. Louisiana built twenty-five miles of permanent roads last year with convicts and found the expense forty cents per man.

In Michigan the convicts prefer road work, and Minnesota considers stone crushing by convicts a success. Montana works 225 prisoners on the roads and thinks they are much benefited by the outdoor labor. North Carolina is another state that has gone into the system extensively. Its 2,300 convicts thus employed cost from forty-two cents to seventy-two cents a day each. Oregon makes a favorable report. Its 106 convict road workers cost fourteen dollars per month. Virginia's 735 convicts are kept busy on the roads at a cost of 34.3 cents a day per man. Washington is satisfied with convict labor in stone quarries. Cole county, Mo., has had from twenty to forty convicts at work on roads and the state highway engineer testifies that the work, at a daily cost of forty cents, is equal to that of free labor. The movement is growing. In every case the sanitary benefit to the men is stated to be marked and the discipline is easily enforced. This resource for getting good roads has become one of the most important. —The Oklahoman.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

Bank clearings in St. Louis during the past week have been large and show an increase over the corresponding period last year. The demand for money was of good proportions, while rates on call and time loans were steady at 6 to 6½ per cent. Commercial paper was in fair offerings and some of it was discounted at 6 to 6½ per cent.

Trade Conditions Good

General trade conditions throughout the United States are good and prospects for the future were seldom better than to-day, according to the monthly bulletin recently issued by the National Bank of Commerce in St. Louis. "The slight easing up of the money market has been due to several factors," the bulletin reads. "Strikes have reduced the output of minerals and as most concerns have been steadily adding to their cash reserves during the past few weeks, the country is in fairly good shape to handle the early crops. The terrific damage done the corn crop by drouth and the decline of cotton in the Southwest mean that less money will be required for handling the crops in these sections.

"Trade in general merchandising lines is picking up, while iron and steel are less active and an actually easy money market is not in prospect for several months. The business mortality for July showed a marked improvement as compared with the previous months or with the average for July for the last five years. Failures numbered 1,169 against 1,230 in July, 1912. Relative to crops, latest reports indicate a yield of 14,000,000 bales of cotton; 2,500,000,000 bushels of corn; 1,104,000,000 of oats; 744,000,000 of wheat; 900,000,000 of barley; 36,000,000 of rye; 339,000,000 of potatoes; 900,000,000 pounds of tobacco; 20,000,000 bushels of flaxseed; 64,000,000 tons of hay, and 27,000,000 bushels of rice, all of an estimated value of $4,755,000,000."

Ask Continental Trust End

A petition to dissolve the Continental Trust, which was incorporated with a capital of $50,- 000, was filed in the circuit court Tuesday, by J. D. DeBuchanne of Herculaneum, Mo., president of the company and five other stockholders and officers. The petition states the company obtained a charter May 16th, but because it failed to obtain promised business, the stockholders by a two-thirds majority voted, July 19th, to dissolve the corporation. The petition says the stockholders feared they would not be able to develop a profitable business. Mr. DeBuchanne owns 780 shares of the stock.

Mechanics-American Bank Letter

Praise for the helpful attitude of the Wilson administration toward business problems and belief that proper legislation on the subject currency reform will soon be obtained, figure prominently in the monthly financial letter of the Mechanics-American National. The crop damage, including admittedly serious injuries to corn, have been overestimated. "The loss has been large, but nothing approaching disaster," declares the letter. "It is also true that many of the loss estimates will be found to have been very greatly exaggerated. A good healthy business is reported by virtually all the large mercantile concerns of the city. Within the last few days there have been a great number of buyers in town, and their orders, while not abnormally heavy in any one line, are likely to show up a largely increased volume over this time last year.

"There is still a broad demand for money around 6 per cent. The banks of this territory will afford every assistance possible to the smaller institutions with which they do business, just as the banks of the other central reserve cities have done and will continue to do. After the tariff bill has been passed a quickening in general trade may be expected. A large number of manufacturers have pretty well arranged their affairs to meet the changed conditions which will be brought about by the enactment of the lowered schedules. It is fair to assume, therefore, that the actual enactment of a new law will not cause any great confusion in business circles after the reduced schedules actually take effect." The résumé declares that the unrest in Mexico doubtless has had a good deal of influence upon conditions in the United States, but that President Wilson has done all that he could do under the circumstances. The railroads of the United States are doing a profitable business with record earnings for the fiscal year, but with some roads expenses are increasing rapidly, so that the net return will not be large.

Begin Work on New Bank Building

Work on the erection of a three-story bank and office building to cost with the lot $100,000 has been begun by the Farmers and Merchants Trust. This institution opened for business in the fall of 1907 with a capital of $100,000 and has since earned and accumulated a surplus and undivided profits of $70,000. Its deposits exceed $1,000,000. J. H. Belz is president; F. W. Clemens, vice-president; Frank J. Wiget, vice-president and counsel; H. R. Rehme, secretary and treasurer, and Adolph Etling, assistant secretary and treasurer.

The financing of the cattle industry is becoming a question of increasing importance to the bankers of the great corn belt.

Our experience of more than thirty years, our assets of more than six million dollars, and our location at one of the largest markets in the United States especially equips us for satisfactorily handling the accounts of those interested in the proposition.

Mrs. Protopski had been acting as banker for a number of her fellow countrymen in the Russian district in East St. Louis. Several days before her arrest she reported to the police that she had been robbed. The day before her arrest one of the men who had entrusted his savings to her swore out a warrant charging her with embezzlement. He said that money was deposited in a St. Louis bank after the reported robbery.

Outlook is Bright

There has been nothing unusual in the situation in Missouri in spite of the continued dry weather and unfavorable outlook for farmers, according to Springfield, Mo., bankers, who say that there has been no falling off of payments of interest and principal on farm mortgages and farm loans have been cared for as in the best years of the last decade. "Some farmers may be worked up a bit but there was a bumper wheat crop, a fairly good corn yield and a 'fighting chance' to raise rough feed, so one would think that conditions are not bad," said one banker. "In fact, previous good farm years have helped the farmers to go through this season and right now you could not notice any bad effects, at all, except from the talk one hears about the dry weather. There certainly is nothing in our line of business to indicate very poor conditions."

The crop shortage this year was not nearly so serious as that of 1901 and the drouth will not be felt like the 1901 dry spell. "Farmers have more money than anybody and are in good shape," said H. B. McDaniel, president of the Union National. "You hear lots of talk about the bad state of affairs but there is nothing yet to indicate anything at all serious."

St. Joseph Banker Dead

News has been received of the death of James N. Burnes, a St. Joseph banker, at his summer home in Santa Barbara, Cal. Mr. Burnes was sixty-one years old. He was president of the Empire Trust, which he organized eight years ago; a vice-president of the Burnes National and a director of the St. Joseph & Savannah Interurban Railway Company. He also was interested in the Security National at Pasadena, Cal. His death resulted from injuries suffered in a motor accident a month ago.

The directors are E. H. Harris, G. Sellback, N. W. Williams, F. G. Meisenheimer, T. O. Pendleton, Wm. Schuster, G. B. Judy, S. L. Stites, J. C. Davis and John Immelle.

John Whitelaw, president of the Kidder (Mo.) Bank, died suddenly at the home of his son in Seattle, Wash., recently.

George A. Lamb has been appointed treasurer of Pemiscot county to fill out the unexpired term of J. A. Bigham, who resigned.

The Joplin (Mo.) Trust will, on October 1st, open new quarters in the new Frisco building. The present offices of the Joplin Trust are too small and inadequate.

Talks to Farmer Boys

George W. Rogers, cashier of the Bank of Commerce, Little Rock, Ark., recently addressed the farm institute of the Boys' Corn and Cotton Club at Little Rock College on "The Bankers' and Farmers' Relations." Mr. Rogers is the originator of a fund for the awarding of prizes to the winners in the boys' corn and cotton clubs of the state. He introduced the first resolution in the convention of the Arkansas Bankers Association, which created the fund of $100 for prizes. The fund has been increased yearly by resolutions offered by Mr. Rogers until now it reaches the $450 mark.

Bank Vault Defies Robbers

Five bandits early on Friday of last week attempted to blow the safe of the Fulton County Bank, Mammoth Spring, Ark., and after five explosions had failed to open the vault, but had aroused the town, the robbers fled. They obtained no money. A reward has been offered for their arrest and a posse is searching the surrounding country.

Bank President Gives Himself Up

W. W. Hurst, president of the defunct Valley Savings of Argenta, Ark., and the Arkansas Life Insurance Company, also defunct, surrendered himself last Thursday having previously arranged to furnish $6,000 bail for the six indictments against him, each charging felony. Hurst left immediately after the bank was taken over by receivers and had not been located. It is said $200,000 is involved in the double failure.

Name Committee

At a meeting of the Galveston Clearing House last week the following committee was appointed to pass upon applications for loans from funds to be sent there by the treasury department of the United States to assist in marketing the cotton crop, should the fund be accepted: W. L. Moody, Jr., president City National; Lee Kempner, cashier Texas Bank and Trust Company; George Sealy, Sealy-Hutchings Company, and Fred W. Catterall, cashier First National. I. H. Kempner, president Texas Bank and Trust Company, local representative of the government, will act as chairman of the committee.

Southwest Notes

Extensive improvements are being made on the building of the First National, Bentonville, Ark., which, when completed, will give the bank one of the handsomest and most commodious banking buildings in northwest Arkansas.

Herbert L. Maddox, for several years connected with the firm of W. M. Harreld & Co., has resigned to accept the assistant cashier-ship of the Farmers State, Conway, Ark.

The capital stock of the Bank of Waldron, Ark., has been increased from $20,000 to $50,000.

A bank has been organized to do business at Poynor, Tex., a few miles east of Athens. B. Sigier of Athens is president, W. H. Foster of Poynor is vice-president and Charles Scarborough of Athens is cashier.

The Farmers National, Sealy, Tex., opened recently for business in its new building on Fowkles Street. Every person who called received a beautiful souvenir. The capital is $25,000; surplus, $2,500.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Guaranty State, Greenville, Tex., held recently, the board of directors of the bank was enlarged by the addition of eight new members. The new members are: Jno. N. Miller, president First National, Royse City; L. Coffman, cashier Josephine State, Josephine; Jess F. Tucker, vice-president State National, Garland; Marvin Heinatz, cashier Guaranty State, Greenville; L. E. Birdsong, treasurer Eastern Texas Traction Co.; J. B. Rabb, planter and capitalist; Fred Horton, manager of the Banner Publishing Co., and Barney W. Fields, postmaster of Greenville. This gives the Guaranty State a board of directors composed of seventeen members, including, in addition to those named above, F. E. White, W. A. Williams, G. E. Jordan, O. A. McCombs, Geo. Leavy, Mrs. W. A. Williams, Fred Hull, A. M. Moore, and J. W. Crotty. The officers of the bank are as follows: F. E. White, president; J. W. Crotty, G. E. Jordan, W. A. Williams and L. E. Birdsong, vice-presidents; Marvin Heinatz, cashier; A. M. Moore, assistant cashier; L. A. Miller, auditor.

The Texas department of insurance and banking has approved the following banks as reserve agents for state banks: National City of New York for Ben Arnold State; Lumbermans National, Houston, for Texas Bank and Trust Company, Beaumont; South Texas Commercial National, Houston, for the Riverside State Bank, Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas, National Bank of Commerce of Houston, and Victoria National of Victoria for the Placedo State of Placedo; Chase National of New York, City National of Dallas, Central Texas Exchange National of Waco and First State of Hillsboro for the First State of West. First National of Houston for the Weir State of Weir.

BELLINGHAM GROWING RAPIDLY

Bankers who attended the recent convention of the Washington bankers held in Bellingham state that the city and the surrounding country are making rapid strides. Oscar P. Dix, manager of the bond department of the Union Savings and Trust Company of Seattle, said:

"In looking over the country in and adjacent to Bellingham I was much impressed with the vast natural resources of that region, in its lumber, fisheries, mines and agriculture, and a class of citizens well above the average. Bankers who attended the convention at Bellingham ten years ago spoke with enthusiasm of the remarkable development which has taken place in the city and surrounding country in the last decade.

"It was a distinct pleasure, after sitting under the influence of a pessimistic eastern financial press, to listen to the words of well founded optimism from the lips of bankers from all over the state who could see, through the good crops and the development of other natural resources and business, a future which spelled success, undimmed by tariff reform and adverse legislation.

"The development of the state, industrially and municipally, is bound to increase the output of bonds. I have been very much pleased at the volume of bond business which has come to us in the face of adverse conditions, and with the department only two months old it has far exceeded our expectation, and the outlook for the growth of the department is most encouraging."

BIG CORN YIELD FOR MISSISSIPPI

One of the greatest corn crops ever grown in Mississippi will be harvested in the fall, according to G. B. Harper, industrial agent at Memphis for the Illinois Central and Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroads. Harper said that experienced agriculturists of the state have estimated a total yield of 75,000,000 bushels for 1913. It was 56,000,000 in 1912 and less than that in 1911.

"At an average price," continued Harper, "this means that planters in Mississippi will have from $45,000,000 to $50,000,000 from this crop, besides $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 off the cow pea crop, which has been sowed in every field of corn.

"Figures show that farmers will have about 3,000,000 acres of cow peas to harvest during the fall. These are worth on the markets from $1.00 to $1.50 a bushel and can be gathered by hand any time after the corn is in the pen.

"Mississippi, from Winona south, and practically covering that part of the entire state, has increased the corn crop acreage probably 40 per cent over any time previously. Much of this is due to boll weevil troubles in years past."

Editorial Comment

TRUTH ABOUT THE CURRENCY BILL

Bankers who depend upon their banking and financial papers for a fair estimate of the pending currency bill are likely to absorb very prejudicial opinions. Financial papers which reflect only the views of the anti-administration banker are not rendering a very valuable public service. Fortunately up in the Northwest there is an able writer who is untrammelled by business, office training or connections, who sets forth only the fairest and sanest of views.

Editor Lydell Baker devotes his front page to the attitude made so conspicuous by George M. Reynolds at the recent Chicago conference. Here is what Mr. Baker says in part:

"We give Mr. Reynolds credit for being broad-minded enough to see and courageous enough to declare that the people are back of congress in the latter's determination to produce a banking bill drawn by the politicians and not by the bankers. To us it is a little bit strange that bankers generally do not see the signs of the times and stop imitating old Mother Partington, who, determined not to recognize a tidal wave, tried with mop and broom to keep the Atlantic off her back porch. The Glass-Owen bill will work a hardship on banks. How much no man can say. But even if it be far-reaching—which probably it is not—what do the people care? And how can you blame them when one bank president testified this summer that his institution made 800 per cent in six years? The people have the idea that bank profits generally are out of all proportion. As to the fact this is a mistake; as to the belief it is a fact. The people who believe this have the power, and in our judgment it is perfectly useless as a proposition for the courts to talk about the Glass-Owen bill confiscating the property of banks. It doesn't confiscate bank property any more than bank guaranty confiscates it, and this latter has been repeatedly upheld by our courts."

The idea that "honey, not vinegar, is required," isn't new, but it is a trite expression for the present, best policy.

The threat of panics is a threadbare impotent. It no longer frightens, for with the government active and alert and opposed, no combination of banks or of men could produce a panic. They were difficult even with the aid and consent of government. The ease with which the government met the crop moving stringency war-cry is a case in point. Baker tells a story of "two ancient knights who quarreled because one standing on one side of a shield said it was red and the other standing on the other side said it was blue." Each was right from his point of view. The Chicago conference was on one side of the shield but persuasion induced it to send its best men to Washington to take a look at the other side. These able delegates were accorded a fine reception. The bank patron as well as the bank owner is abroad in the land. The abolition of check collection charges is one case in point of the two-sided shield. The banker sees one, the wholesaler, the jobber and the mail order house sees the other. Every publication which has a paid subscription list sees the side opposite to the banker. It is a matter of public governmental policy and the bank promotor has been abroad in the land for years telling of the "enormous earnings" made by the prominent banks, so that many people believe that their earning power is a sort of unjust tax on the depositor. Advices from Washington continue to predict the passage of the Glass-Owen bill with few important changes.

NEW YORK'S ATTITUDE

New Yorkers are very much perturbed these days over what they are pleased to term the "antipathy" of the government at Washington. Probably no move of the administration has done more to cause this feeling than the offer of assistance by the government to the southern and western banks in the way of deposits for moving the crops. It is argued that the treasury department is establishing a bad precedent, etc., and on the whole there seems to be a general disposition to criticize everything the Wilson administration is attempting to do.

The government's crop fund offer has received commendation in all quarters but New York. People are beginning to realize that Wall Street is not the only place in the country where financial aid may be obtained. Naturally, the consequent loss of prestige is somewhat annoying, but fortunately our government is one designed to serve the interests of the greatest number rather than a select few.

The people of this country seem to be pretty well satisfied as a whole with the way the democrats are running things at Washington. The party, true to its ante-election pledges, is endeavoring to give the nation a clean, honest government and to enact adequate legislation along much needed lines. Even the most hostile are unable to point out a single serious mistake thus far. The democrats at least are attempting to better conditions and ought to be given credit for that. Whether or not they will be successful can be determined only after the measures which they enact have been thoroughly tried out. Until such time as they have the discontented element should keep quiet until they have some reasonable basis for their condemnation.

THE SELECTION AND TENURE OF JUDGES

The above is the title of an address delivered by ex-President Taft before the convention of the American Bar Association held in Montreal. Mr. Taft believes that judges should be appointed instead of elected and that they should hold office for life. Any good which might result from the elective system, declared the ex-president, would be offset by direct nominations.

"Nothing could more impair the quality of lawyers available as candidates or depreciate the standard of the judiciary," said Mr. Taft. "It has been my official duty to look into the judiciary of each state in my search for candidates to be appointed to federal judgeships, and I affirm without hesitation that in states where many of the elected judges in the past have had high rank, the introduction of nomination by direct primary has distinctly injured the character of the bench for learning, courage and ability.

"The nomination and election of a judge are now to be the result of his own activity and of fortuitous circumstances.

"The result of the present tendency is seen in the disgraceful exhibitions of men campaigning for the place of state supreme judge and asking votes on the ground that their decisions will have a particular class favor."

The judiciary ought to be absolutely divorced from partisanship and all good citizens should aid in the movement which has been inaugurated to eliminate the party circle from judicial ballots. There are a great many things to be said in favor of and against appointment of judges. A judge is invested with an extraordinary responsibility and can be a powerful exponent of good or evil, according to the way in which he administers his office. Therefore, it behooves us to select for such offices men of the highest character and the greatest learning. There is a divergence of opinion as to whether men of this type can be supplied best through election or appointment. At any rate, the selection of judges should be free from partisan considerations.

Mr. Taft's idea of having the judges serve for life seems to be a sound one. There is no reason why men who have experience in legal matters should be displaced, as soon as they get that experience, by men perhaps less qualified to interpret the laws.

STUDY THE SAND DUNES

The art students have begun to pay attention to the sand dune, the kind that formerly went to mountain views, marines and landscapes. In the vicinity of Chicago, notably the shores of Lake Michigan to the south, and up the east side, abound in these wonderful formations. Added interest to the non-painter and non-sketcher has been given by a recent publication by Dana Estes & Co. of Boston, called "Sand Dunes and Salt Marshes."

Although written in a popular manner, abounding in charming descriptions of scenery and of bird and animal life, the book is filled with scientific facts and original observations. A brief résumé of the chapters will present some idea of the scope of the book. Chapter I gives an appreciative description of sand dunes with an account of their varying forms and rate of growth, of the overwhelming of farms and the burying of wrecks. The snow and ice formation in winter is also described. In the next chapter the various tracks in the sand are studied, and we obtain from them intimate knowledge of the creatures, whether they be deer or foxes, crows or grasshoppers. The vegetation in the dunes is described at some length, but the author evidently enjoys most of his chapters on "The Land Birds of the Dunes," and "Water Birds Seen from the Dunes." The harbor seal is pursued at all seasons with telescope and binoculars and is described in life and action from babyhood to old age.

In the first chapter on salt marshes the writer revels in the artistic and poetic side of the subject, for he is a thorough salt marsh lover. He manages, however, to include scientific accuracy and he gives a detailed description of the four zones of vegetation. In the next chapter "Salt Marshes—Their Past and Future," he sketches the probable geological history of this region. Chapters on "Birds of the Salt Marshes," "The Horse-shoe Crab and Other Denizens of the Sand and Mud," and "Bird Genealogy"—the last an evolutionary study—complete the book, which is illustrated with nearly four hundred excellent half-tones from photographs. The book sells for $2.00 net.

LADIES AT BOSTON

In the preparation of the entertainment program for the 39th annual convention of the American Bankers Association in Boston, October 6th to 10th, the comfort and entertainment of the ladies who come to the convention has not been lost sight of for a moment.

Beginning Monday morning, October 6th, 100 automobiles will be in service during four days for taking sight-seeing parties on trips through Boston, through the Metropolitan Park System, to Concord and Lexington, or along the North Shore, as the visitors may elect, and it is hoped that every lady who attends the convention, and as many of the delegates who find the time, will take one of these trips as the guest of the Boston bankers.

There is no event on the program with which the ladies should not be as delighted as the gentlemen. The carnival on the Charles River Basin, the reception and ball in Symphony Hall, with a buffet supper in Horticultural Hall across Massachusetts Avenue, the historical meetings in Faneuil Hall, Old South Meeting house, Christ church and King's chapel and the concert in Symphony Hall by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are anticipated with the deepest pleasure. And it is hard to imagine that the delegates are looking forward to these events with keener zest than are the ladies.

And the final event on the program, the harbor excursion and shore dinner, is receiving the most minute attention at the hands of the committee in charge so that it shall not be just a good time for the men. For instance, three steamers will be provided so that there will be plenty of room. There will be an orchestra of ten pieces on each steamer, these three orchestras to be combined into a band to provide music during the shore dinner. There will be no buffet on board. The boats will not leave the shelter of the inner harbor unless the sea is smooth. The shore dinner at Paragon Park will be served as carefully as if it were being held in one of the best hotels. An experienced caterer will be in charge of this dinner.

The return from the park is scheduled for 5:30 in the afternoon and special cars will be provided for transporting the visitors from Copley Square to the wharf and from the wharf back to Copley Square again when the boats return.

There will be a committee of Boston hostesses to greet their visiting ladies and to see that they have no dull moments while the delegates are occupied with business. Teas have been arranged for them at the Brae Burn Club and the Brookline Country Club, and there will probably be a concert in their honor at the New England Conservatory of Music. During convention week they will have special privileges at the Museum of Fine Arts and at other places where a fee is usually charged. Guides will escort them about many of the places of greatest interest, including the Harvard yard.

DECLINE TO LOAN TO BALKANS

United States banks have declared their unwillingness to loan money to the Balkan states for the purpose of rehabilitation, notwithstanding the fact that usurious rates of interest have been offered for such accommodation. The feeling seems to be that France should bear the burden of financing the belligerents during their period of readjustment.

Illinois Convention

As previously announced, the twenty-third annual convention of the Illinois Bankers Association will be held in Chicago, September 24-5-6, headquarters being at the La Salle.

An attractive list of speakers is being prepared for the occasion. It is rumored that among those who will address the convention will be Secretary McAdoo, George M. Reynolds and ex-Governor Hoch of Kansas. This has not been confirmed, however, no definite information having been given out.

August Blum is chairman and W. A. Heath vice-chairman of the general committee having charge of convention arrangements.

Wednesday, the 24th, there will be an exhibition of bank systems, equipment, appliances and advertising under the direction of Frank Collins of the Union Trust, the entire eighteenth floor of the hotel being given over for this purpose.

The executive council will meet Wednesday at 2 p. m. in the college room on the second floor. The executive council and group dinners will be combined this year and will be held at 6:30 Wednesday evening.

An entertainment is being planned for the ladies at the Art Institute Thursday afternoon, and in the evening there will be two theatre parties.

After the close of the business session at one o'clock Friday the bankers will be conveyed to the South Shore Country Club, where luncheon will be served. All who attend the luncheon at the South Shore will be afforded an opportunity of viewing the city's parks and boulevards from automobiles. At the "Sox" ball park 1,200 seats have been reserved for those preferring to witness a ball game.

REPORTS PROSPERITY IN MONTANA

"Montana is very prosperous," said N. F. Hawley, treasurer of the Farmers and Mechanics Savings of Minneapolis, who is back from the West. "The Judith Basin where I visited has a splendid crop, and all the Montana valleys have good crops. There will be a good long haul business out of Montana for Minneapolis for the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and St. Paul roads. I found merchants and bankers generally optimistic."

Farm lands in Illinois, notwithstanding the short crops incident to the prolonged heat and drought, continue to soar. A farm of 102 acres in Tazewell county, southeast of Pekin, sold for $310.50 an acre, or $31,671 for the farm. A tract of land of 800 acres, a few miles from Decatur, sold for $200 an acre, or $160,000, which is one of the largest real estate deals of distinctly farm lands for some time.

Cincinnati

Cleveland Chapter, American Institution of Banking, will go to the Richmond convention of the institute in one or more special cars over the Pennsylvania. The bankers and their families will leave here on the evening of September 14th, and at Pittsburgh their car or cars will be attached to a special bankers' train, bound for Washington. There the District of Columbia bankers will be hosts. An effort will be made to have P. J. Slach, former head of Cleveland Chapter, made president of the national organization.

Heavy Increase Shown

Business expansion in Ohio for August showed largely, both in new enterprises chartered and in additional capital put in concerns already under way. Over half a million dollars a business day was put in business for the month, the showing being as large as any month for the past year. During the month there were 166 corporations for profit formed in the state. The total capitalization amounted to $6,210,300. There were increases of capital in going concerns that amounted to $11,720,500, making a gross increase in corporation growth of $16,830,800. There were reductions during the month of $537,200, making a net increase for the month of $16,293,600. Cleveland led the four large cities with fifty-two new companies and capital of $1,032,000; Cincinnati had seventeen new concerns with a capital of $785,000; Columbus had fourteen with $1,000,500; and Toledo had sixteen with $174,500. The state outside the four large cities had sixty-seven concerns with capital of $3,319,300.

Improving Bank Building

The Citizens Trust and Savings, Columbus, is making extensive improvements in its bank building, which, when completed, will make it one of the best equipped institutions in the city. The interior of the banking room is being completely remodeled and a new entrance is being made on East Broad Street. New furniture and fixtures are to be installed throughout. Growth of the bank's business has made an increased space necessary.

Sycamore Bank Elects Directors

The stockholders of the new Sycamore (Ohio) State met last week and elected the following directors: Dr. W. H. Wickham, D. A. Bloom, George Ankney, E. E. Case, and John Gregg, all of Sycamore and vicinity, and M. M. Stoneburner of Upper Sandusky, and Ralph D. Sneath of Tiffin. The bank will be open for business within the next thirty days.

Bank Cashier Dead

Everet E. Williams, sixty-seven, for the past eighteen years cashier of the Elyria (Ohio) National and prominent in financial circles throughout that section, died suddenly of heart disease last week. He was a life-long resident of Lorain county. Before entering the bank he was engaged in the milling trade and served one term as county treasurer.

Amendments Needed

J. J. Sullivan, president of the Central National, Cleveland, on his return from the Chicago currency conference said: "In my opinion the amendments recommended for adoption by the Chicago conference of bankers are absolutely essential to make the bill workable, and if adopted in their entirety and enacted into law will be acceptable to the agricultural, industrial, commercial and banking interests of our country."

Stock Law Delayed

A temporary restraining order permitting five complaining corporations to sell stocks and bonds under the old laws which were in force before the "Blue Sky" law governing the sale of stocks and bonds went into effect, was filed in the district court clerk's office at Detroit last week. The complainants are the Alabama & New Orleans Transportation Co., N. W. Halsey & Co., an Illinois corporation; Henry L. Higgins, Arthur B. Leach and the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Co., of Illinois. The order is only temporary and was signed by Judge Sessions by an agreement with Fellows, and the case will be taken up as soon as the circuit judges get together.

Two Corporations Barred

For the first time since the "Blue Sky" law went into effect the Michigan securities commission has disapproved the applications of two companies who desire to enter Michigan. At a meeting of the commission on Friday of last week the application of the James L. Waterbury Company, of Minneapolis, Minn., and the Breitung Mines Corporation, of New York, were refused and as a result these two corporations cannot sell stock in Michigan.

Jackson, Ky., Merger

Final arrangements have been made for the consolidation of two of the leading financial institutions of Jackson, Ky.—the Breathitt County Bank and the Hargis Commercial Bank and the formation of the Hargis Commercial Bank and Trust Company with a capital stock of $75,000. The new institution will occupy the new Hargis Commercial Bank and Trust Company building, and former State Senator A. H. Hargis, who is president of the Hargis Commercial Bank, will be president; F. P. Crawford, former president of the Breathitt County Bank, will be vice-president, and John T. Hindman, now cashier of the Breathitt County Bank, will be the cashier.

Will Discuss Currency Bill

One entire afternoon of the meeting of the Indiana Bankers Association will be devoted to consideration of the proposed currency bill in the congress. The meeting will be held at the Claypool Hotel, Indianapolis, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 23d and 24th, and the discussion of the currency bill will take place Tuesday afternoon. George M. Reynolds, of Chicago, will deliver an address on the subject, and the general discussion will follow. At the opening session J. C. Johnson, of Evansville, will deliver an address on "Bank Examinations." Wednesday Aquilla Q. Jones, of this city, will talk on "The Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law." Following this there will be a general discussion of "Credit Information" and "Interests on Deposits." The trust company section of the organization will supply the program for Wednesday afternoon.

Elect Officers

At a meeting to-day of the directors of the National Bank of Petersburg, Va., E. A. Hartley was elected president, to succeed the late George Cameron, Jr. Mr. Hartley has been a director and vice-president of the bank for several years. Captain T. F. Heath was elected vice-president in place of Mr. Hartley.

Decrease in Bank Clearings

A small decrease in bank clearings for August is shown in the monthly report of the Rochester (N. Y.) Clearing House Association. Exchanges amounted to $18,555,899.53, compared with $21,858,216.83 in July, $19,254,590.13 in August, 1912, and $16,801,934.90 in August, 1911. Total clearings for the eight months are materially larger than the figures of any corresponding period in the history of the city. They amount to $171,824,762.80 compared with $163,410,987.49 for the first eight months of 1912, which had been the record.

Bank Change

George M. Barnes has resigned as vice-president of the Commercial National, Syracuse, N. Y., in order that he may devote his attention to the formation of a new trust company in Syracuse. Mr. Barnes has an option on the banking rooms in the University building vacated by the Syracuse Trust. It is said that many prominent men have agreed to serve as incorporators. Mr. Barnes has served as vice-president of the Commercial Bank for sixteen years and as a director since its organization twenty-two years ago. He remains on the board of directors. At a board meeting Anthony Lamb was elected to the office of vice-president to succeed Mr. Barnes. He retains the office of cashier and is given an assistant, Arthur A. White, who has been connected with the bank for ten years in various capacities. Mr. Lamb was one of the organizers of the bank and its only cashier.

Franklin National Bank Letter

According to the Franklin National of Philadelphia, those who hope for a decided relaxation in money rates following the present easier trend are doomed to disappointment. The bank, in its monthly digest of trade conditions, declares there will be no surplus beyond fall trade and crop moving requirements. The letter says:

"The slight easing up of the money market has been due to several factors. Strikes have reduced the output of minerals and as most concerns have been steadily adding to their cash reserves during the past few weeks the country is to-day in fairly good shape to handle the early crops. The decision of the treasury department to deposit $50,000,000 next week in the banks in the principal crop sections will make the grain movement easier, although as a partial offset to this the government's deposits in banks have declined as much as $20,000,000 during the past two months, so that the actual additional deposit will amount to only $30,000,000."

"The terrific damage done the corn crop by drought and the decline in the cotton condition in the Southwest mean that less money will be required for handling the crops in these sections."

"Trade in general merchandising lines is picking up while iron and steel are less active. As business is showing signs of its fall awakening and as the shipment of grains even now is totaling from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 bushels daily, there will be no surplus of money beyond what is absolutely necessary for legitimate trade demands and an easy money market is not in prospect for several months at least."

Mrs. Elizabeth Webb Rowland, mother of Samuel C. Rowland, vice-president of the Baltimore Trust, died last week.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by F. C. Redmond

Minneapolis bank clearings for the first eight months of the year have mounted to $769,857,462.01, exceeding those of last year for a similar period by $117,667,324.16. The half year closed with the figures up to $582,968,060.18, breaking every record; July added another gain and made the seven months increase over last year $111,779,124.84 and August now has added to the increase $6,888,199.22. The Chamber of Commerce crop year is closed and the figures so far compiled show that 208,611,350 bushels, compared with 144,400,720 bushels last year, have been received.

Minnesota Agricultural Conference

On Tuesday of this week the agricultural committee of the Minnesota Bankers Association met at the state fair, which is held annually on the grounds half way between Minneapolis and St. Paul. The Minnesota committee has eighty-two members, one from each county in the state. There was a full attendance. The state has twenty-four demonstrators at work and these met with the members of the agricultural committee. There were assembled also 125 agricultural teachers and demonstrators. These teachers are in the schools nine months of the year and for two months they travel about from farm to farm giving demonstrations over a radius of five miles from the schools from where they are employed. This probably is the largest agricultural committee maintained by any state organization and, as a result of the conference with the twenty-four county agents, it is expected that agents will be employed in many other counties, when the results of the labors of those already employed become better known.

State Bank Deposits Grow

Deposits in Minnesota state banks increased $14,352,357.93 during the period from June 14, 1912, to August 9, 1913, according to a comparative abstract of the condition of these institutions on these dates, prepared by Kelsey S. Chase, state superintendent of banks. During the same period the number of banks increased from 747 to 796. Loans and discounts gained $15,140,449.06 and capital stock was increased by $1,063,700. Overdrafts total $335,683, which is the lowest figure reached in eight years. The total resources in the 796 state banks are $160,823,097.21, as against $144,462,020.08 in June, 1912, a net increase of $16,361,077.13. Because of the insistence of the banking department that all new banks must have a surplus equal to at least 20 per cent of their capital, there is an increase of $691,527.50 in this account.

St. Paul Men Take Over Bank

P. B. Wickham, president and majority stock owner of the First National, Glen Ullin, N. D., has disposed of his interests to a Minnesota syndicate consisting of E. A. Konantz, St. Paul; R. C. Lily, vice-president Merchants National, St. Paul; J. A. Reagon, president East St. Paul State; R. P. Ward, president Waseca Farmers Bank and others. Vice-president Waetcher will remain as a director and Cashier Kuhl will retain his position.

Defunct Bank Pays Fifth Dividend

The fifth dividend, amounting to five per cent, will be paid to creditors of the State Bank of Royalton, Royalton, Minn., in a short time says Receiver C. Rosenmeier. With the payment of this dividend the creditors will have received 60 per cent, a much larger percentage than had been expected. It is also believed that another small dividend will be paid when the affairs of the defunct bank are finally closed.

It is expected that the Bowlus bank will pay 85 per cent to its creditors because its securities were better than those of the Royalton institution. The receiver has already disbursed 72½ per cent and it is announced that another dividend amounting to from 10 to 12½ per cent will be paid out when the affairs of the bank are finally adjusted, sometime before the first of the year. The receiver announces that the affairs of both banks will be closed up before January 1st.

NEW BUILDING FOR INDIANA BANK

Below is shown a cut of the new building, now in course of construction, which will be the home of the Studebaker Bank of Bluffton, Ind. The structure will be one of the finest in the state and up-to-date in every respect.

The bank expects to occupy its new quarters the latter part of December.

The Studebaker Bank is capitalized at $200,000 and has surplus and profits of $57,000. Deposits are about $1,153,000. R. S. Todd is the president; J. S. Gilliland, vice-president; W. W. Rogers, cashier, and N. E. Mason and K. B. Skiles, assistant cashiers.

NATIONAL BANK FOR SAEGERTOWN, PA.

The private bank of Deichman & Ketner in Saegertown, Pa., which recently took over the business of W. W. Deichman & Co., will soon be merged into a national bank, to be known as the First National of Saegertown. The sponsors for the present change are F. M. Hunter, H. B. Saeger, W. S. Wise, P. S. Davis, H. O. Ketner, P. A. Smith and Dr. R. S. Smith, who probably will serve as directors of the new institution. A new building will be erected as soon as the organization has been completed.

BANK ACQUIRES CONTROLLING INTEREST

The Commercial National, Washington, D. C., has acquired a controlling interest in the Union Savings, its immediate neighbor bank. The Union Savings has a capital of $200,000, surplus of $123,000 and deposits of $2,000,000. The Commercial National is capitalized at $750,000, has surplus and undivided profits of $500,000, and resources in excess of $7,000,000. The new officers of the bank are as follows: Ashton G. Clapham, president; James A. Cahill, Tucker K. Sands, vice-presidents; C. L. Bowman, cashier; Ellis & Donaldson, general counsel.

Lee Stevens, president of the Century State, Des Moines, is sorry now that he told a newspaper man about his collection of rare old coins. Since the latter printed a story about the collection, amateur collectors over the state have been finding valuable coins and have been offering them to Stevens at fabulous prices. Every mail brings him letters inquiring as to the values of coins with certain dates, signs, etc., upon them. Mr. Stevens has a collection, however, of which he is justly proud and which is worth a great deal of money. Some of his finest specimens were shown in a local store window during the state bankers' convention in May.

Anthony J. Goetz, president of the bank at Lone Tree and of the bank at Hills, died last week following a runaway accident in which he was severely injured. Mr. Goetz was well known in financial circles in central Iowa.

Des Moines, Sept. 5.—P. W. Hall, secretary of the Iowa Bankers Association, was able to make a most optimistic report for Iowa at the agricultural conference held at Kansas City last week. Mr. Hall told the middle western bankers what Iowa is doing because of the absence of C. H. McNider, chairman of the agricultural committee of the I. B. A. In his report, Mr. Hall pointed out that Iowa is in the center of the agricultural Middle West, that her soil is uniformly good, that she has no bad sections of the state undeveloped and that because of these facts it is difficult to show the Iowa farmer the necessity for enthusiastic accord in a movement for farm betterment. Iowa, however, has been represented in all these conferences and the I. B. A. stands ready at all times to lend encouragement and aid whenever opportunity presents itself. For instance, Mr. Hall pointed out, the I. B. A. works in harmony with the Iowa Corn and Small Grain Growers Association, the Iowa State Dairy Association, the Iowa Draft Horse Association, the State Horticultural Society and the Iowa Fruit Growers Association. Likewise the bankers of Iowa are at all times boosting for Ames College and assisting in its farm extension work and its labors along the line of adding to the wealth of the state via the scientific farming route.

Mr. Hall told how the I. B. A. has sent out crop literature and rag baby corn testers. He asserted that he has been told of the excellent work done by the rag baby tester and has seen it highly complimented.

In concluding, Mr. Hall quoted President Pearson of Ames in favor of legislation enacted by the last legislature providing for state aid to consolidated schools, for increasing the facilities for training rural school teachers, for teaching domestic science, elementary agriculture and manual training in the schools, etc.

Secretary Hall believes that much good will come of the Kansas City conference. Last year it was at Minneapolis and Iowa bankers will see that Des Moines is the logical point for holding one of them. Iowa bankers at Kansas City included B. B. Vorse and P. W. Hall. Des Moines; A. D. Simmons, Osceola; C. J. Wohlenburg, Holstein; E. W. Miller, Waterloo; Secretary Egan, Burlington Commercial Club in lieu of J. L. Edwards.

Banker Killed in Auto Accident

William P. Zwilling, vice-president of the First National at Nevada and a director in the People's Bank at the same town, was instantly killed in an automobile accident while Mrs. Zwilling was so badly injured that she died shortly afterwards. Mr. Zwilling was driving the machine and did not see an approaching fast train on the Northwestern at Nevada because of a freight train. An electric bell was giving a warning of the approaching engine but it is supposed that Mr. Zwilling believed that the freight train was causing it to ring. The deceased banker was about sixty

Iowa Bankers Warned of Swindling Scheme

Iowa bankers have been warned against a smooth chap by W. W. Bowman, secretary of the Kansas Bankers Association. The swindler worked in Kansas quite effectively. He would appear at a bank and present a sight draft drawn on the First National at Pueblo, Col. The bank would refuse to cash it without endorsement and would suggest a prominent man whom the swindler, who gave the name of Anderson, should see. Anderson would then go away and telephone into the bank, impersonating the endorser. "I'm too busy to come over but I have endorsed the draft," he would say over the phone. Later Anderson would appear, present the draft with a forged endorsement and explain that the endorser was too busy to personally visit the bank. This tale tallied with what had been said over the telephone and the scheme worked.

Des Moines Visitors.

Des Moines continues to be popular with the bankers of Iowa. Among the many seen in the city within recent days were President J. C. Vorhees, Anita Bank; President E. P. Banker Has Blackmailers Arrested Banker J. H. McCord of Spencer is the hero in a little story involving Frank Rosekranz, a prosperous farmer near that city, and four men who have been arrested charged with blackmailing him out of over $4,000 since last April. It seems that the four men framed up a plot on Rosekranz and then threatened to expose what they claimed was a shady transaction on his part unless he would give them large sums of money. In April they extracted $1,550 from the victim. Later they took his note for $2,250 and the next day another for $650. Then they told Rosekranz that they must have cash instead of the notes, so Rosekranz secured $2,500 in cash and gave them a note for $500. The other day they demanded $2,000 more. Rosekranz went to the bank for it. But Mr. McCord had become curious as to why the customer was drawing out so much money. After considerable questioning he got Rosekranz to confide in him. He investigated and the arrest of the four men followed.

Women Forgers Active

Des Moines recently had an experience with a young woman forger but she was arrested. Sioux City had an experience with one also and at last accounts she was still at large. She gave her name as Ada Boyd and was a professional nurse. Miss Boyd passed eight worthless checks on Sioux City merchants, each for $36.50 netting her $292. The checks were written on the First National bank and the signature purported to be that of F. J. Davies, a machinist.

Postal Deposits Fall Off

Business at the postal savings banks in Iowa has taken a slump during the summer, according to newspapers from over the state. The decline is especially noticeable in Des Moines and other cities which have a good mining population in addition to many foreigners. The heated season has not been conducive to labor on the part of the mine workers and the result is a falling off in postal deposits.

Complicated Legal Question Confronts Cashier.

N. C. Gindorfer, cashier of the German Trust and Savings at Dubuque, has a difficult task before him. He was named trustee of the Sternweis estate, valued at $100,000, following the discovery of the bodies of Sternweis and his wife and four children in the ruins of a house and barn near that city. It is the theory of the officers that Mrs. Sternweis killed her husband and children, set fire to the house, then went to the barn where she started another blaze and killed herself, trusting to the fire to destroy her body. Later false teeth and crowns, property of the woman, were found in the ruins of the barn, thus identifying the remains. If Sternweis died last, his estate will go to his blood relatives. If the widow died last, her relatives can claim a dower third of the estate. It is anticipated that there will be a hotly contested legal battle and it will not be an easy task to show how the murder occurred inasmuch as the entire affair is shrouded in mystery.

Iowa Notes

Iowa, of course, is interested in the affairs of Harry Thaw, but Council Bluffs is more than ordinarily so because J. P. Greenshields, president of the First National there, is a brother of J. N. Greenshields, one of Thaw's defending attorneys. The latter is Thaw's chief counsel because of his knowledge of Canadian law following a practice of thirty-five years at Montreal. He has visited his brother at the Bluffs frequently.

The Banker and The Farmer

By GEORGE T. WELLS

George T. Wells of the Denver National created an extremely favorable impression at the Wyoming convention, held in Sheridan recently, with his talk on "The Banker and the Farmer." Mr. Wells said in part:

The farmer could live a thousand years without the city, and continue indefinitely without any connection with it, but no city can exist or prosper without the farm. So the city man—the manufacturer, the city banker and all others—are beginning to realize more and more that this is so, and are bending their energies to place the agricultural world on a more practical and better business footing.

The farmer, especially in this western country, has not been farming. He has merely been mining from the soil its natural resources. He, of course, does not drill a hole in the ground as does the miner, but he has left the soil unproductive for certain things.

He has drifted. By that I mean that with millions of undeveloped acres of agricultural land he has found it much easier after he has been planting a certain crop, such as wheat or corn, year in and year out, without diversification, rotation or fertilization, resulting in a diminishing crop each year, to pack up and migrate to new lands rather than to find out by scientific investigation why the crop has been failing year by year. Very often with the failure of the crops it became necessary to borrow money or to mortgage the land in order to live, and almost invariably in such cases he has left the man from whom he borrowed the money to "hold the sack," consequently those who did "hold the sack" have found it many times harder to get anyone else to purchase these deserted farms than it was to sell new and untried acres. This has been one of the many things which have tended to ruin the credit of the farmer.

In this connection it might be said that more lands have been reclaimed in the eastern states during the last five years than have been colonized in the West. Such lands, of course, had to be reconstruced, but the fact of their being closer to the dense population and the consumer has made it profitable to do this.

Farmers Do Not Appreciate Value of Crops Raised

There are a great many other reasons, and I think one of these is the absolute disregard for any business methods whatever in the conduct of the farm, such as keeping accounts and really finding out whether the crop which is being raised is a profitable one or not, or again, merely planting some crop because everybody else around there does the same. In such localities I have very often found the man who was making the most money was the man who was raising something entirely different, thereby insuring a demand and a market for his produce.

Another great reason for the farmer's failure is that wherever you may go you may see the farm machinery scattered to the remotest ends of the farm, absolutely unprotected, and therefore owing to its metallic structure very quickly made valueless by rust and corrosion. It has been stated that the so-called harvester trust has made as much money by repairing and overhauling machines that have served one season as they have selling new ones. These were taken back because of the inability of the farmer to pay for them, and because the company knew they would otherwise be misused and of no value the next season. Of course the farmer must necessarily purchase a new machine the next year in any event, and so could not pay for his first machine.

Perhaps the greatest reason for the farmers' failure is that they do not appreciate the value of the crops they raise.

For instance, this is true in Colorado, and of course I base a great deal of my information upon conditions there, and I also believe the information and the lessons learned will apply in a general rule to Wyoming, as conditions are practically the same.

Western Agriculture in Experimental Stage

Agriculture in our western country is only beginning to be a factor. In fact, it is yet in the experimental stage. And while in its infancy the demand has been much greater than the supply, the marketing problem has not been a serious one, but as we progress, and even now in a great many instances, the production is exceeding the facilities for marketing, preservation and transportation, the disposition of the crops will become a greater problem each year; consequently this lack of proper facilities is causing a tremendous waste of the product.

Sometimes I think we don't realize the true value of our wonderful resources, for here our virgin soils are on an average nearly as productive as the soils of Germany and Great Britain, which through their intensive farming, are the most productive in the world.

In regard to the soil, atmospheric conditions, etc., in this locality, we must realize that perhaps we have one hundred conditions to contend with to one further east. For example, in Illinois and Iowa the climatic conditions, the nature of the soil and the amount of rainfall are practically the same throughout the state, or if not within a radius of many miles this is so; while we in this western country have altitudes ranging from 3,000 to 9,000 feet; we have our dry lands and our lands that can be irrigated; also the soil of each valley is made up of the decomposed rocks of many ages, some predominating in lime, alkalis, etc.; also our waters running in the streams predominate in different solutions of the various mineral properties, thus creating the necessity of more diversified farming, and a closer study of the chemical properties of the soil as to what, when and where to plant.

MICHIGAN BANK CLOSED

R. E. Jossman, cashier of the E. Jossman State Bank of Clarkston, Mich., who was taken into custody after the bank was closed by order of the state bank examiner, admitted to state and local authorities in a formal confession, that he had converted several thousand dollars of the bank's money to his own use. His confession stated, the authorities announced, that the money was used to finance unsuccessful business ventures. The bank is capitalized at $20,000, and recently reported deposits of $90,000.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane bankers and business men have united under the leadership of the chamber of commerce in a campaign to bring about the growing of more alfalfa in the Spokane country, with the resultant increase in hogs and dairying. They have secured the services of Professor Perry G. Holden, the Iowa corn expert, to conduct a four-weeks' alfalfa campaign in the territory tributary to Spokane, beginning September 24th. Accompanied by a large party of Spokane men, headed by R. R. Rogers, manager of the Vermont Loan and Trust Company, the Holden party will journey by special train and automobiles to about one hundred centers, urging the farmers to devote to alfalfa at least a good portion of their land now devoted to wheat or some other single crop. Spokane bankers are keenly interested in the campaign, which they believe will result in increased farm production and profits ultimately in greater prosperity for all concerned.

By figures compiled by the industrial secretary of the chamber of commerce, it is shown that factories established in Spokane for the manufacture of shoes, starch, shirts, hosiery, or, in fact, almost anything with the exception of steel products, would have for customers approximately two million people. All of the district from Spokane west to the Pacific ocean, to Nevada on the south, Great Falls, Helena and Butte, Mont., on the east, and the Canadian border on the north, would be open to manufacturers operating in this city. And, according to the industrial expert's calculation, Spokane manufacturers would be able to control the business in nearly all of this vast territory; certain cities along the coast being the exception.

It is this large territory tributary to Spokane that is attracting the attention of many eastern manufacturers with which the industrial secretary is now in correspondence. Actual investigation shows, however, that the district served from Spokane is even greater than anticipated, as the now reduced distributive freight rates give Spokane control of a large portion of Montana that was formerly controlled by Chicago and St. Paul.

On woolen goods Spokane manufacturers could serve the entire United States. For mackinaw cloth there is a great and growing demand, and especially for that manufactured in the West, as it is conceded to be a superior fabric. Those twelve or fourteen western cities which have woolen mills find it impossible to produce more than a small fraction of the amount they could sell.

Building permits in Spokane for the seven months ended July 31st show an increase over the same period in 1912 of over 53 per cent. Tacoma and Seattle also made substantial gains. Spokane's permits the first seven months of 1912 totaled $1,549,722; for the same period this year they were $2,356,589.

F. M. March, president of the National Bank of Commerce, has gone to his old home in Glencoe, Minn., to attend the burial of his wife, who died this week in California after ten years' illness. Mrs. March was the daughter of H. Wadsworth, a merchant of Glencoe, and the family has many friends throughout Minnesota. Mr. March expects to return to Spokane about September 7th.

The State Bank of Isle (Minn.) has opened for business with N. P. Burman, president, and L. G. Matter, cashier. Its capital stock is $10,000 and surplus $2,000.

Corporation Commissioner Watson has sent to all delinquent investment companies letters informing them if they do not comply with the "Blue Sky" law by making a statement of their business by September 5th they would be proceeded against by the district attorneys. The letter, in part, says:

"This department has been lenient in its enforcement of the law in order that all companies affected might have adequate opportunity and ample time to comply with the provisions and adjust themselves to the requirements of the act."

EDMONTON NEWS

Harvesting operations are being rushed throughout central Alberta, between 55 and 60 per cent of the grain crop being cut at the end of August. Wheat averages fully twenty-one bushels to the acre, though in numerous localities, not yet touched by the reapers, it will go as high as twenty-seven and thirty bushels. The yields of barley, oats and flax also will be larger than usual. The root crops are in excellent condition and with prevailing weather conditions the harvest will continue to make good progress. The weather has been ideal the last two weeks. Farmers in the Edmonton district are cutting barley and oats. Wheat will be ready in a few days. C. B. Beal, who has been in the district since territorial days, reports that he never saw better crop conditions. There has been no damage in any part of the country. Dealers report that good prices will prevail for all kinds of grain.

H. V. Meredith, vice-president and general manager of the Bank of Montreal, who was in Edmonton several days this week, reported that the money market is gradually resuming its normal condition. He said that money will be easier as soon as the crop is harvested. "Then," he added, "the farmers will be able to repay the money they have borrowed and the scarcity of capital will be lessened. As it is, I should say that the crisis has passed; the back of the stringency is broken and it will soon be forgotten. However, a word of warning to the speculators may not be amiss. They must look conditions squarely in the eye and contemplate well before they begin investing their capital." Mr. Meredith is accompanied by Mrs. Meredith; B. F. Winslow, superintendent of branches in the district; J. B. Allen, K. C., and Llewellyn Meredith, all of Montreal. This is his first visit to Edmonton in six years and he is not slow to note the progress and growth of the city and district.

Sixteen hundred and sixty-seven bales of furs, valued at $3,334,000, were brought to Edmonton from the north country on August 28th-29th for shipment to London, Paris, St. Petersburg, Montreal, Toronto, Boston and Chicago. Captain Haight of the Hudson Bay Company, who brought the fleet of scows from the outpost, reports 1,250 bales of furs for the Hudson's Bay Company, 150 bales for the Young & Slater Company, and 17 bales for the Fairweather Company. Each bale is valued at $2,000. Two hundred and fifty bales, valued at $2,000, were brought down for the Hudson's Bay, the Northern Trading and the Northwest Fur Companies. Campbell Young of the Northern Trading Company reports that fur-bearing animals are plentiful along the Mackenzie river, which means that the coming season will be a good one for trappers and traders.

Trade in England has been unusually brisk during the last nine months, according to Geo. W. Fitzgerald, general manager of the Bank of Caledonia, with headquarters in Edinburgh, Scotland, who was in Edmonton August 26-28 on a tour of western Canada, "and, as a result," he added, "all the capital available has been required at home. However, I believe that Canadian concerns will be able to obtain all the money they require within the next three months. English financiers have as much faith as ever in Canadian securities and within a short time there will be an abundant supply of capital to draw upon at a rate of about 4½ per cent."

James B. Griffith, secretary-treasurer of the Edmonton Portland Cement Company, of which Lieutenant-Governor Bulyea of Alberta is chairman of the directorate, announces that the 1,500-barrel plant at Marlboro, Alta., is in operation. The company expended about $750,000 on the plant, which is turning out 1,000 barrels a day. Orders have already been placed for 60,000 barrels of cement, and Mr. Griffith says as much more can be contracted for as soon as the first consignment is delivered. Most of the company's stock is held in Edmonton and there is not a share on the market.

A. N. Mowat, formerly supervisor of the Hudson's Bay Company's stores between Mattawa, Ont., and Victoria, B. C., and afterward branch organizer for the Swift Canadian Company in southern Alberta, has been appointed city auditor of Edmonton, succeeding R. L. Richardson. Mr. Mowat is a member of the Chartered Accountants' Association of Manitoba and of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Alberta.

F. H. Mayhew, a financier of Vancouver, B. C., who organized an expedition to make scientific explorations of the north country as far as Fort McPherson, which is inside the Arctic circle, returned to Edmonton on August 27th on the way home. He reports making a large collection of the flora and fauna of the north and classifying his specimens. The trip from Fort McPherson to Edmonton occupied seven weeks.

Frederick L. Dalton, a shorthorn cattle rancher in Mexico, with residence in Mexico City, has come to Edmonton to establish a large ranch in central Alberta. He reports losing hundreds of head of cattle as a result of the revolts in Mexico and says he is through with that country for all time.

"Indications for oil are excellent in Alberta from the southern boundary to the Arctic ocean," said A. Forsberg-Hamilton, an expert of Victoria, B. C., who has been investigating the northern fields for an English syndicate during the last four weeks. He visited all the prospects between Fort McMurray and Pelican Falls. Continuing, he said:

"The fact that the limestone strata, in which oil will be found, is practically level all over the province, makes it difficult to say which is the best place to start a bore, for the chances are almost even anywhere that the limestone strata is found. Before oil is discovered in paying quantities it is very probable that a large amount of money will have to be spent in development work, although when once found in sufficient quantities the cost of the preliminary work will be insignificant."

Mr. Hamilton said that the presence of tar sands in large quantities in the Pelican Falls and Fort McMurray districts indicates that the oil has been present but has been exhausted. "However," he added, "oil may be present where the tar sands are covered with substances that prevent the evaporation and escape of gases. The intermediates must also exist," he said, "and these will prove of commercial value."

"A large oil supply on British territory would be of enormous value," he concluded, "particularly in view of the proposal to use oil fuel in the British navy. The adoption of oil fuel by railways and steamship companies promises to so increase the demand that unless some large new fields are discovered the price of oil must necessarily increase largely."

preferably, or government notes. "We believe the notes should be issued by the federal reserve board to the banks and by them to the public, and that all the federal reserve banks should be responsible for the whole issue of notes," said Mr. Wexler.

He asserted that these notes would be issued only as necessity demands and that they would be issued primarily for the benefit of the customers of the banks, and not for the banks themselves.

Says Issues Would be Safe

Senator Reed then inquired if it would not be possible for a bad bank to inflate the currency through the central bank plan.

Mr. Wexler pointed out that not only would the banks have to maintain a gold reserve against their own demand liabilities, but the central bank itself could not rediscount paper except within the safeguards laid down by the law, and that an unsafe bank would shortly reach the end of its resources to issue money. He asserted that the central bank would always retain the power to raise the rates of discount and that the gold reserve it maintained on its own account, amounting to 33 per cent under the administration currency bill and 40 per cent as recommended by the bankers, limited such activities in addition to the other safeguards.

In reply to an inquiry as to what would be the greatest possible expansion under the central bank plan, Mr. Wexler said it would be determined by the amount of gold available. Estimating the required gold reserve at 40 per cent on note issues, Mr. Wexler said the present supply in the United States was, approximately, $150,000,000, held as reserve for an issue of $346,000,000 in greenbacks; $1,100,000,000 held in reserve for an equal amount of gold certificates, and approximately $552,000,000 in gold now held by the banks or in actual circulation.

If all of this gold were available as reserves for note issue, the total issue would be two and a half times as much. Mr. Wexler added, however, that when the possibilities of the situation were worked out the United States would soon become the financial and commercial center of the world and that, with good crops and large balances, the supply of gold might be expected to increase, thereby increasing in proportion the available supply of gold for reserve purposes. He believed that a central bank plan would enable the United States to accumulate the gold supply of the world.

Taking up the panic of 1907 Senator Reed asked Mr. Wexler if the deposit of bankers' reserves in large cities was not responsible for that condition. Mr. Wexler replied that all the banks were, in part, responsible; that the falling off in reserves in New York had attracted general attention which resulted in all banks calling in their deposits with other banks. He said the whole affair might have been averted if the New York banks had had a place to rediscount quickly the paper they had on hand.

Senator Reed wanted to know whether under a central bank system there might not arise a tendency to fix uniform rates of interest and interfere with banking generally. Mr. Wexler held that customers of all banks would be benefited by their ability to rediscount their paper and that, in all probability, there would be a lowering in rates of interest.

Mr. Wexler was asked by Senator Reed if a system giving greater elasticity and enabling bankers to convert their assets into cash through a rediscount bank would not prevent panics.

"With such privileges there probably could be no panic arising from the same causes that produced the last two," said Mr. Wexler. "Under any circumstances banks probably could go on paying out money for the ordinary needs of business. But there can be no perfect panacea against the folly of men. A period of wild and extravagant living; great speculation on the part of the classes that usually save, and the investment of savings in 'wild cat' mines—such conditions will produce a panic, no matter how carefully a national banking system may be devised."

Senator Hitchcock attempted to show that the plan of the bankers involved an increase in credit notes, instead of increasing the actual legal tender money in the country, and inquired if the lack of legal tender was not, in fact, the basis of much of the trouble in this country. Mr. Wexler replied that the main trouble now was due to the fact that in the absence of notes of any character the banks of the country had to fall back on their metallic reserves in times of distress. He could see no danger of inflation from the issue of notes proposed by the bankers when backed by the required gold reserve and by the liquid paper, the limit of issue being established by the amount of gold actually available for reserves.

Hitchcock Proposes Plan

Senator Hitchcock then proposed a plan by which the government should sell bonds to raise a gold reserve of its own, against which it should issue notes which the banks should borrow in time of stress and pay interest thereon. This form of note, he said, would be legal tender and would in his judgment meet the need. Mr. Wexler objected not only to the government's going into the banking business, but to pledging the credit of the government and requiring the people to pay the interest on the bonds, which, he said, they would have to do.

On behalf of the bankers' committee James B. Forgan of Chicago stated that the committee had brought an expert on each subject to be touched upon by the administration bill, and expressed the opinion that the senate committee could be better informed by an expert than by the mere opinions of a banker who had not given the particular subject recent careful consideration.

Members of the senate committee stated that they intended to cross-examine each witness minutely and would hear both expert and personal opinions at length.

COMMITTEE TO HEAR GEORGE M. REYNOLDS

Washington, September 4th.—George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago, will probably appear to-morrow morning before the senate committee in charge of currency legislation.

During the hearing to-day, James B. Forgan, president of the First National Bank, Chicago, interpolated a few comments on the provision which would do away with exchange charges in each reserve district. He said it would prove a loss to the country bankers, but would be an advantage to the city bankers.

"If you want to make the bill popular with the small bankers, and they constitute a majority of the bankers of the country," said Mr. Forgan, "you will have to eliminate this provision. The matter of out-of-town exchanges is not a small one. In our bank we have a department of sixty men who handle 25,000 checks a day."

Mr. Reynolds added a word about his bank.

"In our institution, we handled last year more than nineteen million checks on points outside Chicago," he said. "We keep 200 men busy in this department alone. We have in transit all the time an average of $13,000,000."

The attitude of the senate committee on banking and currency to-day indicated plainly that if it controls the situation the administration's currency bill will not be passed at this session of congress.

Republicans proposed various schemes to delay the bill. O'Gorman, Reed, and Hitchcock would not vote for them, but each of these senators is known to be favorable to extended hearings on the pending bill. Senators O'Gorman and Hitchcock believe it will take practically two months to take testimony and frame a bill that can pass. That in effect will postpone action until the next session.

"If you do much more to the bill," said Senator Reed, "I shall begin to think it the worst bill ever drawn."

Festus J. Wade of St. Louis before the committee this morning, emphasized his belief that it would be a mistake to put the credit of the government behind the currency issues. He urged that the banks continue to issue the circulating medium.

"The time easily may come," said he, "when the nation's credit will need all the strength it can command for emergencies."

The house banking and currency committee by a majority Democratic vote reported favorably to-day the Glass-Owen currency bill. It will be brought up in the house for consideration Monday.

WILMINGTON BANKS MERGED

The Murchison National and the Southern National of Wilmington, N. C., have been consolidated under the name of the former, and in connection with the announcement of the merger it is stated that the capital of the Murchison National will, it is expected, be increased soon from $825,000 to at least $1,000,000. The capital of the Southern National was $200,000, and it had a surplus of $100,000. President Charles N. Evans of the latter is also president of the Atlantic Trust and Banking Company of Wilmington, which has just moved into new quarters in its eight-story building at Front and Market streets, and it is said that he will now devote all of his time to the latter institution, which was chartered eleven years ago. The officers of the Murchison National are H. C. McQueen, president; J. V. Grainger, vice-president; Joseph W. Yates, cashier, and C. S. Grainger, assistant cashier.

H. E. Hebrank of the Union National, Pittsburgh, is being mentioned by the Pittsburgh Chapter as a possible vice-president of the A. I. B.

Wilson's is the Master Mind in Washington

Washington, D. C., Aug. 25.—President Wilson's ability to handle congress stands out at this time as one of the most important achievements during the first six months of his administration. The consummate skill with which he has achieved his ends through the medium of the legislative body has excited the admiration of the congressmen themselves. That congress has met its master in Woodrow Wilson is evident upon the face of the returns to date.

When President Wilson took up the reins of government on March 4th he had learned the democratic platform by heart. He had also ascertained that the country expected his party to carry out its platform pledge, not only for a revision of the tariff, but for a revision downward of the tariff at once. Giving congress a breathing space of a month, during which time he conferred almost daily with the house leaders who had been framing the tariff bill for several months, the president called that body into special session and caused to be laid before it a tariff bill which had met his personal scrutiny with particular reference to the broader principles involved.

Free Sugar and Free Wool

These principles, among other things, writes Leroy T. Vernon in the Chicago Daily News, included the mooted question of free sugar and free raw wool, both of which the president himself decided in the affirmative against the judgment of the house committee on ways and means. His judgment was consequently upheld in the democratic house caucus and in the house, and in the democratic senate caucus, and the question of free sugar has also been upheld in the senate itself, wool not having yet been reached.

On the minor questions of the tariff the president did not interfere. Having cast the bill in congress, and having satisfied himself by personal conference with members of both houses disposed to fight some of its provisions, that the bill would be passed, including those principles which he regarded as essential, the president practically dismissed the matter from his mind. The senate, acting upon its own initiative, revised the house bill further downward, but left the essentials nominated by the president alone.

Is Moses for the Money Bill?

Next the president took up the currency bill. Despite the divergence of opinion in congress as to the necessity for passing the currency bill at this session, the president delved into the subject on his own responsibility, weighed the sentiment of the country, investigated business conditions and decided on his own account that a currency bill as a supplement to tariff legislation was an immediate necessity. Having decided this much, he found himself confronted by an even greater divergence of opinion among his own party in congress as to what the currency bill should contain. Only a few members of both houses had given the subject any considerable amount of recent thought, and, surrounded by this small coterie, the president himself undertook to be the Moses of a leaderless majority on this subject.

After a comparatively brief period of arduous labor, during which valuable information was absorbed from every available source, the president was able to announce that a currency bill, embodying as had the tariff bill certain essential principles for which he as the head of the democratic party stood personally

A trained observer and critic tells the American people how the president has upset the insurgents and taught congress to recognize public sentiment as the only safe guide responsible, was ready for introduction in congress.

Insurgents are Active

The bill was introduced and went to the house committee on banking and currency, where it was opposed in part by a number of southern democrats whose knowledge of currency questions had been gained largely in the Bryan school. At the same time an insurrection broke out among the democrats in the senate which threatened for the time being to destroy all hope of the passage of currency legislation through that body at this session.

Taking up the house situation first, the president sent for the opponents of the administration measure personally and made clear to them his views. Turning to the senate situation, he firmly but kindly let it be known that he would not consent to an adjournment of this congress without currency legislation. The result was a vote in the democratic caucus in which the views of the president prevailed by a vote of more than three to one.

Turning back again to the house situation, both the president and Mr. Bryan sent letters to the democratic caucus reaffirming their entire allegiance to the pending bill as written. Again all party opposition broke and fled to cover, while only a remnant of "last ditchers" prepared to take the consequences from a resolute party leader.

Stand is Firm on Mexico

While the president was thus engaged in directing the progress of his party in congress, the Mexican situation reached a crisis. With the same pertinacity of purpose, the same foresight which characterized his actions in domestic affairs, and firmly intrenched in the belief that no civilized nation or private individual can afford to stand in the way of public sentiment where humanity and political morality are involved, the president approached the Mexican situation on the highest possible plane of statesmanship. Going straight to the issue with hand outstretched in friendly advance and with frank and open mind, the president sent John Lind as his personal representative to President Huerta of Mexico to tell him that he, of all Mexicans, should take the lead in restoring his country to a basis of civilized constitutional government and in restoring permanent peace within its boundaries. It is deemed not at all surprising that President Huerta, living as all Mexicans have lived in recent months, in an environment calculated to blunt the understanding of peace, except as achieved through the force of arms, failed to comprehend the full force of President Wilson's suggestion. Weighed solely from the standpoint of himself, personally, President Huerta could see nothing in the suggestion but the surrender of all that he had won in the conflict. The president, however, realizing the situation, not only refused to abandon his position, but emphasized the high moral duty which he conceived that Mexico and its citizens, both official and private, owed to civilization. The emphasis was applied in the same kindly spirit with which the original negotiations were conducted, the purpose of both being to secure action in Mexico in accordance with the well defined humanitarian principles of government and at the same time to retain and, in part, to regain some of the old-time friendly regard existing toward the United States in Mexico which, in the heat of the present conflict in that country, has at times been lost sight of.

Safeguard the Public

In meeting the issues which have confronted the administration up to this time, President Wilson has manifested several noteworthy personal characteristics. His methods have been direct, his language frank, and his adherence to well defined and easily recognized principles, resolute. His ideals of public service are high, and his determination, in the event of privileges granted by legislation, as illustrated by the currency bill, is that the interest of the public shall be safeguarded beyond doubt. The president has succeeded in impressing upon congress more than either of his immediate predecessors the necessity of rendering public service in complete accord with political promises.

The unanimity with which congress has accepted the inevitable in the matter of continuing the present session into one of record breaking length is evidence of the depth with which the convictions of the president have sunk into the congressional mind. The fact that congress has been brought to see something wholly outside of itself, and that something in the person of President Wilson representing public sentiment, is a distinct gain for which the president is entitled to receive the thanks of the public.

MAY SELL ASSETS OF DEFUNCT BANK

The assets of the defunct Commercial Bank of Vancouver, which failed for about $400,000 December 19, 1910, may be put up at auction and sold to the highest bidder, when satisfactory, and the affairs of the institution settled and the final payment made to the depositors, if the plan of M. B. Kies, receiver, has the approval of the superior court.

Mr. Kies wants authority to advertise for all or any part of the assets of the bank, including stocks, contracts of sales, real estate, and buildings, to be opened not later than September 22d, and sold for cash. The assets also include timber and farm lands in several counties in Oregon and Washington, and a big warehouse, supposed to be worth $100,000, in Seattle.

The property owned by the bank is paying all the expenses of the receivership and a little more. Two dividends of 10 per cent each have been paid to the depositors, but there is not another dividend in sight soon, unless some property can be sold.

McCoy & Co., 105 S. LaSalle Street, Chicago, announce that I. Newton Perry and George A. Garrett, formerly with the Chicago office of Lee, Higginson & Co., are now connected with the sales department of the former concern.

A charter has been granted in South Dakota for the new Sioux Falls Savings Association. The capital stock is $25,000.

A charter was issued for the Union National of San Diego, Cal., capital, $200,000.

INTEREST BEARING RESERVES

William A. Amberg of Chicago has published a pamphlet entitled "The New Finance: Interest-Bearing Bank Reserves Versus Idle Money." It embodies his suggestions for the form of a bill to provide for the funding of the national debt by the issue of interest-bearing, convertible bonds and for a currency interchangeable with the bonds to be known as "bond certificates." It is his suggestion that both the bonds and the "bond certificates" be used as bank reserves.

The first sections of his plan are:

1. The secretary of the treasury is hereby authorized and directed to fund the entire national debt by means of the issue of a series of gold bonds bearing semiannual interest coupons which bonds shall be available for interchange on demand with legal tender United States notes, said notes to be officially known as "bond certificates." The said interest-bearing bonds and bond certificates shall be acceptable as bank reserves for all banks, both national and state, and all corporations which are now or may hereafter be required to hold money reserves.

2. The bonds are to be issued in series of $75,000,000 each, maturing at dates six months apart, but in no case extending beyond a period of ten years from the several dates of their issue. Each maturing issue may be renewed for ten years, and all renewal issues may be again renewed for ten years. The first serial issue to be for a period of ten years and to bear interest at the rate of 2 per cent per annum. Each and all of said issues to be deposited with an officer of the treasury department, who shall be designated the "custodian of convertible bonds."

3. The secretary of the treasury shall cause to be prepared United States notes to be known as "bond certificates" in an amount not exceeding the original issues of said bonds. Said notes shall be of the same tenor and form as the present United States notes and shall be legal tender at their face value for all debts, public and private, except duties on imports and interest on the public debt, but shall bear in lieu of their title "United States note" the words "bond certificate" and a clause to the effect that they shall be exchangeable at their face or par value, at the treasury, any sub-treasury or other specially designated depository of the United States for said serial bonds, upon payment of the accrued interest on such bonds (ex coupon).

CHAPMAN COMMENTS ON CONDITIONS IN SOUTHWEST

Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis, referring to the prolonged drought in the Southwest, is of the opinion that this condition will accrue indirectly to the benefit of Minnesota. He believes the time to be ripe for an effective campaign to draw people to the state and put a permanent check upon immigration from Minnesota.

When interviewed after his return from the Kansas City conference, Mr. Chapman said:

"For forty consecutive days the thermometer has reached 100 degrees in southern Kansas, and for seventy-two days there has not been a drop of rain in some of the southern Kansas counties. The contrast between Kansas and Minnesota is so great that one who has not been down there cannot possibly appreciate it.

"I never saw so plucky a lot of people. Commercially, I was assured, the state is all right, and will get along on the surplus strength that has accrued from ten years of good crops. No one is complaining, bankers are confident, and I have no doubt that Kansas will pull through all right. But to see the brown baked boulevards of Kansas City, the golf links that have changed from stretches of green to acres of dust, and the trees blighted, is pitiable. If Minnesota people knew what the advantages of residence in this state really are, there would be an end to immigration southward, they would be more content to stay here, and many thousands more people would come."

Mr. Chapman said that he was interested in the cattle proposition because of the Minnesota pasturage and that he found that newspaper publicity has been wonderfully effective in connecting the animal with the feed.

"With 57,000 head of cattle received in Kansas City in two days, a record-breaking movement, there was no price decline such as might have been expected," Mr. Chapman said. "That was because there were buyers there from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Tennessee, Kentucky and Virginia. What the future will bring cannot be foretold, but it looks as if there will be much marketing of cattle and Minnesota may get many.

"To the extent that the newspapers have made known the situation they have been the means of saving hundreds of thousands, maybe millions of dollars to the unfortunate cattle raisers of Kansas and neighboring states who have had to sell, the whole future meat supply problem of the country has been improved thereby and the cattle distribution to other states will be a good thing."

LILLY IN BANK DEAL

E. A. Konants, R. C. Lilly, vice-president of the Merchants National in St. Paul; J. A. Reagan, president of the East St. Paul State; R. P. Ward, president of the Farmers National at Waseca, compose a syndicate which has purchased the First National of this city.

P. B. Wickham was the president and the majority stockholder. He is the head of other banks at Elgin and New Leipzig. Vice-President Watcher and Cashier Kuhl retain their interests and will remain with the bank.

TALKS ON THRIFT

Secretary E. G. McWilliam of the savings bank section is sending out a booklet—"Talks on Thrift"—written for the section by T. D. McGregor. The secretary also announces the speakers for the section meeting at Boston—morning and afternoon—to be held October 7th. The topline is Wm. J. Burns, the world-famous detective.

Small Banks Use Burroughs Ledger Posting Machines

The Peoples' Savings Bank of Midland, Michigan (2500 population) finds the Burroughs Ledger Posting Machine invaluable for Ledger Posting and for writing Customers' Statements.

When the Directors of this bank saw the machine in operation and realized the amount of time it would save on this work—besides being available for any other kind of bank figure work—they said "we need one of those!"

This is not an unusual case. Many small banks have already recognized the superiority of the Burroughs Ledger Posting Machine for bank figure work.

For instance, Magruder Bank, Port Clinton, Ohio, The National Bank, Kirksville, Mo., The Bank of Rowlands, Rowlands, N. C., The Alice State Bank, Alice, Texas, and many others—all in towns of less than 3,000 population—handle their ledger posting, statement or other figure work on this wonderful new Burroughs. They are all enthusiastic users. Some banks save from fifty to seventy-five per cent. of the time formerly required to handle the same work.

Of course, large banks also use this machine—The Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago, for instance, is already using 24—a total of 83 in Chicago at this date.

The machine subtracts Checks, adds Deposits and Old Balances, automatically "Figures" New Balances and marks Overdrafts. It is as far ahead of the ordinary machine as the ordinary machine is ahead of hand work.

All the work is done automatically on the machine. All the operator has to do is to put in the amounts.

Our new System Bulletin on Bank Statements contains valuable information furnished by enthusiastic bankers who are using this machine.

ONE CENT LETTER POSTAGE

tion on the part of the people whose enterprise it is. It is not legitimate argument to say that other departments of the government, such as the department of state, the department of war, or the navy department, are not self-sustaining, and, therefore, the post-office department need not be. The cases are not parallel. The other departments of the government discharge functions which the nation in its sovereign capacity only can perform, while the handling and carrying of the public mails by the government is an intrusion upon the field of possible private enterprise, and is justified only by the fact, which is indeed a fact, that the people can carry their own mail more cheaply, with better protection, and with quicker dispatch, than can individuals or private corporations. This being the case, it would seem that, as a sound business proposition and as a wise public policy, the returns for the service should, at all times, be equal to the expenditures; that the great ledgers of the postoffice department should be in balance and the service administered upon a self-supporting basis, the constant endeavor being the best and quickest service of which the system is capable and at the lowest cost consistent with the wisest economy and the highest efficiency.

It is, in my opinion, the duty of congress to fix for each of the four classes of mail-matter a rate of postage high enough to produce a revenue from such matter equal to the cost of handling and carriage, together with the making of such improvements from time to time as experience and good judgment may suggest, giving due allowance also for such indirect returns, if any, as may flow from any particular class of matter. This has been, and now is, largely, but not wholly, the prevailing legislative and administrative opinion in this country. However, certain inequalities in postage rates have long existed, and congress has shown an unwonted timidity in attempting their rectification.

Third-class matter, consisting chiefly of books and pamphlets, is taxed at a rate of one cent for each two ounces or part thereof, or eight cents per pound in gross, and the income from this class of matter has for a long time approximately equaled the cost of handling and carriage, our booksellers having been large and generous purveyors of public information without either receiving or asking any aid or subvention from the government in the nature of favored postage rates.

Prior to January 1, 1913, fourth-class matter, or merchandise, bearing a rate of one cent an ounce, was also self-supporting, but on that date the new parcel-post law became effective, with a scale of rates based upon zones and distances, a schedule believed both by the congress and the postoffice department to be self-sustaining, a half year's experience giving no grounds for doubt as to that belief.

But when we come to compare the revenue derived from first-class matter, chiefly letters, at a rate of two cents an ounce, or thirty-two cents a pound by the bulk, and that of second-class matter, newspapers and magazines, at a rate of one cent a pound, with the cost of handling and carriage, we are met with the startling result that first-class matter yields an income about twice as great as its cost, while second-class matter produces a revenue a little less than one-fifth of the overhead and transportation charges.

In 1843, seventy years ago, the postage on a half-ounce letter from New York City to Buffalo was twenty-five cents. Not long thereafter the rate was made general and uniform, and, by successive reduction, brought down to three cents an ounce in 1870, and to two cents an ounce in 1913, at which figure it has since stood.

While the rate is two cents an ounce, or thirty-two cents a pound in bulk as to letters, and one cent each for postal cards, there can be no less payment than two cents on a letter and one cent on a postal card, the average weight of the two combined being a little over three-tenths of an ounce, and there are approximately forty-two letters to the pound, yielding a gross postage of about eighty-four cents a pound, while the cost of handling and carriage is computed at forty-two cents a pound, making a clear profit of forty-two cents on every pound, or a gain of one hundred per cent.

For several years past there has been great quandary, much diversity of opinion, and not a little bitterness as to what is the actual cost to the government per pound of handling and carrying our newspapers and periodicals, technically called second-class mail-matter. After a prolonged and acrimonious controversy between the publishers and the postoffice department, the quarrel being often carried to the floor of congress, a joint resolution was passed by the sixty-first congress, on the 4th day of March, 1911, authorizing the president to appoint a commission on second-class mail-matter.

The commission consisted of Hon. Charles E. Hughes, associate justice of the supreme court of the United States; President A. Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University, and Harry A. Wheeler, president of the Association of Commerce of the city of Chicago, men whose character, ability, and experience should command for their findings and recommendations the respect and confidence of congress and the country.

After extensive hearings, prolonged inquiry, and full deliberation, the commission reported to the president and to congress that, without taking into account certain items of cost incurred by the department, which were not definitely assignable, and after making due allowance for all economies effected by the department, the cost of handling and transportation was yet more than five cents a pound, while, under existing law, the postage paid is but one cent a pound, clearly a loss of over 4 cents a pound as determined by this able and disinterested authority.

If the findings of the commission be reliable, and indeed I believe them to be most conservative, then the postoffice department sustained a loss of $40,000,000 in the handling and carriage of second-class mail-matter during the fiscal year 1912.

That we may compare our second-class rates with those of foreign countries, I quote briefly from the schedules of several European countries, from which it will be seen that while we levy a rate of 1 cent a pound, they charge several times as much, although they are many times smaller in area than our country, requiring a much shorter haul, and consequently a service less costly of performance.

In Great Britain, with an area of but one forty-first that of the United States, we find a rate of one cent per piece for local delivery by fast mail, and for long distances, where parcel post is used, a graduated rate of six cents for the first pound, with an increase of two cents for each additional pound to and including 11 pounds.

In Germany, with one-seventeenth the area of the United States, we find a graduated rate by the ounce, within certain distance, equal to 4 4-5 cents per pound.

In France, with one-seventeenth the area of the United States, we find a rate by the ounce, graduated within certain limitations, equivalent to four cents a pound.

In Italy, with one thirty-fifth of the area of the United States, we find a rate of 1 1-5 cents a pound for daily newspapers, and 2 cents a pound for all other newspapers and periodicals.

In Holland, with an area of one two-hundred-and-eighty-fourth of the United States, we find a rate of 1 4-5 cents a pound.

In Australia, with four-fifths of the area of the United States, we find a rate of 1 1/4 cents per pound.

In Belgium, with one three-hundred-and-eighteenth of the area of the United States, there is a rate of 1 1-5 cents per pound.

Under the provisions of the international postal convention newspapers and periodicals are mailed by all the signatory parties at the uniform rate of 1 cent for each 2 ounces or fraction thereof—practically 8 cents per pound.

But my theses is the feasibility and desirability of one-cent letter postage, and not, primarily, the increase of second-class rates. What I have said, and shall hereafter say, on the latter subject is only incidental to the first-named object. It is far from me to make an onset on newspapers and periodicals. I recognize their great service in the enlightenment of our people and in the development of our country. They are, and have been, the great universities of learning for the public, and in the earlier stages of their development they needed the fostering care of the government, but the time has come when the cry of governmental aid by way of subsidies to infant industries has but little standing with the American people. The learned commission to which I have referred, after viewing the subject from every angle, and in the light of every interest, recommended an increase of one cent a pound only for the present, although they found the cost to the government to be in excess of 5 cents. I agree with this view. Surely a subvention of 3 cents a pound is enough. We want our newspapers and magazines to continue, and to grow and prosper, and if the publishers can not publish and sell them at present prices, and make a reasonable profit, with an increase of 1 cent per pound in postage, then let their selling prices be increased, and the additional burden be passed on to the consumer, but, I respectfully submit, it is a manifest discrimination to tax 100,000,000 people in order to favor 30,000 people.

That great merchant prince, John Wanamaker of Philadelphia, former postmaster general, and, I think, the ablest postal authority in the world, recently said:

"I am a firm believer in one-cent letter postage, and think the government would have a larger revenue from it after the first two years than it has to-day from two-cent postage when people have time to realize the facilities afforded for communication with each other."

The cheap mailing of the personal, social, and business letter is of deep personal concern to every man, woman and child. Other classes of mail-matter affect only a portion of the public, but the letter affects all. The people have heretofore uncomplainingly paid an excessive rate of postage on letters in order to meet the deficit caused by deficient rates on other matter, but they are now demanding that they shall be required to pay for what they get only, and that they shall get what they pay for. A proper equalization of postage rates will make this reform easily feasible. The public mind is now keenly alive to the subject. All classes of our people are now taking a sharp look into the popular phases of the postal service. All are sensitive to their rights, however small, and to the equalization of public burdens. The payment of 84 cents per pound on their letters, caused by the payment of 2 cents an ounce on underweight pieces, a clear profit to the government of 42 cents a pound, the profit being applied to the deficit caused by a loss on other classes of matter, is indeed a heavy strain on the patience of the people. We had as well look the situation squarely in the face and recognize conditions as they are. The demands of the public will not cease until all inequalities are removed, for they will not suffer class legislation, pure and simple, benefiting a portion of the people at the expense of the rest. No far-fetched explanations or subtle refinements will satisfy the people or blind them to the existence of glaring discriminations. The inequality is too plain to deceive even the unwary.

Now, repeating and answering the first query in my subject, namely, whether one-cent letter postage is feasible, I say unhesitatingly that it is. The answer is neither intricate nor involved. It is a plain proposition of the enactment of a statute by congress reducing letter postage from 2 cents an ounce to 1 cent an ounce, and the increased use of the cheapened facility by the public. Under any view of the situation, the pound rate on second-class matter should be raised from 1 cent a pound to 2 cents a pound. Even then we shall still be granting to them a subsidy of at least 3 cents a pound. And, I may be pardoned for saying here that these are not happy days for public bounties and subsidies. With this increase, we shall be able to raise at least $12,000,000 from that source, making a total of approximately $25,000,000. In my opinion we shall have an increase of two-thirds in the use of first-class matter for the first year after the reduction, and thereafter its use will be more than doubled, and, even if no increase of second-class rates is made, we shall, almost at once, resume our self-sustaining basis, and the reduction should be made regardless of whether there is, or is not, congressional action on the prevailing rates on newspapers and periodicals.

And, now, is it desirable? Manifestly, yes, from every possible viewpoint. The great masses of the people desire it and need it, for it is a well-known law of our development that public enlightenment, social peace, material prosperity, and respect for law, order, and religion increase with improved and cheapened means of inter-communication among the people.

Chief among its beneficiaries will be the business men and business interests of the United States. We all know how the full-paid, sealed, first-class packet of mail is respected over and above the loose, unsealed circular. Our commercial advertising will, I think, be doubled within the first year, and immeasurably increased thereafter.

Hon. William M. Dullitt, until recently solicitor-general of the United States, expressed this view:

"Every man, woman and child who mails a letter is being overtaxed for the benefit of the publisher. Ninety million people are taxed for the benefit of thirty thousand publishers. They are overcharged seventy million dollars a year to make up the loss sustained in carrying periodicals at the low second-class rate. We thus see that congress has discriminated against the individual and in favor of the publisher."

Shall every man, woman and child in the United States who mails a personal, social, or business letter be required to contribute 1 cent toward the expense of handling and transporting other peoples' mail, in which they have no interest, and from which they derive no profit? And shall they be longer denied penny letter postage when it is a demonstrated fact that 1 cent an ounce will pay for the handling and carriage of their letters, and when such reduction would contribute immensely to the advancement and well-being of the American people?

E. F. Tolman, who has been assistant cashier of the Peoples Bank, Pratt, Kan., for some time, has been promoted to the cashiership.

WATER FAMINE IN SOUTHERN ILLINOIS

Centralia, Ill., Sept. 3.—A water famine in this section causes farmers to worry for the safety of their stock. Wells, cisterns, creeks and almost every spring for miles around are empty.

Many of the farmers are hauling water drawn from the city hydrants. A new two-billion-gallon reservoir has an abundant supply, but it is being conserved.

Practically no rain has fallen in this section for three months and the heat has been intense. To-day the mercury registered 100, standing at that mark for about two hours. The crop loss is the largest that has ever been known in this section.

NORTHWEST CORN YIELDS

Minneapolis.—The office of the state immigration commissioner has reports from southern Minnesota indicating a forty-five to sixty bushel yield for corn, which is good and means a big crop. Minnesota's corn crop promises on the whole to be excellent. This is true of North Dakota. While North Dakota cuts very little figure as a corn state, yet the crop is important to the prosperity of that state, in proportion altogether greater than the figure for yields would indicate, as it is fodder crop mainly and the state has turned to dairying in the past few years in many counties.

CURRENCY BILL REPORTED TO HOUSE

The currency bill, as approved by the democratic caucus was reported to the house this week by the committee on banking and currency. Accompanying it was a report discussing the theory of the measure and outlining the views of the democratic members of the committee.

The majority declared that the bill "is intended to bring about necessary changes in the present banking and currency system of the United States and to correct long standing evils that have had a slow and deep rooted growth. It aims at the rectification of the essential defects of the present system, although it does not seek to make all the innovations that might, from an ideal standpoint, be deemed desirable."

Reviewing the arguments against the so-called Aldrich plan outlined by the national monetary commission, and against all central bank plans suggested, the report said:

"After looking over the whole ground and after examining the various suggestions for legislation, the committee on banking and currency is firmly of the opinion that any effective legislation on banking must include the following fundamental elements, which it considers indispensable in any measure likely to prove satisfactory to the country:

"Creation of a joint mechanism for the extension of credit to the banks which possess sound assets and which desire to liquidate them for the purpose of meeting legitimate commercial, agricultural, and industrial demands on the part of their clientele.

"Ultimate retirement of the present bond secured currency, with suitable provision for the fulfillment of government obligations to bond holders, coupled with the creation of a satisfactory flexible currency to take its place.

"Provision for better extension of American banking facilities in foreign countries to the end that our trade abroad may be enlarged and that American business men in foreign countries may obtain the accommodations they require in the conduct of their operations."

DARING ROBBERY

A messenger for the Garfield Park State Savings, at 4404 West Madison Street, was robbed on Thursday of this week of a satchel containing $4,800 in currency and more than $10,000 in checks, many of them easily negotiable. The robbers used an automobile to make way with their loot. The robbery, one of the most daring in the history of the city, was committed immediately in front of the bank building and was witnessed by several persons who did not seem to realize that a crime was being perpetrated. The Illinois Bankers Association has offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of the bandits.

MONEY IN CHICAGO

The minimum rate for money in Chicago continues to be about 6 per cent. Call money renewals were accepted this week at 5 per cent and the rates for commercial paper were around 6 per cent. In some circles the opinion is that the end of the year will bring

SOUTH CHARLESTON

President S. D. Fitton and Secretary S. B. Rankin of the Ohio Bankers Association were on hand this week for the big convention at Cleveland. The Ohio organization still continues to occupy a foremost place among the leading bankers' associations of the country. The total number of banks now enrolled is 964, a net gain of 61 members over last year.

Mr. Fitton is president of the First National of Hamilton and Mr. Rankin is president of the Bank of South Charleston.

greater strength in money than at present and in others it is believed that the early crop movement will result in redundancy before the holidays. The demand for funds is increasing.

Charles G. Fox, cashier of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings, said:

"The movement of grain here is heavy and making large inroads on reserves. Board of Trade borrowings are heavy, and in a measure larger than in preceding years at this period."

BANK EXAMINERS MAY LOSE POSITIONS

It was rumored in Washington this week that examiners Starek of New York and Reeves of Chicago will be removed from office as a result of disclosures in connection with an alleged excessive loan made by the National City Bank of New York in financing the Chicago traction merger.

HARRIS RETURNS FROM EAST

N. W. Harris, of the Harris Trust and Savings, has returned to the city after having spent the summer in the East, largely motor-ing in the Adirondacks and the Berkshires.

RETURNS FROM VACATION

William B. Lavinia, assistant cashier of the National Bank of the Republic, has returned from a two weeks' vacation spent in Wisconsin.

E. D. HULBERT RETURNS

E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust, returned this week from a visit in the East. Mr. Hulbert spent several weeks motoring through New England. He is pleased with the passage of the tariff bill and believes monetary conditions are soundly based in spite of the damage to the corn crop.

A new bank is being organized in Chicago by Moses C. Isaac and Herman Schiff, to be known as the Schiff State Bank.

ALTHOUGH Chairman Jas. M. Hurst has an "eight-page letter of instructions," he still is in trouble.

MR. HURST as a member of the general committee on entertainment for the Illinois Bankers Convention became chairman of the banquet or group-dinner committee.

THE council dinner as such is a thing of the past in Illinois just as it is at A. B. A. conventions, and this year the high-and-mighty member of the executive council will meet and eat with the group members.

CARDS sent out by headquarters failed to say that it is a stag affair and will cost one dollar as usual. No ladies can be present and no guests.

THERE isn't room and the program of stunts has not been arranged for ladies. The dollar will be exacted so as not to set a bad precedent for the smaller cities, but the dinner and the entertainment will cost a great deal more.

ON the acceptance card a line for "guests" was included by an oversight, but there "aint a-goin' to be no guests," and no ladies.

CHAIRMAN HURST will send out letters detailing above in all cases where necessary, but we give the tip so that other plans can be made for the ladies the evening the stag dinner is held.

ONE other little tip from another source. The "guest" with the check perforator exhibit and the "guest" who is a bond salesman in disguise (unless members) will not be in on the souvenirs nor on the joy riding and theater parties.

A LOT of real bankers will be glad to hear that. Generally these outsiders have had front seats.

CHICAGO can afford to set a new mark on these restrictions for the smaller cities which may entertain the bankers to follow.

IT is probable, too, that those who want to take home a souvenir to the absent wife may meet with difficulty. Better bring friend wife along.

"FRED" HOOPES, affectionately referred to as "our next treasurer" by many A. B. A. members, has a question up for decision.

HOOPES claims Joseph Hirsh of Texas looks more like a real farmer than even Farmer Joe himself. He sends along a snapshot of Hirsh in his "uniform," and dares Chapman's friends to the proof.

FRANK D. BRUNDAGE, assistant manager of K. N. & K., New York, is sending out a nice ticket book for those who expect to go to Boston. Write him kindly and see if anything happens.

WE haven't seen anything nicer than the letters Frank V. Baldwin of New York is sending out in behalf of his friend, William A. Law of Philadelphia.

HE doesn't wish to offend the "most ethical" and says so. Mr. Baldwin comes from Dixie also.

R. D. DUNCAN of Little Rock in a splendid interview gives it as his opinion that the new currency bill will be amended so as to "get by" at this session of congress. He is a close student of the situation.

REGISTRATION for the colleges and schools in Urbana will be held at the University of Illinois, September 22d and 23d, instruction beginning Wednesday, September 24th. The College of Medicine and the College of Dentistry of the University of Illinois, located in Chicago, open on Wednesday, October 1st; the School of Pharmacy, also in Chicago, opens September 16th.

ARTHUR M. BETTS, well known in bond house circles in Chicago, has been made manager of the bond department of Alfred L. Baker & Co.

WM. A. HEATH won the south-paw golf tournament—open to all comers. Oh, yes, he had a small handicap, too trifling to mention.

WL. GUCKERT has been elected president of the First National Bank of Allegheny, filling the vacancy caused some time ago by the resignation of Jas. S. Kuhn. Mr. Guckert has been vice-president of the bank since 1904; prior to this he was secretary of the Workingmans Savings Bank and Trust Company, with which institution he was associated for a number of years.

STATE and private banks in Ohio will be requested to give information on farm land mortgages in their next reports to State Bank Superintendent Lattanner. This information will be placed at the disposal of the legislative committee which is investigating foreign loans on farms.

THIS month Ohio's private banks passed under the control of the state bank superintendent, who may now examine them and require them to furnish statements on their condition as he may call for them.

THERE are between 230 and 240 private banks in that state, and a majority of them have expressed their willingness to aid the department in putting the law for their regulation into successful operation.

THE following is said to have been written by E. D. Durham, in an idle moment, while waiting for it to rain:

The hen will make an awful fuss
And scolds like an old dame;
The incubator makes no muss,
But gets there just the same.

EVER hear of "The Day Book—an address newspaper"—printed in Chicago? It will make a hit with any one well enough posted to appreciate it. N. D. Cochrane, 500 S. Peoria Street, is editor and publisher.

THE list of officers of the S. D. Bankers Association roster reminds one of B. L. T.'s jokes in the Tribune. They are Beebee, Delicate and Kiddoo.

CUTTINGHAM & BOAR have a private bank in a prosperous Georgia town.

JOS. NORWOOD, president of the Union National of Columbia, S. C., has sent out a little tract on "A Proposed Remedy for the Constant Redemption of National Circulation," which bankers and financial students will find very interesting.

FOR four weeks Rollin P. Grant of the Irving National, New York, was roaming about in the Berkshires, the White Mountains and "down in Maine." Came back feeling like a prize fighter.

THERE isn't such a difference in the currency opinions of leading bankers after all. Some wear theirs a la pompadour and others part them neatly down the middle. That's all!

ARTHUR REYNOLDS was in Chicago this week. Says the Boston program is holding up to expectations with never a fall-down. Sure it will be a hummer.

B. F. HARRIS with his "question and answer" letter to Illinois bankers on farm credit subjects wasn't any too early on the job.

THE department of agriculture is getting information along the same lines from six bankers and six farmers in every county in the United States.

IT will be a formidable array and as in the currency matters the administration will be well equipped with arguments. Illinois will be in at the very start of things once more.

GEORGE WOODRUFF ran a big ad in the convention issues of the Helena Independent inviting "Illinois and Eastern" business direct. He has a fine system for collections.

THE mayor of Davenport, Iowa, has a wise head. He secured A. F. Dawson on his library board and H. J. Haas on the levee commission.

MR. HAAS is president of the Scott County Savings, and Mr. Dawson of the famous first First National. Great stunt for Mayor Mueller.

THE "movies" take in at the door more money each year than the government collects under the Payne-Aldrich tariff by holding up even the women and children. Do they add to the high cost of living? They do!

THE wrangling between certain Washington officials and a large New York institution which has been conspicuous rather by its efforts to project itself into the currency fight than by any success in the direction of contributing valuable ideas thereto, may be entertaining to the multitude, but certainly is not elevating in character, and should be stopped.—The New York Financier.

out discussion at the big Chicago currency conference. Had the institution referred to not been represented by an able banker and a clever diplomat a record might have been created.

FOR the second time the government has charged (this time by Senator Owen) that a certain New York bank "is promoting and directing a propaganda to discredit the administration's monetary reform bill."

"ONE thousand barrels a day at Bangor, Mich.," was a big headline which sent three Chicago oil promotors on the dead run to catch the first Michigan Central train.

THEY found the Bangor Barrel Company turning out the barrels all right but not the oil. Slow train back to La Salle Street.

W. T. FENTON will not be on the Chicago-Boston special. He expects to be in some near-by town at the time and "find his way over" for the fireworks.

FRANK J. GRAHAM of Graham & Sons bank was named by the county court to appraise the estate of the late James J. Townsend. A half-million was the street estimate.

EDWARD D. KEYS and wife of Springfield have joined the big Chicago-Boston special. Count on E. L. Johnson and wife of Waterloo also.

WALTER KASTEN and wife of Milwaukee are among the elect. So are George H. Russel, J. H. Johnson and a dozen others from Michigan, not on the published list.

SO far as we can see by the names the September grand jury will have not less than three Americans on it.

CONTINENTAL AND COMMERCIAL BANK building is nearing the finish mark. Leases are being made for May 1, 1914, five months after the time named in the contract for completion.

THE three allied banks will occupy the first three floors and the steel interests six entire floors. Hundreds of well known individuals, firms, and smaller corporations have taken space.

THE success of this new building and the profits on the turn-over of former buildings acquired in consolidation would make a reputation for any banker.

IN the case of Mr. Reynolds it was simply adding to.

THE Chicago-Boston special will be of all-steel cars, which is "the only real thing."

J. M. MILES is now a v. p. at the Standard Trust and Frank T. Joyner, late of East St. Louis, is the new cashier. Fine!

CARTER GLASS thinks the house will pass the currency bill within a week from its introduction. Going some!

E. KIRBY SMITH of Shreveport has had his picture taken behind a very convincing string of fish. Looks much like those which figured in the foreground of the N. P. Gatling group?

THE republican papers are saying that "all other aspirants for the Illinois senatorship are quitting in Sullivan's favor." Beware, Roger, beware when it looks too easy!

PRESIDENT EDWARD E. PAYNE of the Central Manufacturing Bank isn't going to the Boston convention this year.

ON October 15th he is to be married to Miss Virginia Knox Mitchell, also of this city. His vacation this year will be his honeymoon trip.

THE two big Chicago trains to Boston are exactly alike as to equipment and armament. There will be fourteen-inch guns on both.

RUMORS have been going about that the big Third National of St. Louis was scouring the country for a big man to be first vice-president.

PRESIDENT F. O. WATTS, when in Chicago a few days ago, gave out no such impression. Our guess is that no one will be allowed to step in between the president and R. S. Hawes.

HAWES has had a world of outside experience which is the foundation upon which the bank builder erects his structure.

MR. WATTS was hep to the St. Louis situation before he crossed the big bridge. He had watched the fight for southwest business going on for years between St. Louis and Kansas City, with Chicago and St. Louis wildly reaching out for their fair share.

HE sent for Frank Houston, one of the cleverest youngsters in the field and trained under Mr. Watts's own supervision.

THE first report showed that southeastern business was the new Third National policy, also quite new to St. Louis. Something like one hundred and fifty new accounts were garnered from Tennessee and Kentucky.

IT seems likely that Mr. Watts will be able to use several young fellows, "the more nearly like Houston they are the better," for a still further invasion of the southeast.

FORMERLY New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore got it nearly all. Recently it has been coming toward St. Louis and Chicago in paying quantities.

IT'S good business, too, for the southeastern bankers are skilled, conservative and punctual. That's quite a trinity of virtues, even in the banking business.

WE have it by wire from Messrs. Sullivan and Edens at Cleveland that Senator Owen "captured the Ohio convention" and would be a big card in Chicago.

A. W. ELDBERGER and W. R. Creer of Cleveland will join the Chicago-Boston special at that point. "C'm on over," all you good fellows.

ALREADY we have referred to the gentlemanly, courteous letter sent out by Frank V. Baldwin. There are others not so "ethical" and here is one, bar names, which is desperately nervy, and Mr. Law surely doesn't gain by such. The next three paragraphs constitute the newest offense.

AS a member of the nominating committee from Georgia, I, of course, am interested in the coming convention at Boston.

I LEARN that you are a member of the nominating committee from your state and that at this time you have not expressed yourself as favoring any of the avowed candidates for the vice-presidency. Our membership in — have requested me to vote for Mr. Law of Philadelphia, and as I have the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with him, it is a very pleasant duty to perform.

I TRUST sincerely that it will be your pleasure to support the candidacy of Mr. Law, as I am quite sure, from what I know of him, that he will acquit himself creditably in the high position if elected. I will be very glad indeed to hear from you as to how you feel about it.

ONE member of the committee replies as follows, which about states it.

I HAVE your kind letter of September 8th, in regard to the action of the nominating committee at Boston. In reply will say that I look forward to meeting you in Boston with pleasure, but regret I can not meet your wishes and vote for your friend, Mr. Law. It has been my pleasure to know Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis for a long time, and I regard him very highly.

MANY of my friends speak very highly of Mr. Law, both as a banker and as a gentleman. I am sure if he should be nominated and elected he will fill the office with honor to the association and credit to himself, but I believe that the work done by Mr. Chapman through the agricultural committee and other committees of the association for years entitles him to the position.

I BELIEVE that the most important work the American bankers have before them at the present time is developing the agricultural resources of the country, and from the long years of study and work that Mr. Chapman has given to this proposition, I believe him to be in better position to handle this work, and that he can do more for the association and more for the country at large in the position that his friends are seeking for him, than could any other man, no matter how able.

UNDER the circumstances, you can readily understand that I will vote for Mr. Chapman at Boston, as early as they will let me.

Frank Bailey, vice-president Title Guarantee and Trust Company of New York City, in able discussion of an important subject. Suggests a possible plan

The discussions during the past six months in the press, in congress and on the platform have probably brought to the attention of all interested in finance and in the improvement of our producing population the necessity for some permanent improvement in the relations between the borrower owning a farm or a small dwelling and the lender on bond and mortgage. For the purposes of this discussion I am bound to assume that everyone present is familiar with the disadvantages under which the borrower on bond and mortgage now labors. To a great extent those relations have not yet passed beyond the primitive relations of barter. Rates of interest and terms of mortgages on adjoining properties of equal value frequently differ as a result of the negotiations between the borrower and lender.

There exists in this country no central organization of sufficient size and importance to act as a proper intermediary between the borrower and lender, or of sufficient strength to influence the rate of interest or the terms of borrowing. Of course, a borrower wishing money on bond and mortgage must find a lender, and in most cases the lenders are now represented by agents who act as intermediary or middlemen. The charge of these agents of necessity is so material as to add much to the rate of interest paid, even if distributed over the term of the mortgage.

How the borrower on bond and mortgage is compelled to raise his money in the poorest possible market, inasmuch as it is a retail rather than a wholesale market; how he is compelled to take money for a short term of years; how he is generally forced to repay or renegotiate a new loan at the end of each period, usually three years, with new charges again to be added to the interest; how the maturity of a mortgage frequently comes in times of panic when borrowing is most difficult; how the surcharge interest, to wit, the expense of placing and replacing a loan, works to the detriment of the borrower; how the opportunities for the repayment of sums borrowed (except in bulk) are limited by the requirements of the lender—are too well known to need discussion here. The conditions are wasteful, extravagant and unnecessary.

The paper by Ambassador Herrick circulated by the department of state shows with great care how other nations have solved this problem. It is to my mind, however, a little unfortunate that the discussion has so far been limited to the necessities of the farm owner—as if he were the only borrower worthy of consideration. The borrowers in the towns and cities, men who are struggling to own their own homes are likewise entitled to relief in the same way as the borrowers on farms, and it is for all these classes of people that any scheme of relief should be planned.

The ideal should be considered first—and let us talk for a moment of the ideal. There should be one or more places in every state of the Union where a borrower on bond and mortgage having satisfactory collateral could borrow money at a standard rate of interest, limited by the rate paid for the money by the lender. Money so lent should run for a period of years, but under terms compelling the borrower to repay the money lent in small annual installments running over a period of years, the term depending upon the class of property offered as security. Only borrowers having productive property of earning capacity and living on their farms or in their own dwellings should be entitled to borrow in this way.

These mortgages should bear, say six per cent interest, possibly six and one-half per cent, and out of the interest from one-half to one per cent should be applied in reduction of the principal each year, and the borrower should have the privilege of anticipating payments, which payments when so anticipated should be credited to future reduction requirements, at the option of the borrower. This would act as a great safeguard to the borrower in that successful crops in one year would insure him to a great extent against the failures of a subsequent year. The lender should also have the right to waive the necessity of installment payments any year if so desired, to the end that relief might be furnished in times of undue stress.

The cost of obtaining this money, to wit, appraisal fees, title fees, mortgage tax, etc., should be fixed and never repeated during the term of the mortgage excepting where reappraisal might be necessary. Such an institution should be prepared to lend money to the farmer, to the owner of homes in the cities and in the suburbs on a percentage of value running from forty to sixty per cent, according to the marketability of the property.

The terms of lending and rate of interest should be uniform in every state, excepting that the time of total repayment might vary, and a state not willing to pass fair laws determining the relations between borrowers and lenders should not be favored with the services of such an institution.

Assuming that such an institution were prepared to accept mortgages at practically all times upon such rates as were fair to both borrower and lender, I know of nothing that would be more ideal for the advancement of the thrifty and the worthy savers of the nation.

It does not seem necessary at this point for me to dwell for a moment upon the necessity of starting such an institution if such ideals can be nearly approached. At the present time various states in the Union are passing laws enabling the formation of companies to lend money along the methods I have discussed. Such laws, in my opinion, are entirely futile, in that they do not provide any method of furnishing the necessary capital to lend. Unless the state is prepared to underwrite and guarantee the debentures which must be sold for the purposes of furnishing this long-term money (a plan I do not favor or believe to be necessary) the capital to lend I do not believe will be forthcoming. Many institutions will be formed, however, which will attempt to lend money on the long-term basis, but they will be managed primarily for the profit of the stockholders and will only add one more to those institutions of which there are now so many, practically brokerage concerns obtaining from the borrower the maximum amount of interest in order to pay the lender a rate of interest sufficient to coax him to take that which he considers to be a risky investment. In no way can the money be furnished upon terms which will be of great and proper benefit to the borrowers unless there is formed an institution national in its scope, chartered by the national government with a capital of not less than ten millions of dollars, with governmental representation on the board, with an audit made under the direction of the government every six months or once a year, with a management which starts with the idea that its money shall be lent primarily for security, secondarily at the lowest rate of interest compatible with the rate at which its debentures can be sold; probably three-quarters of one per cent per annum difference between the rate charged and the rate borne by the debentures would be ample. Such a company must have a manager selected from those men in the nation who wish the country well and will use it not for exploitation but for the advancement of the interests of the borrower. Such an institution probably would of necessity form subcompanies in each state, one-half of the capital of which should be contributed by local interests, and each local company would in turn guarantee the parent company. The vast extent of our country requires personal knowledge of each locality and efficiency in the valuation of property for the purposes of loan can only be obtained from those who would lose because of errors in judgment. A man is very much more certain to be sure of the value of a piece of property on which a loan is to be made if he is a stockholder in the company lending the money. Fraud, acceptance of commissions and the untoward things which have been attending corporate management in the past should be punished severely under the terms of the act forming the company. A company thus formed with a capital of ten to twenty million dollars, although an infinitesimal part of the amount required for this purpose, would enable the company to start with the necessary credit. Its character and the character of its management must then establish a market for its debentures, from the sale of which the business of the company can proceed. Its debentures backed by such a capital would day by day grow in popularity until they would as in other countries be a favorite investment.

In twenty years the company of which I am an officer, lending money in Greater New York only, has sold and guaranteed the payment of nearly four hundred million dollars of mortgages. So the establishment of first-grade credit is a necessity for the success of such an organization, for millions of money would be required. The company's credit should be artificially stimulated only by making the debentures legal investments for trustees and institutions in every state of the Union. Any other artificial stimulus, such as endorsement by state or nation or by lottery (which is the favorite method in France), can but lead, especially in case of state endorsement, to tremendous disaster.

In proposing a plan for such a company to be chartered by congress, I appreciate that I am treading on dangerous ground. I know that there will be danger of centralization and that any management is more ready to lend its money where it can see the security than where it cannot. The tendency of the management of the Credit Foncier in France has been to lend its money in the cities and not sufficiently in the country. I know that corruption, where there is no standard value to real estate—a piece of property being worth what you can make the other man think it is worth—is almost too probable in such an institution; still, I believe that there are honest men in corporations who can be drafted for this work—men who are capable and efficient and wish this country well, who could make this plan succeed. The ambition of any man or men who desire the good of this country would find ample scope in such a concern.

Decentralization could be accomplished by this series of subcompanies which, while controlled by the parent company, would have the individual capital of investors in each state, and each state, therefore, would look after itself and compare fairness on the part of the general management. Such a company should not be formed for farmers alone, for a man trying to own a home in the city is as worthy of aid as the farmer, and the success of the institution would come from the aid which it could give to all classes—both the farmer and artisan.

No plan for the formation of a company has shown a way to obtain capital in sufficient quantities to be of any real benefit, and I believe that the plan I have outlined is the only plan which can furnish the credit necessary for success.

I have in mind many of the safeguards necessary to the success of such an organization, but those are details which need not be discussed to-day. I would, however, suggest the organization of such a company and believe in its success, because of the success of a smaller organization operating in the city of New York, an organization which has limited its profits practically to one-half of one per cent on each mortgage, has looked at the security first and its profit second, has been honest and profitable to a remarkable extent. I believe that the profit to the stockholders must come from a great volume of business done on a narrow margin rather than from "hog" profits made on a little business, which is now the standard of most of the mortgage companies doing business.

I would further extend the powers of this company so that it would have the right to purchase the obligations of small and large municipalities and sell its debentures against those obligations, so that the rate of interest to the small school district and the small borrower would be materially reduced. I would also give it power to furnish the necessary capital through the sale of its debentures for the advancement of those institutions which might be formed for short-term credits to the agricultural interests, such institutions as are known as Raiffeisen Banks.

There has been considerable discussion of the method of improving the short-term agricultural credit, but there has been up to the present time no method offered for furnishing the necessary capital. Such a company could furnish the capital.

One of the great benefits of such an organization properly managed, in addition to making thrift to the borrower possible, is that it would teach the lesson of thrift by compulsion, for every mortgage would compel annual reduction by the borrower small in amount but sufficient to retire the entire principal during the term of the mortgage. It would also afford the plain people of this nation a sound investment at a fair rate of interest fairly negotiable, which is something that the people of this country need. The appalling sums of money which are lost by our people who are otherwise astute is lamentably enormous. In no country is the "gold-brick" dealer and the patent medicine man so successful. Our unwillingness to accept the advice of the professional banker in our investments and of a doctor of medicine for our ills is altogether too characteristic and unfortunate. The professional banker and the individual who knew of an investment which did not increase or decrease in value, which paid a fair return, would quickly advocate the purchase of the debentures of this company. In the end they would become very attractive to those who save, so that the capital of this country which is now wasted in improper investment would be conserved to the advantage of those who save, and the entire nation would be the gainer. If such a company could accomplish all of these ideals, of course, we should start it this afternoon. Results will not come quickly. It will require a long agitation to produce a company such as I have outlined, and it will require most careful management to make it a success.

I plead with you for your interest in this subject as I believe it is not a subject for politics, but it is a subject which goes right to the price of the food we eat. If a man owning a little farm and wishing to borrow $500, because of the cost of obtaining his money and the high rate of interest paid, pays $20 a year more than he otherwise should pay, it means that man produces less produce each year than he otherwise would produce if his capital came to him at a cheaper rate. If the little borrower can be brought to the lender through the mediary of a great central institution, whose size would be a tower of financial strength, whose management would give it a character not to be questioned by any one in the country, the money of the masses can be obtained to help the masses. If, however, we make our aim any little goal, such as a little company with a petty capital, we will only put one more link in the chain around the borrower's neck. If we who are here are willing to put up the prescription which I have outlined, I think we will find the public prepared to take it, and personally I have no doubt of the cure, although I appreciate that the disease is so deep-seated that improvement will be slow though certain.

Boston Convention

The 1913 convention of the big American Bankers Association to be held in Boston will be one of the most important in the history of the organization. The subject of currency reform now occupying so prominent a place in the public mind will be up for discussion, as will matters pertaining to improved agriculture and vocational education.

The banking interests have been a strong influence in the movement for better country life conditions and agricultural topics have occupied a conspicuous place on their convention programs; and the Boston convention will be no exception.

The Hub is an ideal city in which to hold a convention, possessing excellent hotel facilities, transportation and entertainment features, and, in short, all of those things which go to make the stay of a stranger within the confines of a city attractive. The numerous points of historical interest which Boston contains cannot fail to interest and attract the visiting bankers.

Secretary Fred E. Farnsworth is sending out programs for the auspicious occasion. Monday will be given up to committee meetings and a session of the executive council; Tuesday the various sections of the associations will hold their meetings.

The first session of the convention proper will occur Wednesday. At this time reports will be received from the general secretary, treasurer, general counsel, chairman of the executive council and the standing protective committee. These will be followed by a report of the currency commission and discussion and debate led by members of the commission. In the afternoon the sections will report and the committee on constitutional revision will submit its draft for a revised constitution.

Thursday morning will be given up to agriculture. The committee on agricultural and financial development and education, of which Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis is chairman, will present its report of the year's work. There will be addresses by James J. Hill on "Agriculture in the United States;" Dr. George E. Vincent, president of the University of Minnesota, "The Tendency Toward Practical Education," and Sam Jordan of Pettis county, Mo., on "The County Agent." There will be plenty of opportunity for discussion.

PRIVATE BANK WRECKED BY EXPLOSION

Two explosions wrecked the private bank of A. Conforti and a three-story building at 912 South Halsted Street this week and injured twenty persons.

The explosion blew in the windows, splintered doors and cracked walls. Fire followed the blasts, and the firemen were unable to fight the fire until employees of the Peoples Light and Power Company shut off the gas.

Conforti admitted that he received three letters a year ago demanding $7,000. The police blame a leaking gas pipe.

NATIONAL CITY BANK NOT CLEARED

Washington, D. C., Sept. 9.—Secretary McAdoo in a statement to-night denied reports that the National City Bank of New York had been vindicated by the treasury department's investigation of charges of violating its charter in financing a $44,500,000 loan to Chicago traction interests. He especially announced that the government's investigation had not yet been concluded. This statement was given out at the department:

"In referring to the statements repeatedly published in the last ten days to the effect that the investigation now being conducted by Bank Examiner Starek in connection with charges filed with the treasury department by J. B. Hogarth of Chicago against the National City Bank, F. A. Vanderlip, Samuel McRoberts, and others, had been completed and the defendants vindicated, Secretary McAdoo stated to-day that these reports were incorrect and wholly unauthorized.

"The investigation, said he, has not been finished, the examiner has not reported that excessive loans were not made in regard to the alleged advances of $44,500,000 to the Chicago Railways syndicate, nor that the bank was not guilty of ultra vires acts as charged by Mr. Hogarth in his complaint, and the department has rendered no decision in the matter."

Telegrams in great numbers were sent to all newspapers from New York and Washington that the bank had been exonerated. Newspaper confidence in such methods has been badly shaken.

CREDIT INFORMATION TO BE EXCHANGED

The Chicago Association of Credit Men have launched a campaign for the establishment of a bureau for the exchange of credit information among its members. Chairman Powell of the credit co-operation committee, says: "Each member will contribute facts relative to his slow accounts and receive in return the combined experience of all other interested members."

By C. C. Burford

Bankers and farmers throughout the state are now deeply interested in corn—the quantity of corn, the quality of corn and the price of corn. With one of the most unfavorable seasons in recent years, Illinois landowners have faced many trials this year but with the natural fertility of corn belt land in Illinois the crop of corn, yet raised in some sections without almost any rain and in other localities with very deficient moisture, will make a much larger crop than less fertile lands could have possibly produced. One Illinois farmer said that if Illinois corn belt land could be depended upon to raise, in the dust, twenty bushels of oats and twenty-five bushels of corn to the acre, that its price ought to be $500 an acre. There is no indication of cheaper land values in the corn belt and the man who has been waiting for lands to depreciate will have to wait a while longer.

East St. Louis Banker a Suicide

Harry J. Ahring, head bookkeeper in the Southern Illinois National of East St. Louis, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head. The bank officials state that Mr. Ahring was correct in all of his books and dealings with the bank. He leaves a wife and several children. He was about thirty years of age. Some time ago he suffered a heat prostration from which he did not fully recover and this may have affected his mental condition.

Peoria Boosters to Travel

Boosters representing the Peoria Association of Commerce will soon travel over the northern part of the state to advertise the many commercial advantages of Peoria—the Second City of Illinois. Many commercial bodies in northern Illinois, such as those of Aurora, Polo, Forreston, Plano, Sterling, Galesburg and many others, have written or wired that they would extend every hospitality to the visitors and would see that they received every courtesy. A special train will be used.

Cairo Bank Soon to be in New Home

Friends of J. S. Aisthorpe, president of the First Bank and Trust Company of Cairo and chairman of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association, are pleased to learn of the new home which the bank will occupy about October 15th. Illinois bankers who were at the convention of the Illinois Bankers in Cairo in October, 1910, remember the First Bank and Trust Company as being located on Ohio Street overlooking the beautiful Ohio river. The new location will be farther up town, at the corner of Eighth Street and Washington Avenue. The old location, which has been used for forty-eight years, while in a good wholesale and jobbing section, was too far removed from the best retail stores and offices.

The bank has taken a twenty-five-year lease on a building owned by the W. P. Halliday estate. The Hallidays are represented in the directorate of the bank by H. E. Halliday, president of the Halliday Elevator Company, and by W. P. Halliday, president of the Cairo City Coal Company and first vice-president of the bank. The Hallidays are large stockholders in the bank. The new building will have a frontage of one hundred feet on both streets, is a three-story, white enameled front brick and steel office building. The upper floors will be used for offices. The equipment of the bank will be heavy bronze grill with marble counters and wainscoting and mahogany fixtures throughout. The inverted system of lighting will be used, as well as a private telephone system and many other conveniences. The lobby extends through the center with the commercial banking department on one side and with the savings, trust and real estate departments on the other. A side entrance with access to a ladies' writing and safety deposit rooms will be provided. There will also be abundant rooms for the directors, committee rooms and locker rooms. The banking room will be absolutely fire-proof, with a heavy concrete floor above it and fire-proof doors to other departments of the bank. The vaults are all that money can buy and are complete and secure in every particular. Ample fire-proof storage vaults, so much needed in large banks, are provided. In short, the new building of the First Bank and Trust Company of Cairo will rank with the most modern and best equipped banking houses in the state and Mr. Aisthorpe's many friends unite in congratulating him. He will be advanced to the vice-presidency of the Illinois Bankers Association at the Chicago convention this month and his election to the presidency will naturally follow the year later. He is at present spending the summer in Wisconsin.

His son, H. R. Aisthorpe, is cashier and secretary of the bank, and holds a secure and prominent place in Cairo business circles. Upon him much of the active management of the bank falls. With capital of $250,000 and surplus of $50,000 and with an excellent group of officers and directors, the bank, with a long and honorable history back of it, is stepping out with its new banking home into a far wider scope of usefulness than it has pre-

A Magazine of Unusual Value to Investors

THE Investors' Magazine, published by this House, has been greatly increased in size and is now issued monthly instead of semi-monthly as heretofore. In spite of the fact that no subscription fee is asked for the magazine we have steadfastly endeavored to make each issue of genuine interest and permanent value to every conservative investor. The increased size of the publication in its new form provides for the addition of new departments and a multiplication of the peculiarly interesting and informative features which have characterized it in the past. Every issue will contain one or more carefully prepared articles by men of prominence in the commercial or financial field, discussing those phases of the investment question upon which they are best qualified to speak with authority. We have also prepared a new Booklet which describes in detail the merits of the First Mortgage Bonds we sell, in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000, netting the investor, 5½ to 6 per cent. The soundness of these securities, together with the care with which we safeguard our clients is best shown by the fact that no investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us since this House was founded thirty-one years ago. We will be pleased to add the names of actual investors to our mailing list without any charge or obligation whatever.

Illinois bankers are now looking forward to the convention of the Illinois Bankers Association which will be held in Chicago September 25th and 26th. Almost every banker in the state visits Chicago at least once a year or oftener, and many can arrange to make their Chicago trip at the time of the Illinois convention. President John D. Phillips assures us a good program and there is no doubt that the attendance at Chicago will be of record-breaking numbers. Many bankers, especially those in the northern half of the state, will find it convenient and desirable to drive in their cars to Chicago and thus be well provided with a way of seeing the many attractions of the great city.

The Illinois convention has not been held in Chicago since October 1908, when it met there with August Blum presiding. Following conventions have been in Decatur, 1909, with James McKinney of Aledo, presiding; Cairo, 1910, with Oscar G. Foreman of Chicago, presiding; Springfield, 1911, with E. E. Crabtree of Jacksonville, presiding, and Peoria, 1912, with B. F. Harris of Champaign, presiding. In October, 1899 the Illinois convention was held in Chicago with John L. Hamilton of Hoopeston, presiding.

Alton Increases Business Interests

The city of Alton, one of the oldest and most historic in Illinois, is rapidly becoming one of the most important commercial and industrial cities in the state. For many years Alton remained more or less stationary, but within the past decade or so the business men there have awakened to their commercial possibilities and the old city, founded in 1817, has become one of the important business centers of the state. Alton has abundant rail and river freight service, cheap coal, plenty of labor and Keokuk hydro-electric power, and there are now fifty-two manufacturing industries in the city's manufacturing district. When we add to the industrial advantages the excellent residential qualities in the way of scenic beauty, historic surroundings, church, fraternal, public school and higher educational advantages, Alton offers many attractions to the home-seeker. Alton has a live commercial organization known as the Alton Board of Trade, of which W. H. Joesting is the able manager.

Alton has seven building and loan associations and five banks, three state and two national. The nationals are the Alton National and the Citizens National and the state banks are the First Trust and Savings, Alton Banking and Trust Company and the Alton Savings Bank. These banks have capital of $100,000 each and surplus funds of from $10,000 to $200,000 each. A large and increasing business is being done by the banks of Alton with the result that deposits of about five million dollars are shown. Alton recently furnished to the Illinois Bankers Association a treasurer in the person of D. A. Wyckoff, cashier of the First Trust and Savings Bank and her bankers are known as careful and progressive men who are keenly alive to the future business possibilities of their growing city.

Illinois Notes

Many banks have offered rewards to boys growing the best yields of corn in their territory, yet Ilosea D. Cornwell, sixteen years old, of Newman, Douglas county, seems to hold one of the best records in the entire state. He raised 150 bushels and 25 pounds on one acre. However, he feels disappointed, as he had set his hopes upon 200 bushels to the acre.

William Lateer, cashier of the Ludlow Bank, was married recently to Miss Hazel Marcy of Peoria. His father, W. J. Lateer, president of the Paxton State Bank of Paxton, is well known to Illinois bankers, being a member of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association. The younger Lateer is in charge of a private bank owned by the family at Ludlow, near Paxton.

Henry J. Fink, a private banker of Belleville, has been arrested after he had disappeared from that city and had been found at the home of a relative in St. Louis. Fink had enjoyed a large clientage among Belleville people for many years and had been entrusted with many people's savings.

E. T. Robbins, Tazewell county agricultural adviser, and Roy C. Bishop, Livingston county agricultural agent, are doing some excellent publicity work in placing their work before the farmers and landowners. Carefully written newspaper articles appear frequently in various papers. C. H. Oathout, county soil expert of Champaign county, is getting his work nicely started. The experimental period of employing county soil advisers seems to be rapidly passing and bankers and farmers are now seeing clearly the necessity for such service.

NEW BANK DECLARES DIVIDEND

The stockholders of the German Trust and Savings of Rock Island, Ill., was given an agreeable surprise by the receipt of checks in payment of the first dividend ever declared by the new bank. It has been in existence now something over a year and a half, but it was not expected by the stockholders that they would receive any dividends for at least three years. However, at the last meeting of the board of directors a semiannual dividend of 2½ per cent was declared.

NEW BANK FOR CENTRALIA

The Richview State Bank of Centralia, Ill., with a capital stock of $25,000 and sixty stockholders, has just been organized. The officers of the new bank are, president, J. F. Mackey; vice-president, James Gillian; second vice-president, Edward Tucker; cashier, C. A. Lee. The new corporation takes over the Farmers and Merchants Bank, which absorbed the Exchange Bank of S. P. Cooper about eighteen months ago.

NEW STATE BANK AT MOUND CITY

The Security State Bank has been organized at Mound City, with a capital stock of $25,000. A new building will be erected and it is expected the institution will be ready to start business November 1st. These officers have been elected: President, A. F. Welson; vice-president, Samuel Blum; cashier, Herman Gaunt. Directors: H. M. Britt, Samuel Blum, E. L. Crain, L. B. Armstrong, G. J. Murphy, J. J. Blum, A. E. Welson, H. J. Aldren and N. J. McBride.

CHANGE IN BLOOMINGTON BANK

At a meeting of the board of directors of the State National, Bloomington, Ill., William L. Evans was elected vice-president to succeed R. Graff, whose death occurred a few weeks ago. Mr. Evans has been connected with the State National for many years as a director.

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

That the government ought to keep out of the banking business altogether is the opinion of Col. John Hicks, Oshkosh newspaper publisher, in Milwaukee this week on his way to the Perry celebration at Put-in-Bay. "The democrats can't get over their desire for a 'bobtail' currency," said Mr. Hicks. "Loan-ing money on commercial paper is bad business for the government to go into. In regard to the tariff, if the president succeeds in passing his tariff bill without disturbing business, nothing could stop his re-election in 1916. Whether he will succeed in doing this is a question. History shows us that the democrats have never attempted to meddle with the tariff without disturbing business. Should this follow the passage of the bill Wilson would not be re-elected and I would look for a reorganization of the republican party."

Postmasters Hold Convention

That postmasters need have no fear of stepping on the toes of bankers in their efforts to increase business in the postal savings department, was the assurance of Postmaster David C. Owen at the convention of the Wisconsin Association of Postmasters in Milwaukee this week, explaining that the financial houses ultimately secured the use of the deposits given to the government. He heartily endorsed a publicity campaign through the school children in securing the patronage of that element either unfamiliar with or afraid of the methods of commercial banks.

"According to the last report of the comptroller of currency there was about $1,200,000,000 unaccounted for in the authorized circulation," said Mr. Owen, "and a little effort would be responsible for having much money transferred from bureau drawers and odd hiding places to postal savings depositories. Milwaukee banks now have $348,000 of our deposits. They are not experiencing curtailed business in their savings departments, but figures show that they get more business than before the establishment of the postal savings bank."

Harris Trust Gets Bonds

County bonds to the amount of $60,000 were sold to the Harris Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago Monday afternoon at a premium of $9,660 on the complete issue. The bonds will be issued on September 15th and will bear 5 per cent interest, redeemable in twenty years. Other bidders for the bonds included Estabrook & Co., Chicago; A. B. Leach, Chicago; McCoy & Co., Chicago; Second Ward Savings Bank, Milwaukee; R. M. Grant & Co., New York; Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago; Wisconsin Trust Company, Milwaukee.

Wisconsin Notes

John E. DeWolf, Milwaukee bond broker, has submitted to the city debt commission a proposition to take over its $900,000 4½ per cent school bonds and dispose of them for a commission of $25,000. He agrees to sell $300,000 in fifteen days and the balance in thirty days.

Wisconsin Facing Money Shortage

Wisconsin is on the verge of bankruptcy, warns State Treasurer Johnson in a letter to all state officers, heads of departments and boards. He explains that unless some means is devised either of increasing the revenue or decreasing the running expenses of the state there will not be a dollar in the treasury by December 1st. In the absence of Governor McGovern and the secretary of state, Assistant Secretary of State Nagler replies to the treasurer that the present state of affairs is an annual one in the latter's department and remediable by careful action on the part of the secretary of state in the matter of the larger disbursements. Pending the return of the governor from Put-in-Bay next week no action will be taken in response to the treasurer's call for a meeting.

Notes

Real and personal taxable property in the state has increased $156,557,289 in the last year according to the report of the state tax commissioner. The total value fixed for all property in 1912 was $2,841,630,416 as against $2,998,187,705 this year.

their escape. The theft was not discovered until the bank officers arrived Tuesday morning.

A good crop outlook in Wisconsin is reported by Ira Bush, assistant manager of the Wisconsin Advancement Association, on his return from a trip of inspection through the northern part of the state. "Hay, oats, rye, and what little wheat was planted are doing well and there is promise of a fine corn crop," said Mr. Bush.

SAN FRANCISCO BANK OPTIMISTIC

The August financial letter of the American National of San Francisco says in part: A more hopeful and confident feeling has everywhere replaced the sense of doubt and apprehension that prevailed a month or so ago. Although the tightness of money continues, and borrowing is both difficult and expensive, especially for those whose needs are large and urgent, it is now commonly accepted that this condition is due to a scarcity of capital, and that the business situation in America is fundamentally sound and prosperous. Crops are going to be good, notwithstanding some damage to corn by the hot weather in the Mississippi Valley. During the fiscal year ending June 30th the exports of agricultural products amounted to more than 1,000 million dollars. The huge credit balance created abroad has placed this country in an excellent position to command European gold, if needed, and offsets, in large measure, the debit item caused by the marketing of American securities by European investors.

No marked recession of trade is expected, owing to the fact that stocks of merchandise are low and for some time past purchases have been made only for immediate needs. Business in California shows a somewhat lessened activity, judging from the records of bank clearings, although this condition is by no means uniform. Conservation of bank resources in anticipation of the usual autumnal demands is illustrated in the August 9th statement of the San Francisco national banks, which since June 4th had decreased their loans $3,448,000 and increased their cash holdings $2,255,000, while in the same time deposits declined $1,759,000. The fruit harvest in central and northern California is now in active progress with indications that the yield will fall somewhat below that of last year, notwithstanding a larger acreage. Prices are generally better, however, and brokers, except in a few ill-favored districts, have little to complain of. Canning factories are running heavily, but are not taxed to capacity. The output of dried fruits will be smaller than last year's with prices higher.

BANK OBJECTS TO LEVY

The First National of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and all of its stockholders have joined in a suit against the city and the board of review to set aside the assessment on bank stock for 1913. A similar action was instituted a year ago.

The stock of the bank was assessed by Assessor William Hardin last spring at $128 a share, the petition recites. Representatives of the bank appeared before the board of review and protested against this assessment, but the board overruled their protest.

In making the assessments, the petition avers, the assessor included United States bonds to the value of $268,000. Under the Iowa law, it is declared, the assessment of national bank stocks, taking into consideration the value of government bonds as part of the assets, is a discrimination against stockholders in such banks and in favor of other moneyed capital.

Government bonds held by private bankers must be deducted from the assets, it is pointed out, and to include these bonds in the national bank assessment is discriminatory. The plaintiffs claim that the assessment is in violation of the act of congress governing the assessment and taxation of national banks, and ask that the assessments be declared void.

NEW NATIONAL BANK EXAMINER

Washington, September 8.—James D. Brennan of Dorchester, Mass., was appointed a national bank examiner by Acting Comptroller Kane to-day to have charge of the Boston district, succeeding Examiners Ewer and Neal, who recently resigned because of the comptroller's order prohibiting national bank examiners from engaging in outside work. Examiners are paid under the fee system, and in view of the order restricting their services to the government one examiner will have the entire Boston district.

Lidgerwood, N. D.—The First National Bank is now occupying its splendid building which has recently been completed.

DELAY IN BANK'S ORGANIZATION

Louisville, Ky., September 9.—"Owing to local conditions, an unsettled money situation, together with drouth and bad crop year, it has been deemed advisable by a committee of the subscribers to the stock of the United Bank and Trust Company to defer the organization of the bank for the present year." This statement was made public following a meeting of stockholders called by Clarence LeBus, president of the Burley Tobacco Society and promoter of the bank. The fact that most of the stock of $250,000 had been subscribed was made known to them, Mr. LeBus himself offering to take the remainder should they wish to proceed with plans.

The United Bank and Trust Company was projected after the failure of the Commercial Bank and Trust Company, and was to become the successor of that institution. An option on the banking rooms of the old Commercial is held by Mr. LeBus, and the promoters also held options on the fixtures of the old bank.

Announcement was made a few weeks ago that this option would be taken up and that the bank would be started soon after September 1st. O. L. Ballinger, vice-president of the Lancaster National, was chosen to become president, and was expected to make a journey to Louisville for the opening of the institution. Owing to the change of plans, however, Mr. Ballinger did not return to Louisville.

FIRST NATIONAL OF HAMILTON, O.

First National of Hamilton, Ohio, has a capital of a quarter million, surplus amounting to $200,000 and deposits of two and one-half millions. S. D. Fitton, the president of this bank, served the Ohio Bankers Association during the past year as their chief officer, in which capacity he accomplished much effective work. Other officers of the bank are Peter Benninghofen, vice-president; E. G. Ruder, cashier, and J. M. Beeler and Don W. Fitton assistant cashiers.

Judith Gap, Mont.—Work is in progress on the erection of the one-story building being erected by the Security State Bank.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—Improvements involving the expenditure of $15,000 are being made by the Continental National Bank.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

The demand for money during the past week has continued fair and nearly all the loans were made at 6 per cent. Business at the financial institutions has been quite active and is on the increase.

Gravois Bank Chartered

A charter has been issued by State Bank Commissioner J. T. Mitchell of Missouri to the Gravois Bank of Gravois, St. Louis county. The new bank has paid-up capital stock of $25,000, and its incorporators are Frank J. Wiget, Henry G. Steffin, Louis H. Tieman, Adolph Etlung, Frank Weber, J. George Aff and Fred B. Drescher.

Springfield Banks Merged

A bank merger has been effected in Springfield, Mo., by which the Merchants National, the State Savings and the Holland Banking Company were merged under the name of the latter. Their combined deposits, amounting to $3,000,000, make it the leading bank of the city. The Holland banking house was the oldest bank in Springfield, having been established by the late C. B. Holland in 1875. Williams B. Sanford will be president of the new organization and J. L. Hine cashier.

St. Joseph Banker Dead

William Krug, president of the German-American National, St. Joseph, Mo., and one of the early settlers died last week. He was a bachelor eighty-eight years old, and made a fortune here in the early days in the pork packing business. A stroke of apoplexy caused Mr. Krug's death. Mr. Krug was one of three brothers who established a packing plant here many years ago and became immensely wealthy. He was a philanthropist and gave liberally to public enterprises. Krug Park, St. Joseph's principal pleasure resort, was a gift to the city from the brothers, who were natives of Germany, and of whom William was the only survivor.

Crop Funds Assigned

Of the $50,000,000 which the United States government is loaning to banks to help farmers move their crops, $3,250,000 will be deposited in St. Louis banks as follows: National Bank of Commerce, $1,250,000; Third National, $475,000; Mechanics-American National, $475,000; Merchants Laclede National, $300,000; State National, $250,000; Central National, $250,000, and Mercantile National, $250,000. Of these deposits 10 per cent is secured in United States bonds at par and the remaining 90 per cent by bills receivable at 65c on the $1. The Mercantile Trust has been selected as custodian of the bills receivable. The United States bonds have been sent direct to Washington. The banks have been required to furnish surety bonds for the face value of the commercial paper deposited with the custodian, and St. Louis surety companies are furnishing these bonds.

New Trust Company

The Laclede Trust Company is the name of a new institution which is being organized to be located in the vicinity of Jefferson Avenue and Market Street. The organization committee is composed of Messrs. Kroeger, Ballmann, Mueller, Rodenberg, Cutter, Harris and Oberschelp.

Birch Tree Bank Closed

State Bank Commissioner Mitchell of Missouri has closed the Birch Tree State at Birch Tree, this action being taken upon the report of Hal Woodside, bank examiner, who found the affairs of the institution unsatisfactory. This bank has a capital stock of $10,000. The last examination showed the bank to have deposits aggregating $35,000 and loans amounting to $18,000. Bank Examiner Woodside is making an examination of the institution and will report his findings to the commissioner. Mr. Mitchell does not know what brought about the bank's condition. W. I. Marshall is president and E. T. Pate is cashier.

New Bank Officers

At a meeting of directors of the Citizens Bank, Pilot Grove, E. H. Harris was elected president; J. B. Immele, vice-president; J. S. Cruse, cashier, and S. L. Stites, assistant cashier.

The directors of the Pilot Grove (Mo.) Bank have elected the following officers: President, George L. White; vice-president, Andrew Davin; cashier, C. M. Shepherd, and assistant cashier, H. W. Twenter.

Resigns from Bank

H. L. Jackson has tendered his resignation as cashier of the Newburg (Mo.) State. W. R. Parker, assistant cashier of the Bank of Rosedale, Kan., has been elected to succeed him.

Suspect Caught

Pat McHugh was arrested at Bergman, Ark., recently charged with the murder of George Hegdon of Nashville, Tenn., in the Iron Mountain railway yards at Van Buren, April 16, 1911, and also accused of participating in the robbery of the Bank of Omaha at Omaha, Boone county, less than a month ago. He is held upon request of the Crawford county authorities. He will be returned to answer for the murder of Hegdon, whom he is charged with shooting to death in a quarrel. The arrest of McHugh constitutes a strange chapter. Following the bank robbery at Omaha a letter was found along the railway tracks near that city stating that McHugh was the ringleader of the bandits who robbed the bank and requesting the finder to notify Constable Earl Ward at Van Buren that McHugh was the man who killed Hegdon. The missive was signed "John O'Brien" and stated that McHugh would be found at Bergman. The letter was turned over to the Crawford county authorities and the Bergman authorities were advised to arrest McHugh. If the evidence against McHugh is not sufficient to convict him of the murder he will be taken to Boone county to answer for the bank robbery, one of the most daring in the history of Northwest Arkansas. A half dozen men rode into Omaha and after robbing the bank of from $500 to $5,000, disarmed a party of farmers who tried to apprehend them and escaped.

The financing of the cattle industry is becoming a question of increasing importance to the bankers of the great corn belt.

Our experience of more than thirty years, our assets of more than six million dollars, and our location at one of the largest markets in the United States especially equips us for satisfactorily handling the accounts of those interested in the proposition.

Lease for New Bank Location

Accepting a lease, an option for which was perhaps the last commercial act of the late Abe Stiewel, banker and capitalist, who died recently, organizers of the new Bankers Trust Company, Little Rock, Ark., incorporated for $250,000, immediately will begin the work of razing the four-story brick structure at Second and Main streets to make way for a new and modern three-story bank and office building to house the new institution. The trust company has a thirty-year lease and will erect one of the handsomest business structures in the city. Plans and specifications are preparing now, and it is the intention of the bank's organizers to open for business in the new home January 1, 1914. H. L. Rummel will be president of the new bank, which will have as other officers C. S. McCain, active vice-president and treasurer; former Gov. G. W. Donaghey and W. C. Ribineck, vice-presidents, and C. G. Henry, secretary.

Controversy Settled

A controversy between the Farmers and Merchants and the First National, Huntsville, Ark., over the county fund, was settled by arbitration recently. The First National has held the county funds formerly, but at the April term of the county court the contract was given to the Farmers and Merchants Bank. The First National claimed fraud had been practiced and filed a complaint to that effect. The case was heard at the recent term of chancery court and both bids were declared by Chancellor Humphreys null and void. County Judge Cannon then relet the funds, dividing them equally between the two banks at the rate of 4 per cent interest. Previous bids were 7 3-4 per cent and 8 1-3 per cent.

Southwest Notes

F. A. Brannock of Bloomfield, Mo., has resigned as deputy state bank commissioner and has engaged in the newspaper business.

The Ozark State Trust of Springfield, Mo., has purchased a site on which to erect a new building.

A new bank has been organized at Malvern, Ark., capital $25,000. The election of officers has not yet been held.

Arkansas will receive $600,000 as its share of the crop moving fund to be distributed between the State National, Exchange National and England National, all of Little Rock. The German National of Little Rock has declined to accept any part of the loan, because of the government's requirement that 40 per cent of the circulation permitted under the national banking laws be taken out in government bonds and the money issued against them. This the German National feels will result in paying too great a price for a deposit that will extend only over a short period.

Banking Laws Construed

In an opinion to the Texas commissioner of insurance and banking the attorney-general's department held, in construing the state banking law, that the regular meeting of the board of directors of banking corporations means a meeting held either pursuant to the statute of the state or to the by-laws of the corporation; that individual directors or a majority, however great, of the stockholders, acting separately, cannot bind a corporation. It is further held that a corporation is not bound by the acts of its directors in a casual un-called meeting nor by all of such directors acting personally and not in an official meeting; that there is but one safe course for banking corporations to take, and that is to see that the authority referred to in section 72, digest of the state banking law, is only conferred at meetings held in accordance with the by-laws of the corporation or in accordance with the state law. If the by-laws of the corporation do not provide for sufficient elasticity in the calling of meetings other than the statutory monthly meetings, the attorney-general suggests that they should be amended, making it easy for special meetings of the board to be called.

New Texas Bank

A new bank has been formed at Carrizo Springs, Tex., to be known as the Guaranty State Bank. It has a paid-in capital of $10,000. A. Eardley is president; E. Buck, vice-president; Dr. J. Q. Burton, second vice-president, and H. M. Ferguson, cashier.

The Kenedy (Tex.) State Bank and Trust Company has moved into its new bank and office building. It is one of the best equipped banks in that part of the state.

H. L. Baker, president of the Lamar (Tex.) State Bank and Trust Company, has filed an amendment to the charter of his bank, increasing the capital stock to $150,000 and changing the name from the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company.

Royal A. Ferris, president of the American Exchange National, Dallas, Tex., and his son have returned from a trip to Colorado Springs.

Applications for charters for two new state banks have been passed upon favorably by the Texas insurance and banking department, as follows: Orange State of Orange, capital stock, $25,000, guaranty fund plan, A. M. H. Stark, president, and W. W. Armstrong, cashier; Guaranty State of Waxahachie, capital stock, $150,000, guaranty fund plan, W. K. Ward, president; Walter Acker, active vice-president; G. C. Waggoner, cashier.

The Texas department of insurance and banking has approved the following banks as reserve agents for state banks:

Guaranty State and Trust of Dallas, Citizens State of Memphis, Interstate National of Kansas City for the Guaranty State of Hedley; Lumbermens National of Houston for the Schertz State of Schertz; State Bank and Trust of San Antonio, National Bank of the Republic of Chicago, Fourth National of New York, National Bank of Commerce of Houston, Alice State of Alice, and Corpus Christi National of Corpus Christi for the Fremont State of Fremont.

A defalcation of $130,000 in the State National, Ft. Worth, Texas, was reported on Friday of last week to Thomas P. Kane, acting comptroller of the currency, by National Bank Examiner Van Zandt. The shortage will not affect the solvency of the bank. The bank examiner reported that Vice-President M. L. Woods, facing a charge of embezzling $15,000, was on his way to Ft. Worth. Comptroller Kane ordered that the facts be reported to the United States attorney at Ft. Worth. The bank's surplus and profits amounted to $232,000, according to the last report to the comptroller. The capital is $500,000.

A. I. B. PROGRAM COMPLETED

The program for the eleventh annual convention of the American Institute of Banking, which will be held at Richmond, Va., on September 18th and 19th, has just been finished. The convention will be called to order by President Byron W. Moser of the institute, and addresses of welcome will be delivered by Governor William Hodges Mann of Virginia, and Mayor Ainslie of Richmond. These greetings will be acknowledged by F. A. Crandall, chairman of the executive council, and an address will be given by Col. Fred E. Farnsworth, general secretary of the American Bankers Association.

After the annual address of President Moser, F. A. Crandall, chairman of the executive council; Harry Smale, secretary, and I. L. Bourgeois, treasurer of the institute, will submit their reports.

On September 18th the first session will be devoted to an address by Senator Burton of Ohio on "The Proposed Currency Legislation," and a symposium on bank advertising and bank publicity, in which Fred W. Ellsworth, publicity manager of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York; C. B. Hazlewood, assistant secretary of the Union Trust Company of Chicago; L. A. Mershon, publicity manager of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company of New York, and F. M. Pollaird, assistant cashier of the Exchange National Bank of Pittsburgh, will participate.

At the second session of that day Secretary of State Bryan will make an address and there will be a debate on the so-called "Blue Sky" legislation. Representatives of the Pittsburgh, Chapter of the institute will support the affirmation that this legislation would be for the best interests of the people of the United States, but representatives of the Chicago Chapter will take the negative.

At the session on September 19th there will be a symposium on "clearing houses and their extensions and their functions" under the direction of O. Howard Wolfe of the New York Chapter. Charles A. Ruggles will speak on "Election of Country Checks, Settlement of Balances;" J. A. Broderick of New York on "Clearing House Examinations, Registration of Commercial Paper," and Jerome Thralls, of the Kansas City Chapter, "Vocational and Agricultural Education—Community Advertising."

At a subsequent meeting of the institute reports will be received from special committees and the place for holding the next convention will be chosen.

WOULD STOP SLAUGHTER OF CALVES

Washington, September 8.—The conservation of calves as a means of lowering the high cost of living is a plan formulated by Representative Britten of Illinois, who has been investigating the scarcity of beef cattle and the consequent high cost of meat. Representative Britten to-day introduced a bill designed to prevent the killing of calves and to insure an increase in the meat supply. The measure would make a misdemeanor the shipment in interstate commerce of beef cattle killed under two years of age.

"In 1911," said Mr. Britten, "8,000,000 calves were slaughtered. If these calves had been allowed to live for two years, and allowing 1,400 pounds as an average weight for a two-year-old cow or steer, they would have produced 11,200,000,000 pounds of beef to supply the scarcity we now feel."

Editorial Comment

AFTER THE TARIFF; THE CURRENCY

With the tariff bill through both houses the master mind at Washington turns to currency, with the promise that the extra session will complete its work at the extra session. President Wilson has no equal in public life in the expressive use of the English language. Probably Gladstone is the only one who might have been considered a rival. At the conclusion of the quarter-century battle for a fair tariff, the president said:

A fight for the people and for free business which has lasted a long generation through has at last been won, handsomely and completely. A leadership and a steadfastness in counsel has been shown in both houses, of which the democratic party has reason to be proud. There has been no weakness or confusion or drawing back, but a statesmanlike directness and command of circumstances. I am happy to have been connected with the government of the nation at a time when such things could happen and to have worked in association with men who could do them. There is every reason to believe that currency reform will be carried through with equal energy, directness and loyalty to the general interest. When that is done this first session of the sixty-third congress will have passed into history with an unrivaled distinction. I want to express my special admiration for the devoted, intelligent and untiring work of Mr. Underwood and Mr. Simmons and the committees associated with them.

Never once has he used the much abused term "free trade," a term made obnoxious by the exploiters of the highly protective tariff. Full credit has been given to the party, to the chairman and committees in congress and this high praise will stimulate Messrs. Owen and Glass to greater effort. The president believes in the new currency bill quite as much as he believes in the lower tariff and "free business." There are more mooted questions in the money-banking questions than ever found in the tariff. Bankers have not agreed upon the essentials nor the details of a reform bill. They have agreed largely upon their objections to the new bill and will have great influence toward sounder methods. Manufacturers were agreed upon a protective (to them) tariff, the higher the better. That is in part the secret of its maintenance for thirty years against public sentiment, against the press (the unsubsidized portion) and against the economists of all ages. It held on just as the express interests by the use of franks and a liberal lobby kept us out of a parcel post until patience was almost exhausted. President Wilson has won his fight for a revision of existing duties, including free raw wool and free raw sugar. The victory of the president is emphasized by the fact that Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, a progressive republican, and Senator Poindexter of Washington, a progressive, voted for the measure. The votes of La Follette and Poindexter offset those of the two Louisiana sena-

PROCEEDING ON FRIENDLY TERMS

There may have been a time in the proceedings of the Chicago currency conference when some of the members believed that diplomatic relations with the government at Washington should be cut off. If so, happily it was averted and in the end complete harmony came about and a really able critique of the pending currency bill was adopted without a dissenting vote. The committee which went to Washington, or, at least certain of them, were not oversanguine. All doubts of the spirit in which they would be received have been swept from the minds of the committeemen and now they "aint mad at nobody." The chairman of the special committee, James B. Forgan, is greatly pleased at the cordiality and spirit in which the bankers were received. He said:

Every member of the bankers' committee was greatly pleased with the way in which the banking and currency committee of the senate received them. We expected a hearing lasting one day, but it was extended over five days, and they seemed loath to let us go even then. We were shown every courtesy and given every opportunity we could desire to present our case and to explain our reasons for the changes we suggested in the bill. The earnestness of purpose shown by the senators and their desire to go to the root of every branch of the subject was marked. We are, therefore, not only pleased with our reception by the senate committee and satisfied with the hearing given us, but are hopeful our suggestions will result in some good along the line of constructive legislation.

Thus the entire situation has been clarified. The bankers who appeared before the senate committee acquitted themselves before the public with entire approval and it is believed they made effective headway toward necessary modifications in the bill.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION

The New York court of appeals recently decided that a bank paying checks to which the drawer's name has been forged is not liable to its depositor unless the latter has examined the returned vouchers, compared the specific amounts of the checks, with the list returned with the vouchers, examined each check to ascertain that the signature of the drawer is genuine, taken steps to see that the name of the payee has not been changed and that the amount of the returned vouchers equals the total of the items appearing on the slip returned by the bank.

Formerly the law was that a bank was supposed to know the signature of its depositor and hence liable to the latter if it paid out money on a forged signature.

This had a tendency to promote careless methods among the depositors, who felt secure in the liability resting upon the bank. This decision completely changes the situation and requires of a plaintiff the same reasonable care and caution for his own safety as is exacted by the law in other cases. The decision is far-reaching in its effect and is a long step forward in banking jurisprudence.

OLD COUNTRIES DISCOVERED ANEW

Dana Estes & Co., Boston, print the largest line of travel de luxe books of any American firm. "Old Countries Discovered Anew," by Ernest Talbert, is a motor book for everybody. It has over sixty photographs taken by the author and is bound in purple and gold. The text is a rarely interesting account of a trip by motor car through Holland, Germany, and across France, three of the most interesting countries of all Europe.

The average person visits these countries by rail. Mr. Talbert made the trip by motor car and consequently saw many remote sections seldom visited by the tourist; sections in the which the customs, habits, and lives of the people are exact counterparts of those existing there centuries ago.

Mr. Talbert has not only given in this book an exceedingly fascinating account of a quaint and interesting trip, but he has furnished a most complete guide-book to motoring in Europe. He gives us in detail most necessary information regarding motors, the roads to be followed, baggage to be carried, methods of securing gasoline and other necessary supplies, the hotels and inns, in fact, all the information that the person desirous of making a like trip could possibly need.

Northern France, the Heart of Holland, the True Germany; do you know them as they really are? Not as viewed from railway trains or as exploited by touring agencies, but intimately and personally, as described by the author? Do you know that it will cost you less to see these countries thoroughly if you hire a motor-car abroad for the purpose than if you travel in the old-fashioned way? Do you know how much time, vexation and expense you can save by leaving your car at home and hiring one abroad?

PITTSBURGH BANK ON THE SITUATION

Peoples National of Pittsburgh says:

"In the steel trade there is usually some curtailment of output in August, due to the physical effect of heat upon the workingmen and to the fact that it is the mid-summer vacation period. Last month the output of finished material was limited only by these factors, and not by lessening of the demand for immediate consumption. In the matter of new contracts involving next year's requirements and deliveries, two factors operate in restraint of placing orders freely. One is the continued high cost of capital for use in new enterprises, and the other is the growing disposition to await developments in the foreign steel trade in connection with the new tariff duties. So long as foreign producers were unable to supply their own markets—which has been the case for the past two years—and the United States was exporting finished and semi-finished material at an unprecedented rate, tariff duties were of secondary importance.

Now, when foreign consumers feel the handicap of high cost capital even more seriously than domestic consumers, and when there is a positive reactionary tendency in the European steel trade, the question of the new tariff duties—in some instances of actual free trade for the first time in a quarter of a century—becomes of much importance. Additional price concessions have been numerous in the domestic market within the past few weeks. These concessions have not been large enough to indicate any alarming weakness in any department, and they are not evidence of any surplus stock on hand, nor of any immediate fear of idle producing capacity.

"The electrical business continues fairly active, and it is reliably estimated that the gross earnings of the Westinghouse Electric Company for the half year ending with this month will be the largest for any corresponding period on record.

"In the plate glass industry the usual mid-summer dullness has been experienced, but production and consumption have been maintained at about the normal rate for the season. The provision in the tariff on this commodity and uncertainty as to conditions resulting therefrom have influenced the market, causing the trade to confine purchases to actual necessities. Nevertheless, the business actually booked and in prospect would rather seem to insure a fairly satisfactory volume of trade for practically the remainder of the year. These conditions and prospects are similar in the general window glass trade.

"With labor well employed in all the principal industries at the highest average wages ever paid, it follows that mercantile trade is active. A careful canvass of the wholesale grocery business reveals that in volume the past eight months exceeded that of any similar period in the history of the city, and should the gain be sustained for the remainder of the year, 1913 will be the 'banner' in point of output. So far this year there have been fewer failures than last year and collections have been more satisfactory. In some quarters, however, complaint is made that while the volume of business is at the maximum, yet in many instances the profit does not cover the cost of handling. Probably in no department of the mercantile trade is the competition keener.

"Summarizing commercial and industrial conditions, it may be said that they are unusually sound and in better position to undergo readjustment to legislative changes than on former occasions."

COTTON CROP BRINGS GOOD PRICE

Despite a decrease of nearly 2,000,000 bales as compared with last year's crop, the South received for its 1912-13 commercial crop of cotton, including seed, nearly $1,000,000,000 or more than $61,000,000 above the value of the 1911-12 crop, according to the annual report of Secretary Hester of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, made public. The crop is better both in grade and weight, the statement sets forth, and the mills have taken practically the whole of it, even being forced to trench on the supply left over from last season to the extent of 726,000 bales.

The average price per pound for middling was 12.20 cents, an advance of 2.04 cents over the average for the 1911-12 crop. The average commercial value per bale shows an increase of $12.14.

Something of the activity of the mills, both North and South, is indicated in the statement that an increase of 545,000 spindles is shown in established southern mills alone, with seven new mills under construction, and that the number of bales used in both sections was greater than ever before.

Cleveland

Central States News Letter

Cincinnati

During the month of August last Cleveland bank clearings crossed $100,000,000 for the first time in August in the history of the city. The month's clearings were $100,098,000, showing a gain of about 5½ per cent over the same month last year. The per cent of increase over the previous year was not as great as in earlier months of 1913. Clearings for the first eight months of 1913 made far and away a new top mark at $851,366,000, showing a gain of more than 11 per cent over the same period last year.

A private bank with deposits of $100,000 doing business without an owner is one of the situations uncovered last week by Bank Superintendent Lattanner at Murray City. The bank's ownership is in doubt and the state banking department has been compelled to assume charge of it, following a complaint filed by the Austrian consul in Cleveland who said his countrymen alleged they had money in the bank and were unable to draw it. On examination it was found that the bank was in control of S. P. Soliday, postmaster, who said he was operating it for the owner, who, he said, was Joshua Miller. The bank register gave W. A. White as the owner. By ransacking the office of the institution a contract was unearthed bearing date of April 19, 1913, by which W. A. White and G. O. French, of Canton, Ohio, sold all their interests in the bank to Cashier S. P. Soliday and Joshua Miller, of Carroll, Fairfield county, for $2,000. Miller and Soliday both said they had signed papers, but they merely did it as witnesses. These statements were made before the contract was found. Both had denied ownership. The affairs were in queerest shape. Notes and papers were piled in cigar boxes, while the safe containing $28,000 was unlocked. Attorney Robert Black, of Cincinnati, special counsel for the state banking department, who was accompanied by Examiners J. A. Holmes and Ira J. Fulton, guarded the $28,000 during one night, placing it in a Nelsonville bank the following day. Explanation for the non-payment of funds mentioned in the complaint from the Austrian consul at Cleveland was that the funds were garnisheed and could not be paid out. No statement is yet possible as to what dividend can be made by the institution if it must be liquidated. The Murray City Bank is the first one to be reached under the new private bank act.

Chagrin Falls Banker Dead

George March, president of the Chagrin Falls (Ohio) Banking Company, died of heart disease on Friday of last week. Mr. March was sixty-five years old and had been president of the Chagrin Falls bank since its organization twenty-four years ago. "Mr. March was a commoner of the old school of banking," said W. E. Ward, cashier of the Union National at Cleveland, when he heard of his death. "He was administrator and executor for almost every estate in the Chagrin valley, where he was regarded as a 'tower of strength' to his community. He was treasurer of the Cuyahoga County Fair and a leader in the public life of Chagrin Falls. Big of frame and of heart, he was one of the most conspicuous figures at bankers' conventions, where he has been always regarded as a type of the true democracy now so rare in active business."

Sycamore Bank to Open Soon

The stockholders of the Sycamore (Ohio) State met on Thursday of last week and added

J. L. Curlis and L. A. Grubb to the list of directors, making nine. The directors elected Dr. W. H. Wickham, president; J. L. Curlis, vice-president, and Dow Marguerat, cashier. It is expected that the bank will open September 15th in the old building, which it may make its permanent quarters.

State Farmer Named

Charles McIntyre of Troy, Ohio, has been appointed professional agriculturist for the state of Ohio to handle the farm lands in connection with the state institutions. For some time Mr. McIntyre has been running the experiment farms of Hamilton, Miami, Clermont and Paulding counties. He will take his new position on September 15th. Governor Cox expects that the state agriculturist will be able to produce $100,000 more for the state than under the present system.

Chosen President Pittsburgh Bank

W. L. Guckert, who has been vice-president of the First National of Allegheny, Pittsburgh, since 1904, has been elected president of the institution, filling the vacancy caused by resignation some time ago of James S. Kuhn. Hay Walker, Jr., of W. & H. Walker, and William M. Orr, of the Barrett Manufacturing Co., were elected members of the board of directors. John Thompson, the oldest member of the board, and one of the organizers of the bank, was elected chairman of the board of directors. The directors also awarded a contract for a new building of the individual banking house type, which will be ready for occupancy February 1, 1914. The bank will occupy temporary quarters on the opposite corner of Federal Street and Parkway during construction of the new building.

Scranton Bank Increases Capital

At a meeting of the Third National, Scranton, Pa., it was unanimously voted to increase the capital stock of the institution from $200,000 to $400,000. It also was decided to issue a stock dividend of one hundred per cent, which will be equal to $200,000, and this amount will be used to pay for the proposed stock issue.

Frederick to Have New Bank

Frederick, Md., is to have a new bank, the name of the new institution being The Peoples State Bank of Frederick. The capital will be $80,000 and the surplus, $20,000. C. E. Cline will be president. Mr. Cline is one of the directors of the Citizens National, Frederick.

Shiawassee County Bankers Club Formed

The organization of a Shiawassee county bankers' club was perfected at Owosso, Mich., on Friday of last week. Officers were elected as follows: President, F. N. Conn, cashier of the Shiawassee County Bank of Durand; secretary, C. M. Spaulding, president of the Perry State; treasurer, W. A. Rosenkrans, cashier of the Old Corunna State. A committee consisting of Mr. Conn, Mr. Spaulding, A. L. Beard, cashier of the A. L. Beard & Co. bank in Morrice, and G. L. Taylor, cashier of the Citizens Savings Bank of Owosso, was appointed to draw up by-laws and report at a meeting to be called in the near future by the president. The purposes of the organization are social and business improvement and it will probably be the means of carrying out more rapidly agricultural plans that have been discussed heretofore.

Central States Notes

Two highwaymen set a new standard for crime in Columbus, Ohio, last week when they not only stole $40 from Theodore Cocco, an Italian, but forced him to go to the Ohio National and draw out $65, which they also stole.

The Peoples State of Boswell is the name of a new institution that is being organized at Boswell, Pa. The capital will be $30,000.

The Merchants National, Quakertown, Pa., is having plans drawn up for the erection of a three-story brick and stone building.

The Bank of Flemington has been organized at Flemington, W. Va., with Ona Sinsel president, and Guy Williams cashier.

The Central City Trust Company is the name proposed for the corporation which is being organized by George M. Barnes, formerly vice-president of the Commercial National, Syracuse. The institution will be capitalized at $300,000 and will have a surplus of $300,000.

The work of enlarging the Manufacturers and Traders National, Buffalo, N. Y., with a marble structure which will be one of the handsomest banking houses in the country, is being rapidly advanced.

The Peoples Bank, Greensburg, Ky., has moved into its new two-story brick building.

The Lawrence State, Lawrence, Ind., opened for business on Saturday of last week. The capital stock is $25,000. W. W. Flick of Lawrence is president, and C. W. Powell, cashier.

James L. Orr, who has been a director of the Old State National, Evansville, Ind., for many years, has resigned, announcing his retirement from active business life. Samuel L. Orr, his son, was elected to succeed him. Frank R. Wilson, who has been cashier of the bank for the past two and one-half years, also was chosen a director to succeed Wm. M. Akin who died recently.

It is the belief of the bank examiners who are at work upon the books of the defunct E. Jossman State Bank, Clarkston, Mich., that the shortage may amount to $200,000. Although it may be a month before the examiners can complete their work, the condition already brought to light discloses a shortage of over $142,000. No warrant has been sworn out for Jossman's arrest, although he continues in confinement in the county jail.

The Central State, Benzonia, Mich., capital $20,000, and the First State, Three Oaks, Mich., capital $20,000, have been incorporated.

The First State, Three Oaks, Mich., has been opened with a capital of $20,000.

Earl B. Bolton, vice-president of the Gaylord (Mich.) State, died last week.

THE TURKISH LOAN

It has been impossible to obtain confirmation of the rumor that the Turkish government was negotiating a $10,000,000 loan from an American syndicate through its Washington ambassador. It was said that the terms of the alleged plan were such that the loan would cost the borrower 17 per cent.

The Farmers and Merchants Bank, Albany, Ga., has applied for a charter. The capital stock is $25,000.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by F. C. Redmond

Money rates that have been firm are showing no tendency to go higher, but on the contrary the trend seems easier, and the monthly circular of the Security National, Minneapolis, comments upon this feature of the northwest situation as favorable. "The country is to-day in fairly good condition to handle the crops," the circular says. "The decision of the treasury department to deposit $50,000,000 in the banks in the principal crop sections will make the grain movement easier, although as a partial offset to this the government deposits in banks have declined as much as $20,000,000 during the past two months, so that the actual additional deposit will amount to only $30,000,000."

Agricultural Conference

At the conference of the agricultural committee, Minnesota Bankers Association, and the agricultural demonstration agents of twenty-four counties of Minnesota, held on the state fair grounds last week, a resolution was adopted unanimously by the bankers assuring the experiment station of the association's support in the present crusade against the prevalent cholera epidemic that is creating havoc in many parts of the state. The resolution recommended that the station enlarge its serum plant and otherwise improve its facilities for supplying serum to farmers that the demand of the coming weeks may be met and the disease properly combated. It was agreed that the proposed special session of the legislature should be asked to appropriate sufficient funds to cover the cost of these necessary improvements at the cholera serum plant, and the bankers may not be called upon directly to furnish the funds though they stand ready to act as pledgors that the amount will be raised.

Dean Woods of the college of agriculture said that hog cholera was doing serious damage in various parts of the state and that the station serum plant should be enlarged at once to make possible a winning fight against it. He estimated that upwards of $40,000 would have to be expended to make the plant productive enough to meet the demands of the situation.

Governor Ebelhart in an address before the meeting declared himself a believer in the county agent plan for improving farm life and assured his hearers that he stood ready in his official capacity to further the cause in any way he could. J. W. Wheeler, president of the Capital Trust, St. Paul, presided. Among the bankers present were D. C. Armstrong of Albert Lea, C. P. DeLaittre of Aitkin, F. R. Myrs of Bibawik, O. W. Lundsten of Hutchinson, J. A. Valentine of Breckenridge, F. L. Stone of Benson, W. H. Gold of Redwood Falls, Al Johnson of Center City, and George H. Richards, secretary of the Minnesota Bankers Association.

Joseph Chapman Back

Joseph Chapman, vice-president of the Northwestern National, Minneapolis, who as a member of the committee appointed by the Chicago conference of bankers has been in Washington for a week appearing before the senate finance committee, on his return said: "We were encouraged by the attitude of the senators, both democrats and republicans. They told us that they were not wedded to any particular bill and that they simply want to see the United States have the best possible currency system. That is just what the bankers want. We have had the impression that the senators and representatives in Washington did not want suggestions from the bankers. That isn't so. We were treated with every courtesy by the men in Washington. The house committee adopted two of the recommendations of the Chicago conference before our committee reached Washington. The bankers want the bill to be workable. There is no unfriendly feeling between the bankers and the men who are framing this bill."

Minneapolis Bonds Liked in East

Minneapolis municipal bonds are considered by eastern bankers among the most desirable of their kind offered for sale in the United States, according to City Comptroller Dan C. Brown, who returned Friday from Boston, where he delivered $1,250,000 of the bonds recently purchased by the Wells & Dickey Company. Mr. Brown said the bankers told him that Minneapolis municipal bonds are fast crowding those of Milwaukee for first favors in the financial market.

Gains in Moneys and Credits

The assessed valuation of the real and personal property in Minnesota, as returned by county boards of equalization to the state tax commissioner, is $1,390,936,007. The total assessment as finally fixed by the tax commission last year was $1,365,676,469, and the county board returns show an increase of $25,259,538. The total is likely to be still further increased by the tax commission, which has final power to review and revise the assessments.

The new personal property assessment is $227,923,882, an increase over 1912 of $12,640,967. The real assessment of 1912, which was

The return of moneys and credits this year is $151,889,212, compared with $135,369,314 in 1912, an increase of $16,519,898. This item is not included in the personal property total, as moneys and credits are subject to a special tax of three mills on the dollar.

May Start New Bank

It is rumored in St. Paul financial circles that a new national bank with a capital of $250,000 is to be started this fall. Plans for the organization have been under way for some time and the location will be in the vicinity of Seventh and Wabash streets.

Northwest in Good Condition

A. M. Peabody, the St. Paul broker recently appointed by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo to be one of those to pass upon securities offered by banks to secure part of the government's $50,000,000 crop deposit, said recently that the Northwest was never better able to take care of itself than this year. "Farmers are not demanding cash since they know everything is in a prosperous condition," said Mr. Peabody, "and they are willing to take checks and demand notes of well known houses. Conditions have improved greatly since the secretary announced his intention of depositing $50,000,000 in banks in the crop district. A splendid feeling prevails and it can safely be said that the Northwest this year will move its crop with less outside aid than ever before and probably quicker."

Bank Clearings Gain

Bank clearings in Duluth in August show a very comfortable gain over those of the corresponding month a year ago. They were $16,256,896.27 against $12,377,408.34 last year. This gives a gain margin of $3,879,487.93. The net gain in clearings for the first eight months of this year over the corresponding period last year is $29,735,879.23.

Duluth Bank on Conditions

Commenting on trade conditions in Duluth, the City National of that city says in its September letter: "The easing up of the money market has been due to several factors. Strikes have reduced the output of minerals, and as most financial concerns have been steadily adding to their cash reserves during the past few weeks, the country is to-day in fairly good shape to handle the early crops. Trade in general merchandising lines is picking up, while iron and steel are less active. As business is showing signs of its fall awakening and as shipments of grain are even now totaling from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 bushels daily, there will be no surplus of money beyond what is absolutely necessary for legitimate trade demands and an easy money market is not in prospect for several months at least."

New Town to Have Bank

Residents of Byron, Minn., have become associated in the starting of a new bank at Hamlet, N. D., a new town. The bank will be financed by Byron men, the board of directors being F. E. McCoy, N. P. Nelson, C. K. Eike of Hamlet, N. D., and A. L. Cutting, F. W. Dunnett and J. T. Johnson of Byron. The officers are A. L. Cutting, president; N. P. Nelson, vice-president; Frank E. McCoy, cashier. Other Byron stockholders are R. D. Maxfield, E. Grant Brooks and I. Johnston.

Glen Ullin Bank Sold

A deal has been completed whereby the majority of stock of the First National, Glen Ullin, N. D., passed into the hands of Minnesota parties, P. B. Wickham, president and majority stockholder, having sold his interests in the Glen Ullin bank and in the First State of Elgin to E. A. Konantz, banker and lumberman; R. C. Lilly, vice-president of the Merchants National of St. Paul, Minn.; J. A. Reagen, president of the East St. Paul State, and R. P. Ward, president of the Farmers National of Waseca.

Mr. Wickham retires from business on account of failing health.

Buy Pettibone Bank

D. D. McKee, John DeKrey and H. Bernard have become owners of the Pettibone (N.D.) State. The bank is capitalized at $10,000. The officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows: D. D. McKee, president; John DeKrey, vice-president, and H. Bernard, cashier. The retiring officers are J. M. Williams, president, and E. F. Sivartout, cashier.

Believes North Dakota Faces Prosperous Year

J. P. Baker, vice-president of the Bismarck (N. D.) Bank, recently returned from a trip to the Twin City. Mr. Baker is very optimistic over the fine prospects for North Dakota this year. He said:

"The farmers of this state will get more ready money from the sale of their crops than they did last year. The crops are turning out better than expected, which is a surprise; in fact, the crops appeared to have fooled nearly everybody, as in the early part of the season there were parts of the state where little or nothing was expected, but where now they will get a good fair yield of grain. The great drought in the corn growing states will also help North Dakota, and will enhance the price of feed stuffs, such as barley, oats and corn. It is hard luck for the farmers in what is known as the corn growing states of the South, for it is estimated that there will be a shortage in the corn crop of at least 500,000,000 bushels. This means higher prices for what we raise in North Dakota and all coarse grains will bring a good price and wheat a fair price. The Canadian crop is not equal to former years, and not up to expectations.

"The early harvest and threshing of the North Dakota crop is also an advantage, as farmers will get their fall work well cleaned up this year. The difficulties in the labor question have also been less than last year and the cost of harvesting and threshing will be much less.

"I predict that the railroad companies of North Dakota will have a very heavy fall business, and will be taxed to their utmost to move the crop, which is already beginning to come into the elevators. If farmers would only market their grain slowly they would get more for it, and the railroads could handle it to a better advantage. We are shipping grain from points on the Missouri river by steamboat, and this is the first year that we have received a boatload of old grain and sent back the same boat for a load of new grain. Grain shipping in August is certainly unusual."

Northwest Notes

Lester Prairie, Minn., is to have a new bank to be known as the Farmers State Bank of Lester Prairie.

Bonds in the sum of $22,500 to cover the cost of paving with brick Rondo Street from Rice to Western, St. Paul, have been sold by the sinking fund committee to George S. Ring of St. Paul, who offered a bonus of $5. The bonds run three years and bear 6 per cent interest.

The Security State, Flaxville, Mont., has been incorporated, the incorporators being D. Ray Gregg, of Sherwood, N. D., George L.

Ryerson, of Medicine Lake, J. C. Wigmore, of Medicine Lake, J. W. Schnitzler, of Froid, and J. C. Masek, of Medicine Lake. Flaxville is a new town.

The State Bank of Crystal, Crystal, N. D., recently organized, has purchased the First National of Crystal. The business will be transferred on January 15, 1914.

TO ERECT NEW BANK BUILDING

The Hibernia Bank, Savannah, Ga., will on October 1st begin the work of razing the old board of trade building, preparatory to erecting a handsome modern bank building, which will be one of the most magnificent as well as one of the most costly buildings in Savannah. With the erection of this bank building, practically every one of the large banks in Savannah will have new homes.

Secretary P. W. Hall is sending out the reports of the convention of the Iowa Bankers Association. It is a handsome volume, nicely illustrated. The book would have been out sooner had not Mr. Hall waited for the copy of the paper read by W. W. Nolan of Minnesota, which that gentleman promised to send but which failed to arrive.

Des Moines, Sept. 11.—Iowa's corn crop will be out of the way of frost this year without question. Heretofore farmers have begun to worry about this time lest Jack Frost arrive before King Corn is out of the way. But the hot weather of the late summer and the scant supply of rain during the early days of September acted as quick ripeners of this great staple product. The average date for the first killing frost in Iowa is October 10th. It is certain that corn will be fully ripened long before that. In fact in southern Iowa, where the drouth has been worst, farmers have been cutting corn for several days. Much of it was cut and stored in silos when it became apparent that the crop was going to be curtailed. In the meantime Dr. Chappel's figures that the total crop will be 330,000,000 bushels as against 421,000,000 last year are regarded as probably about correct. Dr. Chappel, who is head of the Iowa Crop Bureau, opines that the yield will be about 35 bushels per acre. Pasturage has been affected by the hot, dry summer and water for stock has been scarcer than for several years. But small grain turned out reasonably well and bankers and farmers alike do not see any reason for discouragement on the prosperity issue. The attendance at the recent state fair in Des Moines was enormous, indicating that the farmers are not worrying and have plenty of money. The number of automobiles in the city during the exposition was many times larger than ever before.

Executive Council to Meet

Secretary P. W. Hall has called a meeting of the executive council of the Iowa Bankers Association for September 16th to be held at his offices in this city. Important business is to be taken up. Insurance against burglaries is one point for discussion. The lease on the present quarters of Secretary Hall has expired and action will be taken to retain the present rooms or remove to some other building. It is the quarterly meeting of the executive council.

Iowans Going to Boston

Most of the Iowa delegation to the Boston convention in October will take the "short cut" from Chicago through to Boston on the Lake Shore. This is indicated by replies which are coming into Secretary P. W. Hall from the Iowa financiers who expect to attend the meeting of the A. B. A. Secretary Hall has made arrangements whereby bankers returning from Boston need not come straight back, but may take a few little side trips via New York and Washington. Mr. Hall is furnishing full information on the subject. C. H. McNider, well known Mason City banker, is a member of the committee on train service, and his name appears on the official notice sent out by the A. B. A. committee. Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National, who is chairman of the invitation committee, is going to be chosen president of the A. B. A. so that Iowans this year are taking more than the ordinary interest in the Boston convention.

Des Moines Visitors

Among Iowa bankers seen in Des Moines recently were Cashier W. H. Totton, Iowa National, Osceola; President R. F. Graeber, Sheldahl Savings; President John W. Foster, First National, Guthrie Center; Cashier H. S. Taylor, Woodward State; Cashier John Kirby, First National, Estherville; Assistant Cashier C. B. Crane, Johnson County Savings, Iowa City; Cashier C. C. Cook, Booneville Savings; Cashier J. W. Mullane, First National, Valley Junction; Cashier A. D. Miller, City Bank at Mitchellville.

Banker Elected Mayor

F. D. Hadden, president of the Security Savings at Valley Junction, was chosen mayor of Valley Junction to fill out the unexpired term of George Gray, resigned. Mr. Hadden was chosen on the first ballot and without opposition. The city council made the selection after Gray had resigned and J. S. Compton had been offered and refused the place. Mr. Hadden has been a Valley Junction banker for fourteen years. He was formerly connected with the Valley Junction Savings as cashier and is very well and favorably known among central Iowa financiers.

Clever Swindler at Large

Bankers are warned to look out for a chap who went by the name of F. Schofield in fleeing the Central State of Des Moines out of $200. Schofield first appeared in the offices of the Equitable Life Insurance Company and rented rooms in the Equitable building as offices for the Iowa headquarters of the New Jersey Accident and Liability Company of Trenton, N. J., a concern said to be fictitious. He asked the life insurance company for the name of the best bank in the city in which to deposit his funds. The company recommended the Central State and so notified the bank officers by telephone. When Schofield showed up, the bank was waiting for him with a smile. The stranger presented a draft for $375 drawn on the Seaboard National of New York and properly signed by the New Jersey insurance company. He then drew out $200 of the amount and disappeared. Just why Schofield didn't get away with the other $175 is not known unless he was scared away. Schofield is rather small, aged from 30 to 35, rather good looking, well dressed and very suave. The only suspicious feature about him was his urgent invitation that officers of the bank go out to dine with him as his guests.

Distrusts Banks; Loses Money

Henry Woodford, a bachelor at Waverly, is another one of those fellows who doesn't believe in banks. He kept $44,000 in cash and securities under his mattress until a few days ago. Then he discovered that someone had made way with his "wad." Officers were sent for and bloodhounds imported from Waterloo, but the thief had made a clean getaway. Outside of one of the windows were found bonds worth $18,000, which the thief had apparently dropped as of no use to him. The remaining $26,000 was still gone at this writing. The property was $43,000 in notes, bonds and mortgages, $380 in certificates of deposit, $100 in cash and $30 coupon due. A woman housekeeper for the man is thought to know something about the affair.

Banker Killed in Accident

A sad feature of the death of John Goetz, which resulted from injuries received in a runaway near Iowa City, is that Goetz once saved the lives of three women at the spot where he met his own fatality. Goetz, who was president of banks at Lone Tree and Hills, leaped over the buggy pole and seized the runaway horses by the bridles when he saw the danger of the three women in the buggy. He was carried 200 yards before he stopped the frightened animals.

Iowa Notes

A forger while trying to escape at Downey was the target for several bullets sent in his directions by pursuers, among whom were the cashier of the Bank of Downey. The whistling of the bullets proved efficacious in bringing the young man to a halt. He had passed three checks with the name of his employer forged to them, when the cashier grew suspicious and started after him. The young fellow ran down the railroad track and was making excellent time when the bullets began to whiz past his ears.

The First National of Council Bluffs is again after the board of review of that city in the district courts of Pottawattamie county. The assessor assessed the stock at $128 per share but the bank alleges that he included United States bonds to the value of $268,000. Under the Iowa law the bank declares that the assessment of national bank stock, taking into consideration the value of government bonds as part of the assets, is a discrimination against stockholders and in favor of other moneyed capital. Government bonds must be deducted from the assets if held by private bankers and to include them in national bank assessments is discriminatory, the petition states.

Papers filed in answer to a suit brought by a loan broker in Des Moines showed that Edward Lynn had borrowed $110, paid $147 interest and still owed $101. Publication of the state of affairs resulted in the loan broker withdrawing his suit.

The First National at Aurelia has added $2,000 to its surplus, giving it $23,000.

The Andrew Savings at Andrew has sent out neat announcements of its commencement of business. J. L. Kinley is president; F. H. Daniel, vice-president; Osborne Sampson, cashier.

The Pierce interests in the First Savings at Reinbeck have been absorbed by a new organization with E. K. Green, president; S. W. deWolf, vice-president; E. P. Beiber, cashier; G. H. Clark, assistant cashier.

R. H. Moore has rounded out forty years of active service in connection with the First National at Traer. He is at the head of the institution, which is a strong one.

The Grinnell Savings has started work on its new structure. It will be two stories high with a depth of seventy five feet and a frontage of forty feet. It will be a credit to the bank and to Grinnell.

E. D. Rayburn, vice-president of the First National at Montezuma, was in Des Moines last, week, motoring into the city over the new cut-off of the river to River Road from Iowa City into Des Moines via Montezuma, Searsboro and Lynnvile.

The First National at Council Bluffs has completed the awarding of its prizes on best corn grown in Pottawattamie. The contest was a great success and developed that western Iowa corn is in fine condition despite heat and drouth.

J. D. Whisenand, president of the Central State, is back in Des Moines after a vacation in Michigan.

Harry T. Blackburn, cashier of the Iowa National of Des Moines, has gone East to meet Mrs. Blackburn and son, who have been in Europe.

The American Savings at Maquoketa has changed its title to the American Savings Bank and Trust Company.

Earl Barger of the Leavitt and Johnson Trust Company at Waterloo went to Montana to take a chance in a claim at the land drawing.

C. W. Tobie, detective connected with the Burns agency at Chicago, was in Des Moines last week consulting with Secretary P. W. Hall of the I. B. A. relative to some of the cases in which both are interested.

South Dakota Notes

Members of the agricultural committee of the South Dakota Bankers Association in attendance at the Kansas City conference included H. L. Hopkins, Brookings, chairman; W. S. Hill, Mitchell; Isaac Lincoln, Aberdeen; E. F. Waite, Miller; M. P. Beebe, Ipswich; J. E. Platt, Clark.

The First National at Wessington Springs has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000.

R. H. Farmer has retired from the Hitchcock State at Hitchcock and removed to Flaxton, N. D., where he engages in the banking business.

BELIEVES BANKS SHOULD ACCEPT CURRENCY BILL

The bankers of the country should accept the administration's scheme for currency reform and co-operate with the government in the difficult task of remedying present conditions, according to John P. Scott, president of the Red River Valley Bank and Trust Company, Shreveport, La.

"Some of the bankers have taken a wrong attitude in his matter," said Mr. Scott. "The proper thing for them to do, in my opinion, is to accept the bill with the modifications which have been allowed by the administration, and then hope for additional changes as the need for them becomes apparent to the public and to congress. In this way we shall ultimately get what we want, I believe.

"It is foolish for bankers to attempt to dictate to the government of the United States in this or any other matter.

"You know the politicians, at least some of them in the South, like to point out the difference in station between the bankers and the poor person.

"Stump speakers will go out into the rural districts and address the natives, saying: 'Folks, you haven't got any carpets on your floors, nor any paint on your walls, but the bankers have all the carpets and paint that they want, and they go to Europe every year to see the sights of foreign lands.'

"In the past politicians have used this kind of talk against bankers to make themselves solid with the poorer class of voters. That feeling of hostility isn't nearly as strong as it used to be, but nevertheless I would warn the bankers not to set themselves apart as a class, and, even more important, not to appear to demand things which the government elected by the people of this country is unwilling to grant them."

NATIONAL BANKS IN U. S.

Fourteen applications to organize national banks were received at the office of the comptroller of the currency in August.

Of the applications pending nine were approved. In the same month eleven banks, with total capital of $555,000, were authorized to begin business, of which number eight, with capital of $205,000, had individual capital of less than $50,000, and three with capital of $350,000 had individual capital of $50,000 or over.

On August 31st the total number of national banks organized was 10,438, of which 2,934 had discontinued business, leaving in existence 7,504 banks, with authorized capital of $1,066,862,175, and circulation outstanding, secured by bonds, $740,029,948. The total amount of national bank circulation outstanding was $761,720,020, of which $21,690,681 was covered by lawful money.

The State Bank of Fostoria, Fostoria, Kan., which was closed several weeks ago by direction of Charles N. Sawyer, state bank commissioner, has been reopened. The old board of directors is in charge and new capital has been secured.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

At the approach of fall Spokane bankers and business men have a number of hopeful indications to cheer them.

Harvest is nearly completed in most sections of the Spokane country. In Whitman county, immediately south of Spokane, in the heart of the famous Palouse wheat belt, the bumper crop is all in the sack, with the exception of that from a few isolated parts near the mountains. The yield is unusually heavy and the quality generally is above the average.

When harvest is entirely finished business in all branches will feel a quickening influence. One of the busiest seasons of the year for banks of the Spokane country is at hand.

Spokane business men take considerable satisfaction in the healthy condition of this city's building operations, which have kept steadily ahead of the 1912 record. For August the building permits show a gain of $2,322 over those of August, 1912, their value for the month just ended being $112,779.

For the first eight months of 1913 Spokane's building permits amounted to $2,468,368, as against $1,660,179 the first eight months of last year, a gain of $808,189.

City Building Inspector George Mackie, after looking over the amount of building in progress, finds the situation better than it was a year ago. More good buildings are going up and the structures are being erected, he says, to fill actual demands rather than for speculation.

In the Columbia valley district, west of Spokane, crops are reported excellent by J. A. Yeomans, assistant cashier of the Old National Bank, who made a trip through the valley by automobile this week. A record grain crop is being harvested, and what is even more promising for the future, the farmers are raising more corn and live stock, especially hogs and sheep.

More good things are in store for the extensive apple industry of the Spokane country, which industry has been the object the last few years of unusual attention by bankers and business men, who are determined that this $50,000,000 investment shall be a profitable one for all concerned.

This week President Charles Hebbard of the chamber of commerce, as spokesman of the business interests, announced that there will be a sixth national apple show in Spokane, probably about the middle of November. This city has been the home of the five preceding shows, which have provided the incentive and inspiration for attacking all problems of the orchard industry in a way that has solved most and is now disposing of the remainder.

This year's show will continue the work started successfully at last year's exhibition, when 1,000 fruit growers and business men in all lines assembled to organize for the co-operative marketing of large and ever-increasing product, their deliberations resulting in the incorporation of the North Pacific Fruit Distributors, an organization that is selling the bulk of the orchard output of the Spokane country already this year.

Gordon C. Corbaley, secretary of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce, will manage the 1913 apple exhibition and congress, in conjunction with the following board of trustees: J. C. Barline, Henri Crommelin, W. H. Cowles, W. T. Day, Orris Dorman, A. L. Flewelling, Adrian G. Hanauer, M. E. Hay, C. E. Hickman, W. J. Kommers, F. H. Lloyd, H. H. McLane, H. J. Neely, James S. Ramage, Sidney Rosenhaupt, H. C. Sampson, J. M. Watkins, all of Spokane, and H. F. Davidson, Hood River, Ore.; M. J. Higley, Payette, Idaho; O. M. Morris, Pullman; J. A. Perry, Medford, Ore.; E. S. Russell, Wenatchee; J. E. Shannon, North Yakima; Paul Weyrough, Walla Walla; Fred Whitesides, Kalispell, Mont., and W. H. Wicks, Moscow, Idaho.

At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Inland Empire Paper Company of Spokane it was voted to increase the capital stock from $250,000 to $500,000 to care for extensive developments under way at the company's plant at Millwood, just east of the city. Wilbur S. Yearsley of Spokane, who has been president since the organization, at his own request was succeeded by Judson G. Rosebush of Appleton, Wis. Mr. Yearsley retains his interest in the company and was re-elected to the board of trustees. These officers were elected: Judson G. Rosebush, president; R. S. Talbot, vice-president; L. M. Alexander, treasurer; W. A. Brazeau, secretary, and W. H. Goodenough, superintendent. Mr. Brazeau has just returned from a trip to California, and his report of large orders secured there and the prospect of good business on the coast makes the future of the paper mill look bright. With the additions now being made the plant will have a capacity of sixty-five tons daily.

A. F. McClaine, president of the Traders National Bank, and Julius Galland, president of the Northwest Loan and Trust Company, have been appointed by the Spokane Clearing House Association as its delegates to the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association. The A. B. A. convention will be held in Boston October 6th, and the clearing house section will hold its annual convention concurrently with the big gathering. W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, is a member of the clearing house section. J. P. M. Richards, president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, will attend the Boston gathering as the delegate of the Washington Bankers Association and will represent the Spokane banks also, giving them a strong delegation at the national gathering. James C. Cunningham, vice-president and manager of the Union Trust and Savings Bank, will join the Spokane delegation on the journey to Boston. Mr. Cunningham is vice-president of the trust company section of the national association for this state.

R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company and president of the Western Union Life Insurance Company, having offices in Spokane, was notified of his appointment as vice-president of the American Life Convention for this state. The honor was conferred on Mr. Rutter at the recent meeting at St. Paul of the national organization.

EDMONTON NEWS

"There is now as much reason as ever to take an optimistic view of the financial and business standing of the dominion of Canada," said Sir William Whyte, ex-vice president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, now a member of its directorate, and chairman of the executive committee of the Standard Trust Company, in Edmonton on August 23d. Sir William is on a tour of western Canada, accompanied by John F. Gordon, president of the last named company, and William Harvey, managing director, N. Bawlf, G. Girven and Dr. Popham. They are looking over the company's investments in the coast and prairie provinces.

"Naturally," Sir William continued, "the financial conditions have been stringent; but what could one expect with the excessive and continued trouble in the Balkans? Now the Balkan trouble has cleared and with it has been lifted a cloud from the European horizon. But that has not been the only reason of stringency in the money markets of the world. Besides western Canada's borrowings there has been an enormous drain upon English capital by Australia, New Zealand, India, Africa and other countries. There is a great railway expansion in all these countries and the Canadian municipalities also want large amounts of money for civic development purposes.

"Another factor in the financial stringency is the disturbance in Mexico. Then there is also the tariff question. The fact that it is still unsettled is a disturbing influence in trade. If the duty is taken off steel rails it will mean much to western Canada, which needs more railways. However, until the tariff is settled the various industries and the railways will not know what to do. So on the whole, there is no reason to wonder why we should be experiencing a monetary stringency. But I believe the situation has been greatly relieved and that cloud which had loomed up black has now been cleared, bringing with it brighter prospects.

"From present prospects there will be a large crop in the West. We are now having the kind of weather that is needed. The grain crop is earlier than usual and throughout Alberta it is greater than ever, on account of increased acreage and greater acre yields. In Manitoba and Saskatchewan the straw is shorter, but that is not a disadvantage; in fact, wheat with short straw is cheaper to harvest."

J. Obed Smith, commissioner of immigration for Canada in Great Britain, who was in Edmonton on August 23d on a tour of the dominion, preparatory to opening an active campaign abroad in September, reported that the department is now devoting much attention to France, Belgium and the Scandinavian countries with a view to interesting desirable settlers in the agricultural resources of Canada.

"We are using all forms of advertising and the results are highly satisfactory," Mr. Smith added. "Perhaps the most effective work we are doing consists of carrying information to every town and village in the British Isles by means of motors and wagons. Here our workers speak to the school children about Canada. We also give illustrated lectures during the winter months and send out millions of pieces of literature, including maps. We use 1,000 or more British papers and as a result we have thousands of inquiries, every one of which receives individual attention.

"What has been accomplished is told by the census figures, especially in the western provinces. The first six months of this year we et a new record in immigration from the British Isles to Canada. Eighty-six thousand people have come to Canada from the British Isles the first half of this year, which is 15,000 more than in any similar period in previous years. That this influx into Canada will continue is evidenced by the fact that we have more inquiries than ever before."

FOURTH NATIONAL SEES IMPROVED CONDITIONS

Fourth National of New York says: "There is an excellent volume of business still being done in most sections of the United States. Recent advices from the West have been eminently optimistic, both in respect to the volume of orders which is now being turned in, and also as to the outlook for a very much better business in the autumn. It is also evident that the situation at many of the manufacturing centers is better than it was a month ago, and that in spite of the hesitant one which will prevail in some industries until the new tariff law is enacted present conditions are, on the whole, reassuring. There is abundant basis for the feeling expressed in many quarters that there will be a further revival in business activity as soon as the new tariff law has been placed on the statute books. "The great banks of Europe have made further progress in strengthening their position through the accumulation of an immense gold reserve. The Bank of England for the third week of July reported the largest gold holdings for that date in any year since 1896. Its ratio of reserves to liabilities stands higher than the figure reported at that time in any of the last sixteen years. The Bank of France has increased its gold holdings during the year no less than $24,000,000. Its gold holdings, except for the year 1909, have never been exceeded for this time of year. The Bank of Germany also holds $30,000,000 more cash than it reported at this date in 1912. These amounts show that the principal banks of Europe are making decided progress in the accumulation of a large gold reserve which will stand them in good stead during the period when pending loans are to be financed. The New York banks have also a good surplus for this season, and because of the thoroughgoing liquidation that has taken place the general bank position is to-day unquestionably strong. So much has been done in preparing for the autumn drain that the chances are that the demands of that period will be satisfied without undue difficulty, and the banks will unquestionably extend whatever accommodation is needed by legitimate borrowers of all classes. The situation may be helped also by the inflow of gold from Argentina, which has already begun and which is likely to continue with occasional interruptions for some time to come. It is an altogether natural exchange operation, and may result in our getting back from South America a large portion of the $22,000,000 gold which we shipped early in the year to that quarter for the account of banks in London and Paris.

"The investment situation is improving. There is a better demand for bonds both from private and financial institution buyers, and it looks now as if the inquiry would broaden further to the betterment of the whole investment market. What is also reassuring is the indication that investors are gradually evincing an inclination to take up long-term bonds rather than only such securities as have one or two years to run. This marks a definite change for the better, in that it shows confidence is returning and that the time may not be far distant when normal conditions will again prevail. It is, however, not yet a normal bond market for the reason that investors are still timid and hesitating, but the uncertainty is not nearly as great as it was a month ago, and the chances are that the recovery now under way will continue. One reason for the improvement has been the moderation shown by the bankers in the output of new security issues. There has been no glut in the bond market here in the sense that there has been abroad. The recent flotations have been for comparatively moderate amounts and were fairly well taken. Some short-term bonds have shown a tendency to improve in price. This has been true of stocks where the advance has carried some of the standard shares from eight to twelve points above the low level of June. Although the stock market inquiry has been largely professional, there has been some excellent buying of high-grade securities based on the theory that the seasoned dividend-paying shares had declined as low as they could be reasonably expected to go."

SEE NO DANGER IN TARIFF

David R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank of Chicago, and Andrew J. Graham of Graham & Sons, bankers, are of the opinion that no business disturbance will result from the passage of the pending tariff bill. Mr. Forgan said:

"Bankers as well as merchants and manufacturers will rejoice when the uncertainty as to the tariff schedules is ended and the bill is finally passed by congress. Any ill effects that might have been expected to result from the passage of the measure have been discounted long ago, and I believe the general opinion is that it will be a good thing to have it passed and got over with. I expect an increase in public confidence and an extension of legitimate enterprise."

"I believe the passage of the tariff bill, necessarily ending all existing doubt on the part of business men as to the rates of duty in the various schedules, will result in a marked increase in public and private enterprise and encourage the active use of dormant capital. From the fact that more than 50 per cent of the imported articles are on the free list it would seem that there must result some reduction in the cost of living. I am convinced no harm can come to business by the passage of the bill. Any possible ill effect has been discounted long ago," said Mr. Graham.

More than 300 credit men attended the banquet. Henry W. Hardy, assistant treasurer of Libby, McNeil & Libby, president of the association, presided.

CHICAGO'S VISITORS

Among the out-of-town celebrities who put in an appearance in Chicago's financial district this week were Chas. E. Fairchild, assistant cashier Home National, Elgin; O. A. Johnson, vice-president, and F. A. Bach, cashier, of the Lee State, Lee, Ill. Mr. Johnson is a practical farmer and says his section of the state has suffered considerably as a result of the dry season. Farmers generally have some of last year's crop to market yet, which will help out in a financial way. E. K. Dillworth, cashier of the Peoples Bank, Vermont, Ill., spent several days in Chicago this week. He says that crops in Fulton county have been more or less affected by the prevailing dry spell. Edward J. Hughes, assistant cashier of the First National of Milwaukee, ran into Chicago Tuesday to take a look at the business show in session at the Coliseum. The First National is completing its magnificent new building and Mr. Hughes has his eye to the windward for anything which will add to the elegance of appointment and the convenience and comfort of the employees and patrons of the bank. Edward D. Keys, president of the Farmers National at Springfield, was here Tuesday. Springfield people generally are making great preparations for the entertainment of visitors to the Illinois State Fair, October 4th to 10th. He expresses regret that the dates of the A. B. A. convention conflict, for this will prevent the attendance of a great many bankers, as the Illinois State Fair is an institution with many of the active bankers of the state. Charles W. Boyden, cashier of the Farmers State of Sheffield, who is an active member of Group One of the Illinois Bankers Association, called on Chicago acquaintances this week. Mr. Boyden said Bureau county will not quite come up to its usual standard of crops this year on account of the dry spell, but there will be no suffering, as a considerable portion of last year's crops has been held over, and by bringing in additional stock and feeding this fall they will get good prices for their stock output in the spring. Jacob Goldman of Bessemer, Mich., president of the Peoples State of that place, called on Chicago friends this week. Mr. Goldman has been engaged in the mercantile business in a number of the northern peninsula cities and has but recently embarked in the banking line. He reports business conditions as satisfactory and says that their bank has had a satisfactory growth during the brief period of its existence.

OHIO CONVENTION

The big convention of the Ohio bankers as held this week in Cleveland and was filled off in fine style. There was a big attendance and fine weather. Elaborate preparations were made by the local bankers for the entertainment of the visitors. The invitations for the convention were in the form of a bank pass book, the cover simulating leather, the interior ruled in red and blue and the program inserted where the record of account could be.

President S. D. Fitton of Hamilton called the convention to order at 9 o'clock Thursday morning in the ball room of the Statler hotel. The Rev. T. C. O'Reilly, chancellor of the Cleveland diocese, gave the invocation and Mayor Baker and Col. J. J. Sullivan, president of the Central National and of the Superior Savings and Trust, welcomed the visiting bankers. W. P. Sharer, president of the First National of Zanesville, responded.

Addresses and reports were delivered by group chairmen, including E. L. Coen of Vermilion, Treasurer S. J. Brister of Canal Dover, and Secretary Stacey B. Rankin of South Charleston. Governor James M. Cox addressed the convention.

In the afternoon Senator Robert L. Owen, joint author of the currency bill, discussed the proposed law and Charles W. Burrows of Cleveland talked on one-cent letter postage. In the evening supper was served at the Country Club and dancing and other amusements followed.

Friday morning Dr. H. Parker Willis, associate editor of the Journal of Commerce, New York, spoke on the reserve provisions of the new currency bill. Reports were heard from Charles Ash of Fostoria for the agricultural committee and W. A. Graham of Sidney, Fay Baldwin of Greenfield and John Vance, Jr., of Columbus, all representing committees. Presentation of a gavel to the retiring president followed. In the afternoon the bankers took a lake cruise.

Col. J. J. Sullivan's dinner to the ex-presidents of the association was a huge success. There were about sixty present. Among those responding were former Presidents Griffith, Graham, Hinsch and Hoffman; President Fitton, Editor Baker of the Cleveland Plain Dealer; F. W. Wardwell, president of the Cleveland Clearing House, and Messrs. Williamson, Creer, Blicke, Crane and Edens.

of sound business ethics, and the intervening years have proven the wisdom of the founders of the organization. May the future bear to its fullest fruition the aspirations and dreams of those devoted, earnest and able men. The history of the Ohio Bankers Association is a proud one, for there has been no blemish on any of its officials or any of its acts. Its course has been determined by high ideals of banking, not only for the material advantage of the banks, but recognizing an obligation of the bankers to the separate communities in which the banks may be located. A banker by lending judicious assistance and advice may in many instances build up one who may become a factor—and also by a timely word of encouragement or warning produce as much permanent good as though he gave material aid, for a banker becomes a confidant in a large degree of the people with whom he is associated in business relations, and it is his duty as well as his privilege to accept such confidences in the most sacred manner, and give in return the best value that is in him, for there are ethics in banking, as in the law or other professions, and one must be true to himself to become of use to others. When a banker becomes ambitious to become suddenly rich, or to be financially interested in all the different interests in his locality, or to promote some hazardous proposition, he has departed from the safe path and will surely meet the penalty, for no bank should be in a position to be compelled to yield to illegitimate demands upon its resources.

Any bank can afford to lose occasionally by mistaken judgment, but it cannot afford to be placed in a position that demands can be made without fear of refusal.

The advantages of membership in the state association and the respective groups are so many and have been so often named, that it seems as though every bank and banker in Ohio would become a member of both these associations. The Ohio Bankers Association has grown satisfactorily the past year, and yet it is the wish of its officials that every bank and banker in our state be enrolled as a member, and place Ohio in the proud position before the nation in which she properly belongs. The group meetings have been exceptionally well attended this past year, and the programs have been of a very high order. The importance of these meetings has been such that they have commanded the ability, talents, and time of our most distinguished men. The discussion of vital subjects at these meetings cannot help but be most enlightening and useful.

Our association has taken a prominent and positive position on all the economic questions of the day. I believe that we could with credit to ourselves and profit to our state give more attention and interest in the new and progressive agricultural situation.

It may not be amiss to recognize the ability and untiring efforts of our secretary to promote the interests of our association. He receives the different propositions, makes due inquiry as to their merit, and is able thereby to give full information to the council of administration, which is of much value to them in their deliberations.

It would hardly seem to be the province of your president to discuss the general financial questions of the day, when they will be presented to this convention by the able and distinguished men on this program.

MONEY RATES LIKELY TO BE FIRM

As a result of the strong demand for money at the present time it is very likely that rates will not ease off for some little time. George M. Reynolds said this week:

"There is an insistent demand for money which holds up rates and I do not expect any material change within the next sixty or ninety days. Our loans now are within $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 of what they were in the latter part of June, when the situation was the closest of the year. I do not anticipate we shall have any stronger demand, if quite so strong, as we had then.

"There is occasionally talk of easier money but bank loans and the demand for accommodation do not evidence a change in the situation. The fact that crops in Nebraska and Kansas have been poor will lessen the needs of that section.

"Bankers from those states tell me they are in an easier condition because of the absence of borrowing in preparation for the crop movement. But that is all I can see to suggest a smaller demand.

"The $50,000,000 which the treasury department will distribute among the banks has had a large effect. That amount of cash will operate as a reserve, enabling the banks to expand their credit. So far as this bank is concerned, we have loaned a great deal in the South, about $3 for $1 as compared with previous years. This money will soon be coming back to us, and will be in hand at the time of the heaviest requirements in the Northwest. We have reason, therefore, to feel comfortable."

TWO BANKERS SENT TO PRISON

Coudersport, Pa., September 9.—John B. Jones and George A. Wilcox of Wellsville, N. Y., convicted of conspiracy in connection with the management of the affairs of the Genesee Banking Company of Genesee, Pa., were sentenced to-day to a maximum of two years each in the Eastern penitentiary at Philadelphia. Both men were directors of the bank, which closed its doors several years ago after a short existence. There was approximately $150,000 on deposit and depositors received 10 per cent.

RECEIVER FOR NURSERY COMPANY

Bloomington, Ill., September 10.—John Y. Chisholm was to-day appointed receiver for the Phoenix Nursery Company. The liabilities are $65,000.

LOUISIANA BANK CLOSED

St. Francisville, La.—On account of withdrawals and inability to realize on its loans at this time, the Feliciana Bank and Trust Company has suspended. It is claimed that the bank is perfectly solvent and depositors will be paid in full, but owing to the stringency in money affairs the bank has not been able to get financed so that it might continue until crops would move here, which would have relieved the situation almost entirely. The bank has $100,000 capital and $200,000 deposits. Its officers are S. McC. Lawrason, president, and J. R. Matthews, cashier.

LAMPERT IN SOUTH

Nelson N. Lampert, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National, is visiting in the South.

SECOND NATIONAL OF TOLEDO

Second National of Toledo, Ohio, has capital of a million and surplus and profits amounting to $1,600,000. The assets are more than twelve millions. The bank is having erected a twenty-one-story bank and office building which it expects to occupy some time this month.

The officers are as follows: M. W. Young, president; T. C. Stevens and T. W. Childs, vice-presidents; W. C. Carr, cashier; C. W. Cole and F. A. Chapin, assistant cashiers.

Illinois Convention

Practically all preparations have been completed for the big convention of the Illinois Bankers Association which will be held at the La Salle hotel in this city next week. President John D. Phillips has announced the following list of speakers: D. R. Forgan will make the address of welcome and the response will be delivered by E. E. Crabtree. Among the speakers will be Senator Sherman, Representative Tice, Governor Eberhardt of Minnesota, A. J. Dawson of Davenport, Ia.; Robert S. Seeds, Birmingham, Pa.; W. E. Taylor, Moline, and George M. Reynolds, Chicago. There is a possibility that Senators Lewis and Owen will be on the program.

The meetings will be held on the 19th floor of the hotel and the registration will be on the mezzanine floor. W. T. Perkins, assistant cashier of the National City Bank, who is chairman of the committee looking after reservations, stated this week that provisions have been made to take care of a couple of thousand people. Mr. Perkins desires to impress on the membership the importance of immediate reservation. All reservations sent to him will have prompt attention and it is essential that they be made at once.

Arrangements have been made for 800 luncheons at the South Shore Country Club and a nice little souvenir in the way of a menu card has been prepared for the occasion. The luncheon will be followed by an automobile ride around the city.

Chairman Hurst of the dinner committee says that at the group dinner everyone who is sent in an acceptance will be welcome; every member of the association is wanted, as well as the boys from the visiting cities of New York, St. Louis, Milwaukee, etc. The dinner, however, will be for men only.

TO THE NEW ENGLAND SECRETARIES

The New England secretaries of state bankers associations have been notified by W. B. Harrison, secretary of the Organization of Secretaries, that they will be expected to come to the A. B. A. convention at Boston in their autos for the purpose of turning these machines over to Western secretaries to use during the convention week. The secretary whose machine is used most will be given a quart of gasoline and a box of tire patches as a prize. A penalty of $3 per hour for ten hours of each day he attends the convention will be assessed against each secretary who fails to comply with the rules. Racing will be prohibited. For that reason Secretary Hopes of Texas will be barred from riding the autos lest he use one in his race for the treasurership.

RETURNS FROM OKLAHOMA

Nelson N. Lampert, vice-president of the First Dearborn National, has returned from Oklahoma. Mr. Lampert said that high prices of cotton will offset the damage to the crop and that business men in the states which suffered from the drought are not discouraged although losses in corn will be a serious blow.

Bankers Presiding This Week

JOHN E. BUCKINGHAM
PAINTSVILLE, KY.

B. W. MOSER
ST. LOUIS, MO.

President Buckingham of the Kentucky Bankers Association also is the head of the Paintsville National. At the Louisville convention this week he told of the progress of the state bankers association and of the activities of the organization in behalf of an adequate banking law.

President Moser of the American Institute of Banking is publicity manager of the St. Louis Union Trust Company. At Richmond this week he presided in an able manner and in his address outlined some of the work which the A. I. B. has accomplished and told of plans for increasing its usefulness and efficiency.

The recent rains have freshened up the soil for fall plowing.

"Generally speaking, business conditions are splendid, and the outlook most promising," said Mr. Lampert. "It is gratifying that the country is readjusting itself with no disturbance to the coming tariff. One must wait to see just what the effect of the new tariff will be, but with the exception of certain lines of industry here and there I do not apprehend any ill effects. Money rates will continue firm for some time. It is hoped if congress enacts the currency law that the measure will be based on sound banking principles and will be so drawn that it may have the approval of experienced bankers so there shall be assurance that national banks will freely participate in the new system."

CHICAGO COMPANY GETS BOND ISSUE

Messrs. C. W. McNear & Co. have just been awarded an issue of $50,000 Madison county, North Carolina, Road 5's, due July 1, 1943, interest payable January 1st and July 1st, at the National Park Bank, New York. Denomination $1,000.

SAYS BANKERS OWE WILSON DEBT OF GRATITUDE

E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust, says that United States bankers owe President Wilson a debt of gratitude for the stand he has taken in endeavoring to secure the enactment of an adequate banking and currency law.

"There are revisions which should be inserted, and will be made," he said, "before the measure becomes a law, but the bill is a good one and soundly based. It embodies provisions which will provide for emergencies to come, and promises remedies which will prevent future congestion," said Mr. Hulbert.

Mr. Hulbert is of the opinion that the bill will be amended in such a way as to meet the requirements of the situation in such a way as to prevent one section from obtaining advantages over another; that the administration is willing to listen to the opinions of bankers opposed to the fundamental features of the measure.

JOSEPH WAYNE JR., Philadelphia, is back to work after a vacation spent in New England. Says there will be an active demand for money in his city all fall.

"HOW many of you know what the bill is all about?" asked Senator Owen at the Ohio convention. One man raised his hand amid shouts of laughter.

SOME of those present attempted to heckle the senator with "questions" and aside remarks. They miscalculated their own powers or underestimated the senator, who finished about "ten up-eighteen holes."

WM. R. CREER of Cleveland went on the nominating committee for Ohio. Big men on guard this year.

THEY tell us that Col. Sullivan broke his town long record of scintillating speeches in welcoming the Ohio bankers. And Stacey B. Rankin got "23" on his string as secretary. He's the dean all right.

R. D. SNEATH of Tiffin is the new Ohio president and he and Secretary Rankin promised to "c'mon over" and see a real convention in Chicago next week.

MORE big men! Charles A. Hinsch of Cincinnati and W. P. Sharer of Zanesville were elected to the Big Council.

GEOGE M. REYNOLDS says "money is comfortable." At least it makes the man who has it feel that way.

E. D. HULBERT continues to be "sent for" at intervals by the administration forces at Washington. President Wilson has the greatest confidence in what he gets from Mr. Hulbert.

"STATEMENT explained in detail, so that it will be readily understood by everybody" is a foot note on the latest folder sent out by J. A. S. Pollard for the Fort Madison Savings Bank.

ATLANTA is going to put up a hot fight to land the 1914 A. B. A. convention. Col. Farnsworth is going down to size up the hotel facilities, at which he is an expert.

MR. FARNSWORTH will be entertained at a sumptuous dinner given by the Atlanta Hotel Men's Association, at which distinguished men of the city and state, leading business and professional men, and members of the press will be invited.

COL. OTTLEY will be in charge of the "convincing arguments" and he can't be eaten at the job.

PROMINENT church officials and regular army men are dubbed insane by their former associates the instant their crimes are found out. Great team work!

WE hear that a big handsome automobile, the property of the cashier, started a fatal run on a New Jersey bank.

THARLAN BREED has resigned the cashiership of the Second National, Boston, after fifty years of service in the bank.

THAT yarn started by a coast publication that J. Fletcher Farrell of this city is a candidate for the A. B. A. vice-presidency at Boston will not down.

MR. FARRELL has denied it explicitly and emphatically, yet it continues. Others seem to think he is after a re-election to the treasurership, held by him the last two years.

IMAGINE how he feels to be represented as "out for it" against two of his best friends, both at once—Chapman of Minneapolis and Hoopes of Texas. Forget it everybody. He's for his friends and wants no office.

THE Chicago convention is upon us and for a wonder there seems to be but one contest in sight—Fox and Brents for the treasurership.

LAST year it was so near a tie between Woodruff and Aisthorpe at Peoria for the council chairmanship that the younger man withdrew. This year he has no opponent.

THE A. B. A. membership on the big council is in the same box. The boys put over a little piece of a term on Nelson Lampert not long ago and have felt badly over it.

THIS year they want to give the big fellow a full sized cut of pie and no opponent has developed.

ALL of Illinois wants to help Joseph Chapman at Boston and W. G. Edens seems to be the choice for the job of going on the nominating committee. Whom would you choose if you were the candidate? Can you think of anyone else?

WELL, that's the reason.

DON'T forget that first meeting of the Chicago Bankers Club. President Wm. A. Heath was early on the job and has Hon. Carter Glass for the banquet orator. Some class to Glass.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., has an ordinance limiting the time an automobile may stand at the curb in the downtown district to fifteen minutes, and is now enforcing it rigidly. The traffic policemen have adopted a plan of keep-tab on the length of the stop.

THE penalty for "joy riding" in Wisconsin is now a fine of from $500 to $1,000 or a maximum of five years in jail.

THIS is provided in the new motor law. Another drastic change is the penalty of a fine of $1,000, instead of $100, for leaving the scene of an accident without offering aid and giving the name and address.

MANY Oklahoma banks have, so it is said, loaned money to a certain shrewd circus man on his wife's jewels. "Big interest" is promised and "big security," which is worthless, is taken. When a bank goes into the pawnbrokers business it makes a wrong disposition of its funds.

HERE are a few lines from the Oklahoma Banker, telling what happened at the Kansas city agricultural conference:

"JOSEPH CHAPMAN of Minneapolis presided—and he is an excellent presiding officer. When he is elected to the presidency of the A. B. A. about a year hence, as we hope and confidently believe he will be, Chapman will grace that position in a manner excelled by none who has occupied it.

"EVERBOBY who attended the conference sang his praises before it was over, simply because they couldn't help admiring his earnest, fair, impartial actions as chairman. And he didn't try to do all the talking or to show off in any way."

HERE are two more paragraphs from W. B. Harrison's gifted pen:

"THE editor of THE CHICAGO BANKER is pictured by a southern publication as the Cardinal Woolsey of the American Bankers Association. At any rate, he is represented as possessing the Cardinal's power. As a brother editor we cannot help pointing this warning to the reputed dictator: 'Flee ambition, by that sin fell the angels.'

"BUT it must be mighty nice just to sit in that office in the Monadnock building and select all the officers of the A. B. A., as ye editor is reputed to do. Even Woolsey would have blushed had anyone imputed such power to him. One thing will be conceded—the proceeding is entirely Law-less this year."

MR. HARRISON doesn't take the matter seriously except that he has the commendable habit of getting in behind the biggest and best man in sight when an important place is to be filled.

ANOTHER Ohio private bank has been closed up under the new private bank law. It was the Bank of Fayette and no statement is yet available showing the condition as required by the new law.

towns in need of money this change of attitude on the part of the bond dealers will be more than welcome.

FROM McLane Tilton, secretary of the Alabama bankers, we have a letter suggesting team work on the part of the country bankers when it comes to passing resolutions.

MR. TILTON says that the "exchange and savings sections of the bill are especially to our disadvantage and unless proper changes are made in them many country national banks will be forced to take out state charters."

"THE Lord has a habit of helping those who help themselves, so we country bankers must get busy in our own behalf unless ready and willing to accept this double injustice. Failing to get the convention to take action, I would recommend a separate meeting of country bankers at Boston to adopt resolutions on these matters and to appoint a committee to go to Washington and urge them. I will be glad to hear from others interested and to see them at the Copley Plaza promptly on their arrival."

THOSE interested should write to Mr. Tilton at Pell City, Ala., and get in touch with the movement early. CASHIER.

Mr. Palmer will be president and Mr. Eberwein, cashier.

WORKING THE CHICAGO BANKS

A clever German, using names of Fred Newkirch, F. Landgraf and Anton Weber, opened accounts at several Chicago banks this week. He showed letters from the Fruit Growers Association of Placer county, Nevada, and used checks on the Crocker-Woolworth and the Wells Fargo nationals of San Francisco. In two cases he "drew" money on his own checks, but his "kites" didn't get by. He's a big, full-faced, prosperous looking German—wears glasses and shows prominent teeth. Senator Owen on the Handling of Commercial Paper

Chairman of senate committee on banking and currency, explains relations of the banks with the proposed federal reserve banks

The federal reserve banks (section 15) are given the power "to deal in gold coin and bullion, both at home and abroad, to make loans thereon, and to contract for loans of gold coin and bullion, giving therefor when necessary acceptable security, including the hypothecation of United States bonds."

The obvious purpose of this is to enable these banks to protect the gold reserve of the country. But they have the further power "to invest in United States bonds and bonds issued by any state, county, district or municipality," and obviously with these securities they could also obtain gold to protect the gold reserve of the nation and of their own banks.

But they are further given power "to purchase from member banks and to sell, with or without its endorsement, bills of exchange arising out of commercial transactions, as hereinbefore defined, payable in foreign countries." (This ought to include domestic exchange also.) "But such bills of exchange must have not exceeding ninety days to run and must bear the signature of two or more responsible parties of which the last shall be that of a member bank."

Market is Created

It is obvious from this power that a market is immediately created for foreign bills of exchange (and it ought to include domestic bills as well). And it has further power "to open and maintain banking accounts in foreign countries and establish agencies in such countries wheresoever it may deem best for the purpose of purchasing, selling and collecting foreign (it should be or domestic) "bills of exchange, and to buy and sell with or without its endorsement through such correspondents or agents prime foreign bills of exchange arising out of commercial transactions which have not exceeding ninety days to run, and which bear the signature of two or more responsible parties."

Under this power there is an open market provided for handling bills of exchange and making available for American use or establish a foreign market for such bills of exchange and obtaining money at a low rate of interest.

Under section 14 any federal reserve bank, upon the endorsement of any member bank, may discount notes and bills of exchange arising out of commercial transactions. This paper must be of short, fixed authority—not more than ninety days.

Discount Unlimited

It is obvious that there is no limitation on this discount power, except that the reserve bank must keep $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent gold or legal tender against its demand liabilities.

Where the reserve bank has more than $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent in cash against its outstanding demand liabilities, exclusive of its outstanding federal reserve notes by an amount to be fixed by the federal reserve board, it may discount such bills of exchange where the maturity does not exceed 120 days, but not more than half of such paper so discounted for any member bank shall have a maturity of more than ninety days. The member bank may also discount acceptances of banks which are based on the exportation and importation of goods which mature in not more than six months.

These notes or acceptances coming into the hands of an ordinary national bank would be endorsed and delivered to the reserve bank as collateral security for loans extended to the member bank. They would be put in the collection portfolio of the reserve bank. If the reserve bank wanted to get treasury notes on these bills of exchange and acceptances it would place them in the custody or under the control of the federal reserve agent located in the office of the reserve bank, and he would pay the reserve bank treasury notes in exchange for a like volume of these commercial bills of exchange and acceptance, which he of course would pass on.

When the notes are paid they will be paid at the counter members of the banks and will be sent there for collection, and when the returns were remitted and the reserve bank paid the member bank would be credited with the returns on the loan previously made the member bank and the reserve bank would repay to the federal reserve agent the treasury notes previously borrowed on such paper. The treasury notes would thus retire from circulation.

Aid to Merchants

If the federal reserve bank desired, it could sell the notes without endorsement to banks having idle money, and in this way a market would be built up for commercial paper which would be of the greatest value in enabling the manufacturers, merchants and business men of the country to mark their credits upon the endorsement of their home bank.

In answer to the question, "What would happen if the man making the note should become bankrupt?" the answer is that that man to whom credit will be extended on a four months' note by a solvent bank is not apt to fail within four months. The chances of his failing must be considered, however. It is far less than one in ten thousand. The member bank of good standing under the bank examiner's report failing within the fixed period of four months is not one in a hundred thousand.

The measure of probability of both the maker of the note and the bank both failing, within the fixed period of four months, is one in ten thousand times a hundred thousand, or one out of a billion. But in such a contingency the government has the safeguard of the reserve of the member banker on deposit; it has also the further security of the stock of the member bank so failing, and in the event that this should not suffice it has the double liability of the private stockholders of the member bank.

HOUSE PASSES CURRENCY BILL

The house passed the Glass-Owen currency bill on Thursday by a vote of 286 to 84. The principal provisions of the bill as passed are:

Division of the country into twelve districts and organization of a reserve bank in each district.

These banks to rediscount existing paper as the basis for the issuance of an elastic currency.

Reserve banks to have a total capitalization of $150,000,000, the same to be paid in by the national banks of the respective districts and such state banks as wish to enter the organization.

Creation of a general board of control acting in behalf of the national government, consisting of seven members, including three regular officers of the national government and four members chosen by the president.

The federal reserve board may compel one federal reserve bank to rediscount prime paper of other reserve banks.

Provision for a federal advisory council of twelve members, each district electing one through the directors of the federal reserve banks.

Paper admitted to rediscount embraces notes and bills maturing within ninety days and drawn for agricultural, industrial or commercial purposes.

Transfer of all moneys now held in a general fund in the treasury to the reserve banks, disbursements to be thereafter made by check upon such banks.

The note issue provided for is that of an issue of government treasury notes, obligations of the United States, and receivable for all taxes, customs and other public duties, to be redeemable at par on demand.

Provisions for the retirement of the present 2 per cent bonds held by the banks to secure bank note issues within twenty years.

Change in the reserve requirement for national banks so that ultimately 5 per cent of the outstanding deposits of all banks will be required to be carried in the new reserve banks, 5 per cent of the deposits of present country banks to be carried in cash in their

Senator L. Y. Sherman of Illinois will oppose the pending currency bill before the convention of the Illinois Bankers Association in Chicago next week.

The Illinois senator is to speak at the banquet of the International Congress of Refrigeration at Chicago Tuesday night, and accepted the invitation of President John D. Phillips of the bankers' organization to address their convention on the following day. Senator Sherman will leave Washington Monday.

Senator Sherman will attack the pending bill on three important points in his Chicago speech. He will condemn its compulsory participation and compulsory rediscount features, as well as the provisions which seek to establish government control over private credits through the proposed regional reserve organizations.

States His Opinions

"I think the compulsory features of the bill enforceable under forfeiture of national bank charters," declared Senator Sherman, "are violations of the rights of private property."

"The national banks hold the money of their shareholders and their depositors. It is this money which this measure seeks to compel them to invest in the regional reserve association. Not only does it seek to compel them to invest this money but it takes the control of these investments out of their hands and puts it into the hands of the government.

"Through the compulsory rediscount feature there will be nothing to prevent a political governing board from enforcing the rediscount by a bank in Chicago of wildcat paper that may come from Oklahoma or Alaska or anywhere. And it will have to use the money of Illinois depositors to do it. This, I feel, is a violation of the right of private property."

Majority Against Bill

"As to the control of private credits, I feel that is outside of the province of the government. I believe it has the right to regulate these credits, but it should not attempt to control them. There is a vast difference between regulation and control."

"I shall take advantage of this meeting of the Illinois bankers' organization—representing the bankers of the state, large and small, national, state and private—to ascertain just how much support there is for the Wilson administration currency bill. All the correspondence I have had has indicated a large majority of the bankers against the measure, and I shall be surprised to find it otherwise at Chicago."

As Sherman's Chicago visit will be followed by a visit to Springfield and to the Illinois state fair in the following week, it is considered here the real opening of his campaign for re-election.

The senator sent a letter some time ago to all the republican precinct leaders in the state outlining his tariff views, and this was looked upon as the preface of his campaign. The present trip, however, will be his first visit to the state since his re-election plans have taken shape.

Democratic Revolt Curbed

An eleventh hour revolt from the will of the caucus and the leadership of the banking and currency committee spread among democrats of the house when the administration currency bill was within the shadow of the final vote upon its passage. It threatened for a time to reach serious proportions, but the party leaders finally got the situation in hand again.

Chairman Glass of the committee and other leaders who sided with him were worried, and their predicament afforded unconcealed amusement to the republicans, and particularly to Progressive Leader Murdock.

The revolt lasted through many speeches on the democratic side, several from across the aisle, and one vote on which more democrats deserted the committee than had left its standard on any of the questions brought up before.

Fess Amendment Starts Row

An amendment by Representative Fess of Ohio, designed to maintain all legal money at a parity and insure the retention of the gold standard, caused all the trouble. Some democrats professed to see in it a revival of the old issue of bimetallism and openly charged that the committee in endorsing such an amendment was offering a gratuitous insult to four-fifths of the democratic party. That issue, they pointed out, was settled sixteen years ago.

Representative Witherspoon of Mississippi was the first to announce that with such an amendment tacked to the bill he would bolt the caucus and vote against it.

"I will never vote for it," he shouted, "for I am an honest man."

"I challenge the right of the committee to bring in such an amendment as this," Representative Wingo said. "Somebody is playing politics and trying to humiliate four-fifths of the democratic party. It is useless—it is

FIRST NATIONAL HOLDS FIELD MEET

Employees of the First National held their third annual field meet and athletic championships last Saturday at De Paul field, Webster and Sheffield avenues. There were about 2,000 persons on hand to witness the events, which consisted of regular track and field numbers and various baseball feats, including base circling and throwing for distance. President J. B. Forgan acted as honorary referee and Vice-President Frank O. Wetmore was the referee. The meet was an individual championship affair. Fred P. Green won two firsts, circling the bases in 0:15-2/15 and winning the 100-yard dash in 0:10-3/15. Harry Pinter won the 120-yard low hurdles in 0:14. Other stars were H. Hibarger, Roy Larson, Harry Peterson, R. E. Pritchard and C. E. Cross.

The one-mile departmental relay race was won by the collection department; city books second and country books third.

The field and track events were preceded by a ball game in which the officers of the bank opposed the "Old Timers." The former were headed by Vice-Presidents Wetmore and Boisot, while T. F. Bliss and Judson Whaples, each with over thirty-five years' service in the bank, were in the lineup for the old timers. Bliss saved the day for his team by a running catch in the outfield, the final score being 11 to 9 against the officers.

INSTITUTE MAN PROMOTED

The board of directors of the First National of Syracuse have elected Alfred W. Hudson, of New York, vice-president of that institution. Mr. Hudson, who has been with the Windsor Trust, and later with the Empire Trust of New York, takes the position held by A. W. Loasby, former president of Syracuse Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, who has resigned to become president of the Trust and Deposit Company of Onondaga.

Mr. Hudson is thirty-seven years of age and has been in the banking business ever since he finished his education. His first position was with the Fifth Avenue Trust of New York City. Early in 1908 he passed the civil service examination for the position of bank examiner, ranking second out of 150 applicants, and was appointed to a place in the state banking department. In 1909 he became secretary in the financial department of the state comptroller of New York, and in 1911 he was elected to the vice-presidency of the Windsor Trust, which office he held until the merger of that company with the Empire Trust early in the current year, since when he has been identified with the combined organization.

He is a firm believer in professional education for bank men, which work is now receiving much attention through the country through the activities of the American Institute of Banking, an organization of over thirteen thousand members. Mr. Hudson has been a member of the Institute ever since it was founded, and is now president of New York Chapter, which has a membership of over two thousand bank men.

GOODS ROADS ASSOCIATION FORMED IN CHICAGO

A new good roads association to be known as the Associated Roads Organization of Cook County was formed at the Chicago Athletic Club Thursday night by representatives of various civic and automobile clubs of the county. W. G. Edens of the Central Trust, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association and chairman of the good roads committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce, was elected president of the new organization.

The objects are to bring about the co-operation of all citizens in the matter of good roads and the safe and proper use thereof.

Efficiency and economy in the expenditure of all funds devoted to the construction, repair and maintenance of streets and highways.

Uniform, fair and rigid enforcement of all laws, ordinances, rules and regulations affecting the use of the streets and highways by vehicles and pedestrians.

Announcement was made that Mayor Harrison has agreed to appoint a commission of automobile experts next month to frame all legislation relating to traffic conditions in Cook county.

TO STIMULATE INTEREST IN DAIRY-ING

At the forthcoming convention of the Illinois Bankers Association to be held in Chicago the subject of agricultural development and education will be touched upon, special attention being given to dairying. The agricultural committee of the association has issued a pamphlet in which it shows that the average farm income from dairy products in Illinois is only $125 per year, comparing with $143 in Iowa, $187 in Minnesota, $304 in Wisconsin and $360 in New York. It is shown that the average number of cows to the farm in Illinois is 4.2, against 7 in New York, though the average size of the farm in Illinois is 129 acres, against 102 acres in New York. Illinois farmers are urged to double the average number of cows, hogs and other live stock.

THE MONEY SITUATION

Present indications are that money will be somewhat easier during the next six months, if not for a longer period. Business is making satisfactory progress and probably will not be disturbed to any great extent as a result of the new tariff. There seems to be plenty of funds for legitimate enterprises, which is attributed to the practice of conservatism which has been urged by the banks.

The Clearing House, Its Progress and Possibilities

The clearing house is not an institution of modern times, although the first in this country was organized but sixty years ago. It is recorded in history that one existed in Lyons, France, in the year 1600, and an institution of similar character was established in China 2600 B. C. Their duties or functions are not described, but it is fair to presume they were used for the purpose of making a settlement of some nature. The original purpose of the modern clearing house was to simplify and facilitate the exchange of checks and the settlement of balances arising from such exchanges. Its field of action has been gradually extended until now it embraces many new features, among which may be mentioned the collection of country checks and other items for members; making rules and regulations governing exchange charges on such collections; fixing the rate of interest to be allowed on deposits; issuing of clearing house certificates against a deposit of gold or currency, said certificates to be used in the settlement of balances and in transactions between members; in time of panic to assist a member by the use of clearing house loan certificates secured by bills receivable of the borrowing member, and to safeguard the common interests of its members both as between themselves and as affecting banks in other localities having established relations with them. The rules governing the conduct of members vary somewhat, and in some cases include the depositor. In Berlin, for instance, one overmond convention of American Institute of Banking

drawing his balance is, under the rules of the clearing house association, requested to withdraw his account, and in Tokio the name of the drawer of a check not good is posted at the clearing house, and he may be reinstated and allowed to renew his bank account only when his credit is restored. The interchange of city checks and the settlement made by the clearing house is a vast improvement over the old method and requires but from 5 to 10 per cent of the balances to be paid in actual cash. A most striking example of this is shown in the settlement of the sheet of a Boston bank that sent to the clearing house checks aggregating $11,000,000, and had a debit balance of $2,800.40, also a total of $6,180,000, was settled with $167.31. Analyzing the latter statement, with reference to the other members, it was found that a settlement under the former methods would have required cash to the amount of $1,949,000. These, of course, are extreme cases, but a fair illustration would be that of the assistant treasurer, who is a member of the clearing house, and has paid the past year checks to the amount of $47,000,000 by the use of $1,700,000 in cash. The same condition prevails in all large cities where the "clearing house depositary certificate" is in use, that form of payment figuring prominently in the settlement of balances. In Boston 70 per cent and in New York 80 per cent of the total consists of these certificates. Other cities use transfer orders and exchange on reserve centers in addition to cash. It would appear to be feasible that a uniform method of perfecting settlements be adopted by all clearing houses, and this subject is among those now being considered by the executive committee of the clearing house section.

The clearing house section is looked upon by many as the most important branch of the American Bankers Association. During the past few years many questions of importance to the banking interests of the country have received the attention and support of this section. Clearing house examinations, improved methods of making collections to reduce the cost of exchange charges, the numerical system, uniformity in reporting clearing house exchanges and registration of commercial paper have been, or are at present, under consideration.

Collection of Out of Town Checks

Perhaps the most important of these is the collection of out of town checks, and many systems have been devised to reduce the cost of handling these items. With a view to ascertaining to what extent checks were used, a recent inquiry by the department at Washington covering all sections of the country, brought replies from 12,000 banks that showed the deposits of retail houses to consist of 73 per cent in checks, while the wholesale merchant reported 90 per cent, and payments in that form rapidly increasing. How, then, shall this very important and necessary branch of banking be conducted to produce the best results? The authors of the federal reserve act evidently thought this question of some importance as the provision regarding collection charges reads as follows:

"It shall be the duty of every federal reserve bank to receive on deposit, at par, and without charge for exchange or collection, checks and drafts drawn upon any of its depositors or by any of its depositors upon any other depositor in any other federal reserve bank upon funds to the credit of said depositor in said reserve bank last mentioned."

Should this be adopted, the result would be to place all checks at par, first within the district controlled by the federal reserve bank, and secondly the checks on other districts would be collected through the federal reserve banks of the several districts. Should this clause fail to be enacted, the result will undoubtedly be the same in the near future, the clearing house acting as collecting agent, as with some slight changes one of the systems now in vogue might be adapted to the needs of any financial center.

Boston, Kansas City, Mo., Atlanta and Nashville have in operation systems alike in their principle features, though differing slightly in detail, that have proved a partial solution at least of this somewhat perplexing problem. Boston covers the New England states; Kansas City includes Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Oklahoma, Colorado, New Mexico and Texas. Atlanta collects on Georgia, Florida and Alabama. Nashville also is responsible for quite a territory. In each city the clearing house is the collecting agent, and the result, so far as Boston is concerned, has proved highly satisfactory. The country banker receives in his daily letter checks from all the city banks and draws one check in payment instead of one for each bank as formerly. Should he prefer to settle with currency, he may send it by registered mail at the expense of the clearing house. He is also privileged to send to his Boston correspondent checks on

New England banks, thus taking advantage of the par list, which includes 90 per cent of the total number. The city banker profits by the reduced cost of collecting and by the prompt returns, all settlements being made in two days (which is only one day longer than it takes to collect city checks), all checks being sent direct and the correspondent remitting on day of receipt. The saving of time is also quite a factor, and the cost of postage is reduced at least 50 per cent. In making his settlement with the clearing house, the city banker makes but one entry instead of many that would be required under the former method. The question is sometimes asked, "Is it good judgment to send all checks direct?" With an experience of fourteen years and a business of approximately six hundred million annually, the loss has been too small to mention, and the cost of collecting, including postage, printing, stationery and clerk hire, was reduced several years ago to seven cents per thousand dollars and still remains at that figure.

Possibilities

In view of the success attained under the above method, is it not reasonable to assume that the system might be extended to cover a much greater territory and checks interchanged between the clearing houses of the different sections, and thus expedite collections and reduce the cost to a minimum?

Since clearing houses have performed for fifty years the services now proposed to be rendered by the National Currency Association, it is evident that there is no need of other organizations than clearing houses to do this work for the public in the future.

The great advantage that clearing houses possess is that they are in continuous operation, and include state as well as national banks. Their various functions are so important to the country that they should become a part of the national system in order that the finances of the nation should be organized and operated under the laws of congress.

CHANGES IN SAN FRANCISCO BANK

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Merchants National, San Francisco, Cal., the resignations of Alfred L. Meyerstein as president and John H. Spring as first vice-president were tendered and accepted, the vacancies being filled by the election of Robert Oxnard as president and W. E. Johnson as first vice-president. The ill health of Mr. Meyerstein is given as a contributing factor in the change. Mr. Meyerstein and Mr. Spring retain their heavy interests in the bank and will continue to serve as directors. Robert Oxnard, the new president, is a financier and sugar producer, and has long been a director in the bank. Mr. Johnson, who succeeds Mr. Spring, formerly was second vice-president of the Merchants National and was for many years connected with George Wingfield's Nevada banking institutions.

KANSAS BANKS MAY BID MORE

Kansas state banks will be permitted to go the limit in bidding for state funds this year as a result of a ruling made by Attorney-General John S. Dawson and promulgated by Charles M. Sawyer, bank commissioner. In order to permit the state banks to avail themselves of his chance to make higher bids the state treasury board has postponed the date for apportioning state funds for deposit among the various national banks of the state. In the past national banks have been able to bid as high a rate of interest as they felt they could stand to secure deposits of state funds, while the state banks were limited under an order issued by former Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley not to exceed three per cent. Mr. Sawyer asked the attorney-general for an opinion covering the matter, and this has been given out.

One of the results of the new ruling of the attorney-general and the state banking department will be to permit state banks under the state bank deposit guaranty law to pay a higher rate of interest to the state on its deposits than to private depositors in the same bank. To protect the state bank deposit guaranty fund and to promote conservative and safe banking methods, the state banking department has been given the power to issue orders restricting the rate of interest which banks taking advantage of this law can pay on ordinary deposits. The ruling of the attorney-general is to the effect that the state banking department has no power to restrict the rate of interest which state banks may offer to pay upon state deposits, the law requiring state funds to be deposited in the banks bidding the highest rate of interest.

By C. C. Burford

The Press Bulletin of the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois, under recent date, calls attention to several points in the management of farm lands in periods of prolonged heat and drought which bankers could well pass along to their farmer customers. Professor Leonard Hegnauer is especially careful this year to warn farmers to prepare well the land which they will sow in winter wheat. The moisture must be conserved and the soil must be well packed. The method which Professor Hegnauer advises is as follows:

"Double disk the land first, plow about four inches deep, harrow, roll, then harrow again. Still later, it may be necessary to disk or harrow again. It is important to get the ground well packed underneath. Finally, a disk drill should be used to sow the seed."

Attention also is called to the need of care in saving seed corn this year. Great care should be given this question every year but especially this year. The prospects are there will be a scarcity of good seed corn. Prepare early to secure good seed corn from the good fields. Seed two years old and well preserved may be in good demand. The seed should be kept in a warm, dry place, which is true every year, but more especially so this year. Soy beans have been raised this year with profit on the university farm, a good crop of both late and early beans having been secured. Some of these bean plants, in excess of university requirements, will be sold for seed. Soy beans constitute one of the best fertilizers which a farmer can raise, and are even better, according to some farmers, than is clover. Banker-farmers who wish the Press Bulletin can have their names placed on the mailing list by sending a postal card to the editor, Dr. B. E. Powell, University of Illinois, Urbana.

Commercial Association Aids Farmers

The Citizens Commercial Association of Freeport, one of the active commercial organizations of the state, with a membership of almost four hundred business and professional men of that city, is making every effort to improve the agricultural conditions in Stephenson county. The interlocking of community interests between business and professional men and the farmers is one of the ways in which the needs of farmers, merchant and banker can be united. Freeport, with its active business men and its live commercial organization, is one of the best cities in northern Illinois. R. B. Simpson, secretary of the Citizens Commercial Association, is making progress in acquainting the general public with his city and with its business interests.

Tenant conditions, so prevalent in many counties of central Illinois, do not prevail to such a large extent in Stephenson county, the farms around Freeport being operated largely by their owners. Most of the grain is fed at home with the result that the principal agricultural products are more in live stock than in grain shipments. Stephenson county's chief shipments are milk, beef, hogs and horses.

There are six banks in Freeport, these being the First National, the Second National, State Bank of Freeport, the German Bank, Freeport Trust and Savings and the Bank of Charles D. Knowlton. These banks are well known to bankers throughout Illinois and adjoining states.

Freeport Banker Describes City

William Trembor, vice-president of the German Bank of Freeport, has made the following statement regarding the past, present and future business conditions of his progressive city, which will be of interest to Mr. Trembor's friends and to the many men who have admired the growth and development of Freeport:

"Freeport not only stands with the progressive cities, but is fast making headway as a great manufacturing center and to-day is a busy, prosperous city of nearly twenty-five thousand population. Freeport is fortunate in having live-wire leaders and citizens who recognize the demand for the kind of progress that is aimed, not to meet present needs alone, but rather to anticipate future demands and the safety and comfort of its people. Freeport has not been built in a day or a year, but by steady, never-turning-backward movements. As a municipality it has always stood for that conservative progress which makes for permanent advancement. There are nearly sixty manufacturing industries in Freeport, all well housed in substantial structures, and these enterprises are growing rapidly, thus showing wonderful industrial development. There are four great railroad systems radiating from the city in every direction, furnishing excellent transportation and shipping facilities. Freeport has six banks, fine pure water, excellent schools, parks and churches, well paved and clean streets, modern office and public buildings and well kept retail stores. Many large new buildings are being erected as well as additions to present structures. Hardly a class of manufacturing can be suggested which could not be carried on here successfully."

A Magazine of Unusual Value to Investors

THE Investors' Magazine, published by this House, has been greatly increased in size and is now issued monthly instead of semi-monthly as heretofore. In spite of the fact that no subscription fee is asked for the magazine we have steadfastly endeavored to make each issue of genuine interest and permanent value to every conservative investor. The increased size of the publication in its new form provides for the addition of new departments and a multiplication of the peculiarly interesting and informative features which have characterized it in the past. Every issue will contain one or more carefully prepared articles by men of prominence in the commercial or financial field, discussing those phases of the investment question upon which they are best qualified to speak with authority. We have also prepared a new Booklet which describes in detail the merits of the First Mortgage Bonds we sell, in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000, netting the investor, 5½ to 6 per cent. The soundness of these securities, together with the care with which we safeguard our clients is best shown by the fact that no investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us since this House was founded thirty-one years ago. We will be pleased to add the names of actual investors to our mailing list without any charge or obligation whatever.

which was ascribed to various bankers. A banker found one in the Hoopeston Chronicle recently and while he would like to credit the authorship of this little gem of poetry to President I. E. Merritt or Cashier Mark R. Koplin of the Hoopeston National, yet he feels constrained to attribute the writing of this interesting morsel of unsigned English poetry to John L. Hamilton, especially as Mr. Hamilton is just leaving Hoopeston for his new home in Columbus, Ohio, and this poem might be properly considered as his farewell literary effusion in the Hoopeston Chronicle. The "poem" follows:—

"There was a young lady from Michigan,
To meet her I never would wishigan,
She would eat of ice cream,
Till with pain she would scream,
Then order another big dishigan."

New Bank at Richview

The Richview State Bank, with capital of $25,000, has been organized at Richview, a few miles southwest of Centralia. The new bank succeeds the Farmers and Merchants Bank, which was established in 1912. J. F. Mackay, president, and C. A. Lee, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants, continue in their respective positions with the new bank. James Gillan and Edward Tucker are vice-presidents. The correspondents are the First National of Chicago and the National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis.

Banker-Farmer Publications Available

Two publications of vital interest to the banker-farmers of the state are available for distribution. One is "The Illinois System of Permanent Fertility," known as Circular No. 167, and the other is "Shall We Use Commercial Fertilizers in the Corn Belt?" and is the fourth edition of Circular No. 165. Both papers are by the able Dr. Cyril G. Hopkins, professor of agronomy in the College of Agriculture of the University of Illinois. He was spoken at many bank meetings and is well known to both bankers and farmers. The circulars may be secured by addressing the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, Urbana.

REPORTS AUGUST AS POOR CROP MONTH

August was unfavorable for crop development in the United States, the department of agriculture has announced. The composite condition of all crops September 1st was 10.1 per cent below average conditions on September 1st of recent years, whereas on August 1st conditions were 6.2 per cent below the August 1st average. Compared with a year ago prospects at this time are about 12.2 per cent poorer. Last year crop prospects steadily improved as the season advanced, the final outturn being the largest on record, on the other hand, this year prospects to September 1st have tended to decline with the advance of the season.

The condition (or production, if harvested) of various crops on September 1st compared with their average condition (not normal) on September 1st of recent years follows:

Cloverseed, 100.7; alfalfa, 92.6; millet, 76.5; grapes, 90; cranberries, 99; oranges, 91.7; lemons, 67.2; sugar cane, 94.4; sugar beets, 97.9; sorghum, 83.1; sweet potatoes, 94.4; cabbages, 90.8; onions, 92.5; hemp, 80; hops, 103.5; peanuts, 101.1.

The acreage of clover for seed is estimated to be 4.2 per cent more than last year.

TO LEARN VALUE OF STATE'S PROPERTY

State Auditor Brady and his corps of assistants are busy at work determining the best way to calculate the property of the state both in real and in personal wealth. Each head of a state institution has been asked to send to the state auditor figures covering the institution under his charge and these figures will be compiled by the office of the state auditor. This is the first time that anything approaching an accurate estimate of the property owned by the state has been attempted. The figures obtained by the auditor will be used by the new efficiency commission to make suggestions to the general assembly for the betterment of the state's various institutions.

MT. STERLING BANK SELECTS OFFICERS

J. E. Allison has been elected vice-president of the Brown County State Bank, Mt. Sterling, Ill., and Chas. A. Reid, cashier. W. T. Hersman is president.

UNITED STATES BANK CLEARINGS DECREASE

Bank clearings in the United States in the first eight months this year were $111,890,000,000, compared with $113,002,000,000 in the corresponding period last year. The decrease was 1 per cent. That decrease is trifling, and it appears to be attributable entirely to the falling off in speculation in New York and to some recession of business throughout New England.

Bank clearings in New York in the eight months ended with August were $62,898,000,000 compared with $65,543,000,000 in the corresponding period of 1912. In the first eight months this year transactions on the New York Stock Exchange aggregated about 60,000,000 shares of stock and $850,000,000 par value of bonds. In the first eight months last year transactions in stocks reached a total of about 85,000,000 shares and in bonds an aggregate par value of about $500,000,000. That drop in stock market activity probably accounts fully for the drop in New York bank clearings.

Clearings in the rest of the country outside of New York were $48,992,000,000 in the first eight months of 1913, an increase of 3.2 per cent over the total up to the end of August, 1912. Boston and New England report a decrease of 8.3 per cent in their bank clearings for the period. Outside of New York the cities of the middle Atlantic states report increases. Chicago and the Middle West report an increase of 6.1 per cent for the eight months, the Southern states an increase of 1.4 per cent, the farther Western states an increase of 7.5 per cent and the Pacific states an increase of 2.1 per cent.

So far as bank clearings are an index to general business conditions, therefore, there seems to have been more activity this year than last in all the main divisions of the country except New England.

In the month of August alone the country's bank clearings were $12,377,000,000, compared with $13,208,000,000 in August last year. The clearings in New York during the month decreased 9.7 per cent and in all cities outside of New York only 1.9 per cent.

government crop loan. The state is entitled to $1,000,000 of this sum but the red tape involved and small returns for the trouble are said by the bankers to make it unavailable.

The Marshal & Ilsley Bank this week purchased \$900,000 public school bonds from the public debt commission at par, with \$13,751.20 commission. The bonds bear $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent interest. The bank's offer makes the resumption of work on school buildings possible, this having been temporarily halted by the inability of the commission at first to market the bonds.

The Wisconsin National is named as the victim in a warning of counterfeit twenty dollar bills sent out this week by the United States treasury department. The bills are copied from the Milwaukee institution's issue.

H. L. Moehlenpach, Clinton, president of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, and Andrew J. Frame, Waukesha, are representing Wisconsin before the senate currency committee at the special invitation of Chairman Owen.

M. D. Garrison, cashier of the Peoples State of Thorp, was killed in an automobile accident at Stanley Monday night. He was thirty-one years old and is survived by his wife and child. The car, which was owned and driven by Mr. Garrison, turned turtle on a country road while going at a high rate of speed. Two business associates were slightly injured and will recover.

Work on the new $30,000 building of the Bank of Commerce, Superior, was commenced this week.

"Bank robbery" was the word that drifted down from Grand Rapids last Tuesday. But the conscientious telegraph editor of one of the Milwaukee papers who was out after the whole story discovered it to be a savings bank containing one Columbian 50-cent piece. One John Wood has pleaded guilty to the theft.

Articles of incorporation of the following new banks were approved by Banking Commissioner A. E. Kuolt this week:

Farmers Home Bank of Wautoma, capital $15,000. President, Guy Mumbrue; cashier, C. H. Oleston.

Farmers and Merchants Bank of Kendall, capital $23,000. President, Lewis Buswell; cashier, George H. Robertson.

MINNESOTA GOOD ROADS CONVENTION

Winona (Minn.) Association of Commerce, co-operating with the good roads associations, commercial and automobile clubs of the state and the Chicago, Black Hills and Yellowstone Park Highway Association, will hold a good roads and helping business convention at Winona October 6th and 7th. N. E. Franklin, president of the First National of Deadwood, S. D., is president of the Yellowstone Park Highway Association; J. W. Lucas is president of the Winona Association of Commerce and James R. Kinsloe is secretary and manager.

These dates have been selected to enable delegates returning from the American Road Congress at Detroit to attend the Winona meeting as they travel homeward. Minnesota Federation of Commercial Clubs, Southern Minnesota Better Development League and the Automobile Club of Winona are all co-operating to make this meeting a success.

NEW SAN DIEGO BANK OPENS

The Union National of San Diego, Cal., a newly organized financial institution, has opened for business in handsome quarters at corner of Broadway and Sixth streets. The president of the new bank is J. R. Burrow, ex-secretary of state of Kansas. He formerly was president of the Central National of Topeka, Kan. F. H. Burrow, vice-president of the new institution, resigned the vice-presidency of the National Reserve Bank of Kansas City to come to the San Diego banking house. For three years he was national bank examiner. C. W. Landis, cashier of the Union National, formerly was cashier of the National Bank of Osbourne. Charles Holzman, assistant cashier, resigned as auditor of the San Diego Exposition Company to take the position.

WASHINGTON BANKS SHOW INCREASE

Reports from the 259 state banks of the state of Washington, made to State Bank Examiner Hanson, for August 9th, show total resources and liabilities of $120,415,942, as against $107,971,255 for the corresponding call last year. Loans, discounts and overdrafts have increased from $61,164,777 to $71,673,159, deposits from $87,285,920 to $98,681,461 and capitalization from $11,673,480 to $12,292,500.

WANT FARM ADVISER

The bankers of Wichita, Kan., are keenly interested in the proposition of hiring an expert farm adviser for Sedgwick county. Several bankers have signified their willingness to contribute financial aid to the movement. A meeting of the Clearing House Association will be called within the next two weeks for the purpose of discussing the establishment of a county experiment farm. The agricultural committee of the Business Association, which has been working on the matter for a year, will meet with the bankers.

NEW ORLEANS BANKS GET CROP FUND

New Orleans banks received $2,300,000 from the United States subtreasury as its part of the $50,000,000 crop-moving fund. It was distributed $8,000,000 to the Whitney-Central, $400,000 to the German-American, and $300,000 each to the New Orleans National, Commercial National and the Hibernia National Banks. The Commercial National, Shreveport National and Amercian National Banks, at Shreveport, received $100,000 each out of the fund. The total allotted to Louisiana was $2,600,000. From these banks the money will be let out to smaller institutions all over the state.

OKLAHOMA BANK CLOSES

The Union State Bank, Muskogee, Okla., capitalized at $100,000 and with deposits of over $200,000, mostly public money, failed to open its doors on Saturday of last week and now is in charge of the state bank examiner. The bank will be consolidated with another Muskogee institution and the creditors will receive dollar for dollar. The depositors will be paid by the state guaranty fund and the public money by bonds. The public money consists of county, city and state deposits. George W. Allison is president and W. H. Thompson cashier.

HOT SPRINGS CASHIER DEAD

Charles W. O'Bryan, cashier of the Arkansas National, Hot Springs, Ark., died Sunday after a five week's illness of malarial fever. Mr. O'Bryan was born and reared in Hot Springs and had been connected with the bank for the past sixteen years. He was forty-two years old.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

Bank clearings during the past week have been slightly above those of a week ago and some of the bankers were disposed to see an improvement in business. The demand for money has been fair, while the bulk of loans was made at and around six per cent. New York exchange was in fair offerings and demand with the sales made between banks at par. Commercial paper was discounted at six per cent.

Asks Bankers' Opinion

Efforts to learn what country bankers and city and country business men of Missouri generally think concerning banking and currency reform are being made by the Missouri section of the National Citizens' League, an organization for the promotion of a sound banking system.

Congress ought to know what such men think, according to George A. Mahan of Hannibal, Mo., president of the Missouri organization and a member of the banking and currency committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce. He is sending 6,000 letters, asking Missourians to send their opinions to him and he will transmit their replies to the congressional committees on banking and currency.

Atkins on Postal Bank

Postmaster Thomas J. Atkins of St. Louis, who will soon retire from office, on Thursday, of last week told members of the City Club, at luncheon, that an enlargement of the postal savings bank system would solve the so-called currency problem of the United States. To do this it would be necessary to remove the restriction that deposits of not more than $500 may be received by the government from one person, he said. In five years such a system would draw from hiding more than enough money to move the crops," said Mr. Atkins. "I say this because there is not now on deposit more than forty per cent of the money of the country. The American people should think seriously before changing the financial system."

Mr. Akins showed how the postoffice is a barometer of trade. The St. Louis postoffice, he said, has shown a growth in receipts from $1,198,000 in 1890 to more than $5,000,000 a year and is more nearly standardized than any other large office in the country.

Cass County Bankers Meet

The semiannual meeting of the Cass County Bankers Association was held recently in the Hotel Harrisonville at Harrisonville. The principal addresses were made by Chas. S. Stevens, cashier of the Farmers Bank of Garden City, and W. W. Ferguson, president of the Farmers and Manufacturers Bank, Rich Hill. A legal question box proved an interesting feature of the meeting. R. S. Woodridge of Harrisonville, J. F. Blair of Belton and Joseph Zick of Pleasant Hill were appointed a committee on good roads. The next meeting will be held February 22nd.

Cashier Pleads Guilty

Theo. Muller, formerly cashier of the Bank of Campbell, Campbell, Mo., recently plead guilty to the charge of embezzlement and, upon the recommendation of the Bank of Campbell, was paroled. He had had two previous trials and was charged with embezzlement of $78,000 from the bank. He had been cashier fourteen years. By deeding all his property and giving notes for the balance of the shortage, Muller squared matters with the bank and the officers recommended his parole after a plea of guilty.

Forrest City Bank Again Open

The Bank of Forrest City, Forrest City, Ark., reopened for business on Wednesday of last week. Eugene Williams, cashier, in discussing the affairs of the bank, recently said:

"The Bank of Forrest City went into the hands of S. H. Mann, as receiver, August 2nd. It was not a failure—it was a condition that could not be reached any other way at the time. But now we have $127,000 in live assets over and above all liabilities and the bank will be a running institution again by September 10th, with the same officers, and I predict that instead of people wanting to draw out their money they will be coming to us with deposits. But every depositor or other creditor of the bank can get every dollar coming to him if he wants it."

The officers of the bank are County Judge E. A. Rolfe, president; Eugene Williams, cashier.

To Advertise Arkansas at National Convention

Plans to advertise Arkansas at the coming convention of the American Bankers Association in Boston, Mass., October 6th to 10th, were outlined recently at conferences of Little Rock bankers, with J. D. Covey of Bentonville, president of the Arkansas Bankers Association. A publicity bureau to be conducted along lines similar to those employed last year at Detroit will be maintained during the national meeting. The committee on publicity, composed of President Covey and George W. Rogers of Little Rock and Secretary R. E. Wait, appointed George R. Brown, secretary of the board of trade, to manage the bureau. Secretary Brown says he will have the co-operation of the railroads of Arkansas, the various commercial and immigration associations and will offer a display at the Arkansas headquarters that will make the New Englanders "sit up and take notice."

Receiver for Little Rock Trust Company

Acting upon the application of A. M. Heiseman and Morris M. Cohn, executors of the Abe Steiwell estate, Chancellor J. E. Martineau has placed the Little Rock Trust Company in the hands of Sam W. Reyburn, president of the Union Trust, as receiver. Mr. Steiwell, who died three weeks ago, was principal stockholder and president of the trust company.

Mr. Reyburn gave out the following statement: "The receivership, as I understand by interviews with the executors and attorneys who represent them, was found necessary because of the inability of the executors to legally conduct or sell the business on the credit of Mr. Steiwell's estate."

Texas Bankers Meet at Dallas

A special meeting of the Texas Bankers Association was held at Dallas last week for the purpose of securing the views of Texas bankers on needed currency legislation, with the view of submitting recommendations to Texas representatives in Washington. The meeting was open and a large number attended.

Endorse Farmers Union Marketing Plan

A resolution endorsing the Farmers Union plan for warehousing cotton and providing for its gradual marketing was passed by the San Antonio Clearing House at a recent meeting. The resolution also recommended that the individual banking houses of San Antonio give the Farmers Union plan their consideration. The action of the San Antonio Clearing House was taken at a joint meeting at which Peter Radford, former president of the Texas Farmers Union; Joe Langfield, of D'Hanis, member of the state executive committee; George Wideman, president of the Bexar County Union, and J. A. Arnold, secretary-manager of the Texas Commercial Secretaries and Business Mens Association, were present. Following the meeting Mr. Radford expressed the highest satisfaction at the manner in which the clearing house has approved the plan.

"They did all we expected them to do and we are entirely satisfied," stated Mr. Radford. "The approval of the plan in San Antonio means that the method has received the endorsement of the state bankers, as in all other sections the plan had been previously approved."

Several Farmers Union warehouses have been established in the San Antonio territory and others are under construction at this time. Already warehouses are in operation in Hondo, Stockdale, Lockhart, Floresville and Devine. Mr. Loangfield, who is in charge of the warehouse system for that section, and stated that about twelve new warehouses were under construction at the present time while at least thirty or forty more are needed.

Small Oklahoma Banks Ask Deposits

H. L. Bolen, Oklahoma City, named by the secretary of the treasury as one of those in Oklahoma to have charge of approving securities for banks applying for deposits of the crop moving fund to be furnished the state, says he is receiving applications from many of the smaller banks throughout the state. Mr. Bolen says his instructions are the smaller state banks are entitled to a portion of the money and that it will be his policy to let them have as much as they want with proper securities. The larger banks are not applying for the money as rapidly as anticipated. In the opinion of Mr. Bolen the money is needed in the country as banks there could easily loan the money where the most good would be done.

Southwest Notes

The new Farmers Bank of Renick, Mo., was opened on Monday of last week. Midge Marshall is president; Joe McCunne, vice-president; George Thornburg, cashier, and Will Thornburg, assistant cashier.

M. L. Woods, vice-president of the First State, Fort Worth, Tex., who is charged with embezzling $130,000, surrendered on Tuesday of last week. His bond was set at $15,000, which he readily made.

W. A. Waldrop, who has been connected with the Coggin National, Brownwood, Tex., for several years and with the Citizens National of the same city for the past few months, has resigned his position with the Citizens National and will open a new bank at Gatesville.

FRENCH BANK TO CLOSE N. Y. OFFICE

New York, September 16.—Martin Paskus, legal representative of the Franco-American Bank in this city, stated yesterday that orders had been received from the home authorities of the institution to close up the New York office. They added that Theodore Revillon, American director of the bank, is departing for Paris to-day in order to obtain official information regarding the reports from abroad that the institution either is to be liquidated or that part of its business is to be taken over by the London County and Westminster Bank.

Editorial Comment

WORKING FOR GOOD ROADS

That the good roads enthusiasts are not relaxing any in their efforts simply because Illinois has enacted a modern highway law is evidenced by the formation this week at the Chicago Athletic Club of a new association to be known as the Associated Roads Organizations of Cook County, in which are interested bankers, automobile clubs, civic and commercial bodies and many other interests recognizing the importance and desirability of up-to-date highways.

The value of co-operation of all citizens in the matter of good roads is one of the fundamental principles recognized and it is proposed to work towards this end with the idea of encouraging a safe and proper use of the roads. It also is intended to promote efficiency and economy in the expenditure of such funds as shall be appropriated for the construction, repairs and maintenance of the streets and highways; also a uniform fair and rigid enforcement of all laws, ordinances, rules and regulations affecting the use of the streets and highways by pedestrians and vehicles and to study the traffic problems presented, including street lighting and traffic control.

There will be co-operation with the government authorities in the matters above outlined and in securing the passage of uniform legislation tending to promote the safety and facility of traffic and better safeguards for the life and convenience of the public.

W. G. Edens, who has been an influential factor in all movements looking toward an improvement of road conditions, will be the head of the new body.

It is planned to hold meetings with the county commissioners and to get in touch with those counties adjoining Cook in an endeavor to induce them to agree on a plan for road improvement to the end that our principal roads may join those of the other counties.

People all over the country are joining this commendable movement for improved roads and there is a greater appreciation of their economic importance than was the case formerly. In this campaign the state bankers' associations have taken a prominent part, good roads committees have been appointed and much effective work has been accomplished as a result of their activities.

Considerable interest is being taken in a proposed transcontinental highway from coast to coast, known as the Lincoln highway. One of the principal merits of this proposed plan is that the road will not pass through any cities, it being realized that the tendency would be for tourists to lose themselves in the cities and successful travel thus seriously hindered and retarded. It has been reported that $5,000,000 has been subscribed by automobile manufacturers, supply dealers and the cement interests. Recently Carl G. Fisher, an automobile manufacturer of Indianapolis, and several others engaged in the same business, made an extended automobile tour through several states. They took speakers along, and held meetings, stirring up interest in the Lincoln highway, the idea being to induce the people of the states visited to subscribe to the fund already in hand.

A project of this sort is worthy of commendation and a road of the character proposed would result in incalculable benefit to the entire country.

Illinois, under its new road law, has adopted the use of convict labor and thus far the results obtained therefrom have been quite satisfactory. The idea is not a new one, having been tried out in a number of states, and everywhere the experiment seems to have been successful. We must not lose sight of the fact that we owe a certain duty to the unfortunates confined in our prisons. The beneficial effect which work on the roads is bound to have on the health of the convicts, and the tendency which it has to equip the men to resume their places in society after their term of servitude has expired, are sufficient reasons for the adoption of this humanitarian system of labor.

Of course there are a number of elements entering into a solution of the road problem, and these can best be contended with through organized, concerted effort. It is encouraging to note that the difficulties presented are being appreciated and that intelligent effort along the right lines is being expended.

DEFINING COMMERCIAL PAPER

Business and banking interests will welcome a truly descriptive definition of what is covered by the term "commercial paper." The new banking law, if adopted, will settle the points at issue for all time. Until that time its official status has been fixed by Secretary McAdoo in specifying the collateral to be deposited by the banks which receive government crop moving funds. Commercial paper, strictly speaking, consists of notes representing actual commercial transactions which bear the names of at least two responsible parties, the maker and the indorser, and usually run from three to four months, but notes of this character, owing to the change of business methods in this country, are no longer used extensively. Nowadays most of the large manufacturers and jobbers instead of taking a note from the buyer of a bill of goods and then indorsing it over to the bank, as was formerly the practice, sell to their customers on credit and issue their own notes in such amounts as are necessary to cover "bills receivable" from season to season.

Hundreds of millions of dollars of such notes are issued every year and constitute the bulk of what is now known in the business world as "commercial paper," though they are really considered by leading bankers to be "accommodation paper." From the very beginning of the movement to reform the currency the question whether notes of the latter description should be included as security for currency issued against "commercial paper" has given rise to heated debate among bankers. Secretary McAdoo in announcing his willingness to accept commercial paper as security for government deposits to the extent of 65 per cent of its face value states that the term "commercial paper" is used in its "general, and not its technical sense," and by so doing has apparently established a precedent that will apply to the currency bill fathered by the administration at Washington. Commercial paper now being offered for security by the banks, Secretary McAdoo has specified, "may consist of first-class business paper executed by individuals, firms or corporations of good responsibility for legitimate business purposes and not speculative transactions. It should preferably bear the names of not less than two persons or firms or corporations in addition to the indorsement of the banks submitting it, though the secretary may accept single name paper indorsed by the bank if the standing of the maker is regarded as sufficient."

If this will settle the vexed question of what really is covered by the term commercial paper, both the banks and the dealers will be well pleased.

CURRENCY PROBLEM AT BOSTON

That the proposed banking and currency law will come in for a goodly share of attention at the big A. B. A. convention in Boston is indicated in the statements of leading bankers. Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines said:

"The pending currency legislation is of the most vital interest to every banker and business man in the country, and it is not only the most far-reaching in its effect on business but it is also one of the most serious problems ever taken up for consideration by the association or by congress. A full attendance at the Boston convention will best promote the business and banking interests of the country. At no time has the necessity for discussion and co-operation been so imperative as now."

Lloyd Elston, a banker at Shelby, Ia., was married at Algona recently to Miss Lulu Mae Hofius, daughter of a farmer near Algona and a very popular young woman.

COOK COUNTY ROAD ASSOCIATIONS MEET

Wednesday the associated roads organizations of Chicago and Cook county met to take up with the county authorities plans for the improvement of the trunk line country roads leading out of Chicago and to determine which of such roads shall have state aid during 1914.

These associations are co-operating with the city officials in the matter of selecting a set of thoroughfares for improvement under the wheel tax fund and both city and county officials are co-operating in this matter so that Chicago motorists and others using the country roads will soon find continuous roads from the city through the county to the county line that will be useful the year around.

ATLANTA TRUST COMPANY INCREASES CAPITAL

Announcement of an increase of capitalization of the Union Trust Company, of Atlanta, Ga., from $300,000 to $1,000,000 and of the plan for a further increase to $2,000,000 has been made by George D. Pollock, president of the company. This institution was formed only last February and has been doing a business in farm and city loans since then, specializing in the former. The purpose of the increase is to afford a wider scope for the operations of the company and to enable it to get cheaper money from financial interests in America and Europe.

WARN OF NEW COUNTERFEIT

Warnings have been issued to the public of a new counterfeit $5 United States note. It is a poor photographic reproduction on paper of fair quality. The treasury seal has been slightly touched with pink ink and a slight attempt has been made to apply green coloring matter to the back of the bill.

There seems to be quite an epidemic of counterfeits and the treasury department has redoubled its efforts to capture the offenders.

FORGER GETS PRISON TERM

Private Luther Countryman, Company H, Seventh Infantry, who recently was tried by general court martial at Galveston, Tex., has been sentenced to dishonorable discharge and confinement for two and one-half years in Alcatraz prison, Cal. He was convicted of passing two bogus checks, one for $175 on the Texas Bank and Trust Company and another for $700 given to a civilian and made out on the Army National Bank.

BANKERS SENTENCED TO JAIL

John B. Jones and George L. Wilcox of Wellsville, N. Y., convicted of conspiracy in connection with the management of the affairs of the Genesee Banking Company of Genesee, Pa., have been sentenced by Judge Ormerod at Coudersport, Pa., to not less than nine months nor more than two years in the Eastern Penitentiary at Philadelphia. Both men were directors of the bank, which closed its doors several years ago after a short existence.

There was approximately $150,000 on deposit and depositors received ten per cent. A stay of twenty days was granted the convicted men in which to appeal to the superior court.

Support of reputable, responsible dealers in securities and real estate investments is claimed for the recently enacted "Blue Sky" law in a statement issued by Joseph H. Harper, who has charge of the department under the Ohio state banking department. Mr. Harper declares that even those who thought the law would be unnecessarily burdensome have come to the conclusion that it will not interfere with legitimate business enterprises. Organization of the bureau is not yet complete, but it is stated that provision will be made to deal effectually with the unlicensed dealer who is attempting to palm off worthless securities on Ohio investors. A force of inspectors is to be added to see that the law is strictly adhered to, Mr. Harper announced. Outlining a policy for the department, he issued this statement:

"The law was not enacted with the idea of burdening reputable dealers or real securities. It was in no sense designed with the intent of providing a source of revenue to the state. The intent underlying the law is to afford a protection to the investors, large or small, in the state of Ohio, and to see to it that worthless securities and real estate shall not be offered to Ohio investors.

"This carries with it, as a matter of course, the protection of all reputable dealers, and the few dealers who were not openly advocating the enactment of just such a law have become fast friends of the measure since it has become effective. Every dealer who has taken advantage of the protection the law affords has been quick to see the great possibilities for good. When the new department is finally organized into an effective working executive force, a vast amount of wealth which is annually taken out of the state forever on worthless propositions will remain at home for investment in the legitimate channels of trade, resulting manifestly to the benefit of the Ohio investors who seek safe investment for their savings. It will result in marked stimulation of worthy Ohio enterprises and development of national resources and in profit to the reputable firms that deal in securities of real value. One of the greatest benefits which the dealer in securities, and one which must be at once apparent, is that it will relieve legitimate securities from that unfair competition which wildcat proposals, carrying promises of enormous profits, always make.

"When the working force of the new department gets going the investments that have nothing more tangible back of them than the "Blue Sky" should no longer be effective as a means by which the people's savings are swept away. Reputable dealers in sound investments will then not be forced to compete with such proposals.

"The law is not difficult of application to a real state of facts; it is only when reading it, with no actual case in mind, and with an endeavor to grasp all the details, that it seems a little puzzling. There are two controlling methods by which the law seeks to make the intent effective—license the dealer and certify the security. This must be done unless either in the one or the other instance the dealer or the security falls within the exception provided in the law. The protection to dealers and investors is to be afforded by following out that line of action. First of all the dealer must be scrutinized, and, second, that which he would offer to the people of the state in exchange for their savings must be approved.

Increased Value of Ohio Banks' Stock

Shares of Ohio banks have increased $6,946,030 in value, according to the 1913 appraisal announced by the state tax commission. Their aggregate value is $184,285,640. Cuyahoga county banks contribute $39,732,730 to this total. Hamilton county banks come second with $36,197,530. The increase for the Cuyahoga county banks was $2,027,270 and for the Hamilton county banks $1,270,580. The biggest bank in the state, judged by the valuation of its shares, is the First National of Cincinnati, which is appraised at $8,655,440. The Citizens Savings and Trust of Cleveland ranks second with a valuation of $7,608,050. The Cleveland Trust Company comes third with $5,103,960. The Fifth-Third of Cincinnati is appraised at $4,511,520 and the First National of Cleveland at $4,825,760.

To Become State Bank

Stockholders of the First National, Wellington, Ohio, have decided that the bank will be reorganized under the state law. It is expected the reorganization will take effect January 1, 1914. This institution is one of the oldest in Ohio, its original number being second, and was started in 1864 with S. S. Warner president.

Bank to Pay in Full

Through an arrangement with the Ohio state banking department the Farmers State Bank of Fayette has taken over the affairs of the Bank of Fayette, a private institution which recently was closed by the state department for liquidation. Depositors will lose nothing as the Farmers Bank will liquidate at 100 per cent.

Dayton Chapter Plans Fall Work

The educational class work of Dayton Chapter, American Institute of Banking, will open Wednesday evening, September 24th, when the first of a series of lectures to the class will be delivered by Judge O. B. Brown on "Wealth and Money." The course of the lectures will cover eight subjects, including, besides that discussed by Judge Brown, "Banks and Banking," "Bank Accounting," "Stocks and Bonds," "Loans and Discounts," "Clearing Houses," "Savings Banks" and "Trust Companies." There will also be a line of textbook work and classes will be conducted every Wednesday evening at the Y. M. C. A. The lectures and regular monthly meetings of the parent chapter will also be held at the same place. Last year there were more than fifty men enrolled in the various classes. It is expected that this number will be largely increased this year because of the invitation extended to and accepted by the building association men to become members of the institute and its classes.

Delegates of Dayton Chapter who attended the national convention at Richmond this week were Walter Davidson of the City National; T. J. Brinkmeyer of the First Savings and Banking Company; Lloyd Van Dine of the Fourth National, and B. B. Brady of the Dayton Savings and Trust.

Bloomville Bank

According to the inventory of the appraisal of the Bloomville (Ohio) Exchange Bank and of Jacob A. Klahr, filed with the probate court by the assignees, J. W. Snyder and D. A. Dellinger, the known liabilities are nearly twice the amount of the appraised value of the assets. The face value of the assets is placed at $190,214.83 in the inventory. These were appraised at $107,718.53. The amount of the known liabilities is $201,870.53. The assets contain several loans of large amounts which are appraised as worthless. The liabilities include large numbers of trust funds placed in the institution by treasurers of churches, lodges, Sunday schools and other organizations.

Fogus Note on Baltimore Bank

That a clever gang of counterfeiters is at work either in this country or Europe counterfeiting the notes of the Second National of Baltimore is the belief of officials of that bank and also the United States secret service officers. This belief is based on the startling fact brought to light by the announcement of H. W. Moran, acting chief of the United States secret service, that a counterfeit note which is an imitation of the $20 issue of the Second National of Baltimore, had been received from Stockholm, Sweden, by a New York bank. The counterfeit is said to be a most excellent specimen of its kind, and so cleverly is it made that only the practised eye of an expert could detect the deception.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by F. C. Redmond

The Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, Minneapolis, has been named as depository for the bonds which the Minneapolis banks will have to give for the $1,000,000 of crop moving money that the government will deposit.

Represent Minneapolis at Richmond

Minneapolis was represented at the convention of the American Institute of Banking in Richmond this week by Lester T. Banks, L. N. Branna and Clyde Hill of the Northwestern National; Nye Armstrong of the Hennepin County Savings; A. V. Smith of the Security National; Walter C. Hall of the First National; A. E. Lindhjem of the Scandinavian-American National; B. Lohman of the North Side State; E. Noethen of the German-American, and Frank J. Mulcahy of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company. Several of the delegation will go to New York City for a visit before returning to Minneapolis. E. O. Nordstrom and Ralph L. Henly of the Merchants National were St. Paul delegates to the convention.

Governor Eberhart to Address Illinois Bankers

Governor A. O. Eberhart of Minnesota has accepted an invitation to address the Illinois Bankers Association at its convention in Chicago next week. He will speak on some phase of the movement for making rural life more attractive and profitable.

Offer to Fight Against Hog Cholera

Legislators and bankers in various parts of Minnesota are reported to be writing to farm college authorities urging them to enlarge the experiment station's serum plant to its greatest capacity so as to cope with the hog cholera epidemic causing losses in many counties. The legislators say they will support a bill at the proposed special session of the legislature appropriating sufficient money to cover such enlargement, and bankers are offering, it is said, to finance any plan that will assure enough serum for their own districts.

"The situation is about as bad in Minnesota as it possibly could be," said Dr. M. H. Reynolds of the veterinary science department of the farm college, and member of the livestock sanitary board. "At the present rate of loss, we estimate the year's losses will reach 3,000,000 hogs. The disease is pretty general, though Redwood county has it particularly bad."

W. B. Geery to Wed

William B. Geery, vice-president of the Capital National, St. Paul, is to marry Miss Mabel E. Lanpher in November. Mr. Geery is forty-six years old and a graduate of Ripon college. He is the first of a sextet of popular bachelors in St. Paul to become a benedict.

Minnesota Banks Would Drop Federal Charters

Inquiry at the Minnesota state department of banks has developed the fact that a large number of banks in Minnesota have been quietly ascertaining the procedure necessary for them to follow in surrendering their national charters and taking state charters in their place. It is understood from banking officials that because of the new currency act now pending in congress national banks, particularly in the smaller towns, have decided to abandon their federal incorporations and become state institutions. Kelsey F. Chase, state superintendent of banks, says that he has received numerous inquiries from national bank officials and in his opinion the reason for this attitude is the new currency act. Mr. Chase, however, has no official information on the subject. It is said that the smaller national banks object to the proposed law because it compels them to invest an amount equal to one-fifth of their capital in the stock of the National Reserve Association, without giving them any voice in the conduct of the business of the association.

Will Reassess Money and Credits

Dissatisfied with the moneys and credits assessments returned by the taxing officials of 290 districts in sixty-one counties of the state, the state tax commission has ordered reassessments of this item. Special assessors will be appointed by the commission to prepare a new valuation, and a large increase in the $151,000,000 total for the state is expected to result from this action.

Last year reassessments of moneys and credits were made in seven taxing districts in four counties, while in 1911, immediately after the law making the levy on this class of property three mills went into effect, 297 districts in forty-nine counties were reassessed. Because of the immense amount of work involved in assessing real estate, it was thought best to make no sweeping moneys and credits revaluations last year, but the commission said at that time that unless marked improvement was shown this year, many reassessments would be ordered.

John Sharp, president of the bank, is under indictment now on a charge of falsifying the statements of the bank and his trial will come up in December. The bank had $230,000 in deposits when it was closed May 1, 1912. So far 40 per cent has been paid to depositors and another dividend of 20 per cent is about ready to be paid. The stockholders will be called upon, it is thought, to contribute approximately $90,000.

J. W. Wheeler in Crookston

J. W. Wheeler, president of the Capital Trust, St. Paul, spent a few days last week at Crookston. While there he said:

"I have never seen the people of Crookston or the farmers so optimistic. Everyone feels confident. While people always had firm faith in the Red River Valley, now they are enthusiastic. The farmer who owns a farm knows that he has something worth while. He pins his faith to it and will make his farm the best farm in the vicinity if he can. That spirit is splendid. In Crookston I have failed to see a 'house for rent' sign since I have been here. Because of the rain I have been unable to get out into the country, but everyone reports conditions fine. The corn is splendid—getting better every year."

Buy Thief River Falls Bank

A. A. Miller and J. P. Foote, who control the Scandia-American Bank of Crookston, have, together with Geo. G. Johnson of the First State, Thief River Falls, secured a controlling interest in the Thief River Falls institution, having purchased the stock previously held by A. M. Arpin, the former president, and F. E. Wyland and Geo. A. Johnson of Grygla, as well as an option of the stock held by W. J. Brown, the latter retaining a block of stock and remaining vice-president of the bank. J. P. Foote succeeds A. M. Arpin as president of the First State, Thief River Falls, but the active management will be in the hands of Cashier George G. Johnson, formerly of Warren, but recently cashier of the First State.

North Dakota Banks

The comparative statement of the North Dakota state banks and trust companies at the close of business June 4 and August 9, 1913, has been published and shows a large increase in deposits over a year ago. In making a comparison of the call for August 9th of this year with the call for September 4th of last year, the examiner finds the total deposits have increased $7,480,000, of which about $5,000,000 represents increase of time deposits. The surplus and undivided profits account shows an increase of $530,000; the capital stock shows an increase of $382,000, while the bills payable and rediscounts show a decrease of $1,271,000. The total deposits of all banks reporting (608 state banks and three trust companies) aggregate a little over $49,000,000. Total loans and discounts reported show an aggregate of $44,594,000, with overdrafts of $248,000.

North Dakota Bankers May Appeal to Courts

"Bankers do not like to go into the courts for various reasons, but we will probably have, in order to secure an equitable assessment of bank stock in North Dakota," W. C. Macfadden, secretary of the North Dakota Bankers Association has announced. The bankers allege a discrimination against them in matters of assessments and contend they have been unable, either through the county or the state boards of equalization to secure redress, and the courts appear to be the only place open.

MONTANA BANKS IN PROSPEROUS CONDITION

Butte, Mont., September 15.—The resources of the 162 state banks and trust companies and 24 private banks in the state have increased more than $600,000 in a little over two months. This is shown in the call given out by State Bank Examiner H. S. Magraw. Much of this increase is due to the organization of 10 new banks, which were incorporated during June, July and August, having a total capitalization of $205,000.

The total resources of all the banks which come under the control of the state amounted to $56,828,892, as against $56,208,874 on June 4th. State banks and trust companies had total resources of $47,445,327, according to the August call, while the available cash of private banks was $9,383,567.

Loans and discounts crept up from $29,714,696 in June to $30,686,496 this month, an increase of $1,082,676. Checking deposits at the date of the last call amounted to $20,000,540, while in June they were $29,485,815, a decrease of $485,275.

Savings deposits over the state made a substantial increase during the two months, showing a gain of $529,959. The report this month shows that the savings in Montana banks amounted to $12,871,704, as against $12,840,745 in June.

COTTON CROP OF TEXAS SHORT

The Texas cotton crop this season will not be much more than 3,000,000 bales, according to officials of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union. They declare the crop will be at least 2,000,000 bales shorter than it was last year. The 1912-13 yield was 4,862,000 bales, nearly a half million bales more than the output for the previous year. In most sections of the state the yield will run a bale to four to eight acres, the officials of the union say. They base their estimates on letters from all sections of the state and from communications from the country organizations. In but few instances will the yield be as high as a half bale to the acre.

The total output of the United States in 1912-13 was 14,167,000 bales, which was about 2,000,000 bales less than that of the previous year. It has been estimated that the crop this year will be 12,000,000 bales. Much of the crop in south Texas counties has been picked. Some farmers have sold at current prices. Farmers' Union officials say they will be able to get fifteen cents by holding awhile.

"BLUE SKY" LAW HELD CONSTITUTIONAL

St. Paul, Minn., September 15.—In a formal opinion to Insurance Commissioner J. A. O. Preus on the constitutionality of the "Blue Sky" law regulating the issuance and sale of stock by insurance companies, Attorney-General Lyndon A. Smith holds that the new law is not a violation of the constitutional provision prohibiting special legislation. The only question at issue, after the attorney-general had given it as his opinion that the legislature could delegate to the insurance commissioner the responsibility of deciding which companies were legitimate and should be permitted to sell stock related to the right of the legislature to segregate insurance companies from other corporations for state regulation. It is held that the classification in this instance is proper.

The opinion, which was written by C. Louis Weeks, says on this point: "While the reasons for the classification adopted in this case are not so obvious or convincing as are those existing in some of the instances which have been passed on by our supreme court, we are of the opinion that natural and reasonable bases for distinction exist and that the classification adopted is valid."

The Century Savings, Des Moines, which recently concluded a ten-year lease on its present quarters in the Clapp block, is going to have a more elaborate entrance and will be otherwise improved. Eventually the structure will be made a ten-story affair, but that will not be done for some years.

Des Moines, September 18.—Iowa will be well represented at the convention of the American Bankers Association. Percy W. Hall, secretary of the I. B. A., is receiving letters from financiers who are going East. While most of them will take the special train from Chicago to Boston, others are making different plans. It is probable that many will make up their minds to go later on. Iowans who will attend so far as Mr. Hall knows are as follows:

Chas. Shade, First National, Rock Rapids; D. E. Goodell and wife, Commercial Savings, Tama; C. J. Wohlenberg, wife and two daughters, Holstein Savings; Ed Kaufmann, German Savings, Davenport; F. B. Check Artists Captured

Mr. and Mrs. William Powers of Superior, Wis., were arrested in Des Moines last week after making an asinine attempt to pass forged checks up and down busy Walnut Street and get away with it. They were going from store to store springing bogus checks for $36.50 when they were caught. The couple when taken to police headquarters admitted that they had worked in at least eight other cities. Their scheme was to deposit a small amount in a bank in a selected city. They would thus secure a bank book and a check book. A number of checks would be floated before it would be discovered that they were no good and the couple would go on to greener pasture. In Des Moines the merchants were quicker to find out that the checks were bogus, hence their capture. Powers had six checks in his pocket which he had not had time to work off in Des Moines. The towns in which the pair worked, the banks in which they made deposits and the number of checks floated in each were given out by the police as follows: Sioux City, First National, $50 deposited, thirteen checks floated; Omaha, First National, $25 deposited, twenty-two checks floated; Indianapolis, Merchants National, $25 deposited, eleven checks floated; Dayton, City National, $25 deposited, nineteen checks floated; Cincinnati, Central Trust and Savings Deposit, $25 deposited, eleven checks floated; La Crosse, Wis., $25 deposited, seven checks gone; Dubuque, First National, $25 deposited, eleven checks gone; Des Moines, Central State, $25 deposited, eight checks gone from check book. Mrs. Powers appears to be a refined and educated young woman. Her father is president of an ice company at Superior and it is said she ran away to marry Powers who was a railroad brakeman.

Leavitt Estate Being Partitioned

The estate of the late John H. Leavitt of the Leavitt & Johnson National of Waterloo is being partitioned. First installments of the legacy to which five children are entitled will amount to $34,558.46 apiece. One-third of the estate was willed to the widow, one-third to the children and one-third to the issue of the children. The appraisement of the estate shows that on July 12th the estate was worth $345,584.64, of which $58,760 was in real estate and $183,360.04 in corporate stock.

Tax Case Carried to Supreme Court

The famous Council Bluffs bank case will not be up for adjudication at the hands of the Iowa supreme court before January. This is the case in which the Commercial National of Council Bluffs is trying to recover taxes paid in 1907, 1908, 1909 and 1910. The bank won in the lower court when the law was declared void, but this did not occur until after the bank had paid its taxes. Attorney-General Cosson contends that the bank cannot recover the taxes because it voluntarily offered its stock for assessment and did not pay the taxes under protest. The abstract of the record reached the attorney-general last week and he asserts he is going to fight it through the higher court.

"Blue Sky" Law Attacked

Iowa's "Blue Sky" law is being assailed in five different places. Three suits were filed last week and two had been started earlier in the season. The latest attacks are made by firms at Chicago, Indianapolis and St. Louis. They allege that the law is unconstitutional mainly because it clothes the secretary of state with judicial power not granted to him by the constitution. They also aver that the legislature ordered certain clauses stricken from the bill but that the clerks in enrolling the measure permitted the clauses to remain and in this form the act was signed and became a law. The three latest cases were filed in the federal court but the two preceding cases were filed in the district court at Des Moines.

Bank Crook Applies for Job as Detective

Detective Gust Patek of the Burns Agency in Iowa seems to be the victim of a quasi-joke. Not long ago W. W. Bowman, secretary of the Kansas Bankers Association, wrote to Secretary Hall of the I. B. A. warning against a man named J. A. Anderson, who defrauded a bank at Topeka out of $380 on a bogus check drawn on a Pueblo, Colo., bank. Later Mr. Bowman sent a photo of the man wanted. When Detective Patek saw the photo he recognized the fellow as the same man who came up to his office and asked him for a job as detective on the 6th of August. It seems that when he didn't get the job Anderson floated a few bogus checks in Des Moines, then went on to Kansas.

Encouraging Outlook for Iowa

Conditions in Iowa are not bad if one is to judge by the report of the Des Moines Clearing House Association for the month of August. The total shows total deposits for August of $32,830,479.26 as against $32,198,400.48 for the preceding month of July. Cash was shown to be $10,452,713 as against $10,218,962 for July. The dull season has now passed and business is already showing marked improvement. The heat and drouth of early September had a depressing effect upon business and rains, when they did come, arrived too late to be of benefit to the corn. However, pastures, potatoes, water for stock watering purposes, etc., were greatly aided and ground has been put in excellent condition for fall plowing. Des Moines bankers are looking forward to a good season.

Candidate for State Auditor

Bailey Ellis, formerly head clerk in the office of the state banking department and now one of the examiners, is in the race for state auditor to succeed Auditor John L. Bleakly. Mr. Bleakly is now on his third term and will not run again. It is rumored that Gov. Clarke has him in view for state insurance commissioner when the new insurance department becomes a separate and distinct department away from the office of the auditor. Opposing Mr. Ellis for auditor before the primaries is Joseph Byrnes, head deputy for Auditor Bleakly. Both are republicans. Neither the democrats nor the bull moosers have indicated as yet whom they will have in the race for this office.

Bank Robber Tries to Escape

James Gleason, sent to Fort Madison for the robbery of the Cylinder Savings at Cylinder some months ago through the efforts of I. B. A. officers, made two unsuccessful attempts to escape from the penitentiary and all but succeeded. Gleason and another convict secured a saw, made their way into a long air duct by sawing off the bars leading into it and covering the cut with tar. They hid in the duct thirty-six hours, then made a break for freedom after darkness had fallen. However, the warden was suspicious that the men were within the prison walls and had guards watching. Gleason was caught but his partner escaped. Gleason tried it again the next day but was caught again. He will get five years extra now for attempting to get away. Harvey Lee, sent up for attempting to rob the Alburnett Savings some months ago, was more fortunate. He escaped and is still at large. He is a bad one and will soon be in trouble again.

Bogus Check Swindler Caught

H. W. Hundredmark, who has worked in Belle Plaine, Casey, Sioux City, Albia and other Iowa points, using worthless checks, walked into the clutches of the law in Des Moines last week. A bright young woman stenographer led to the arrest of Hundredmark. She grew suspicious that a man who was trying to pass a check on a store was the man wanted for passing worthless checks at other points in Iowa. So she tipped off his presence to Secretary Hall. The latter, calling Detective Patek to his aid, flipped over into East Des Moines and grabbed their man, Hundredmark promised to make good some of the amounts which he has secured over the state and is being given the chance to do that or go to the calaboose. It is probable that the grand jury will get busy on his case. It seems that he has been living in East Des Moines and working as a marble solicitor for some time.

Blackmailers Plead Guilty

William McArtor and H. C. McArtor pleaded guilty to blackmail of James Rosekrans at Spencer, Iowa, last week and were sent up for five years each by Judge Coyle. Two others of the alleged gang are still awaiting trial. This quartette was discovered by Banker J. H. McCord of Spencer, who grew suspicious when he found that Rosekrans was drawing out large sums of money from the bank. He began to question him and found that the victim was being systematically blackmailed out of hundreds of dollars. The banker got busy and the arrest of the men followed.

Iowa Notes

Out-of-the-city bankers seen in Des Moines within recent days included President L. O. Shaffer, Citizens Bank, Altoona; Cashier J. E. Mullans, First National, Valley Junction; Cashier T. W. Rawson, Farmers Savings, Slater; President John W. Foster, First National, Guthrie Center.

Arthur Reynolds of the Des Moines National and Grant McPherrin, cashier of the Central State, were Chicago business visitors last week.

In sending out announcements and information of the purposed trip to Boston Secretary Hall is enclosing a card entitled "Alfalfa on Every Farm." The card tells the importance of alfalfa growing and of the benefit that would accrue to Iowa if this state were entered in the column of alfalfa producing states.

The Des Moines National, according to reports, is going to increase its capital stock from $750,000 to $1,000,000 within a few months probably before the first of the year. The institution increased its capitalization from $500,000 to $750,000 a few months ago, but this isn't enough. If the contemplated action is taken, Des Moines will have two million dollar banks. The Iowa National is the other.

J. C. Whisenand, vice-president of the Central State of Des Moines, was a business visitor at Chariton recently.

Leo Stevens, president of the Century Savings, transacted business at Omaha a few days ago.

Augustus W. Dammrow, father of Cashier Dammrow of the Treynor Savings, died last week at Treynor. He was a pioneer resident of Iowa. Death was due to pneumonia. The deceased was seventy-six years of age.

The Union Savings at Davenport has increased its capital stock from $150,000 to $200,000. It is a rapidly growing institution.

The Centerville Savings has changed its name to the Centerville Trust and Savings.

T. E. Murphy is organizing a new bank at Morse.

H. W. McEwen has been made cashier of the Farmers State at Lane. M. R. Haskell is assistant cashier.

W. R. Tapper has been chosen president of the Citizens State at Oacoma. W. L. Montgomery has been made vice-president.

The Wessington Springs State has elected H. P. Will vice-president and M. M. McDonald assistant cashier.

The Stockmans State is the name of the bank at Capa, which succeeds the one which recently suspended. The bank is incorporated by J. E. Thorne, A. J. Bloom, A. J. Bunker, N. W. Edwards, Erick Kleven and M. C. Sherwood, most of whom were interested in the old bank. It is capitalized for $10,000.

O. H. Christian, formerly with the First State at Stratford, has gone to the First National at Aberdeen.

RINGDAL ORGANIZES BANK

That Peter M. Ringdal, former chairman of the State Board of Control of Minnesota and democratic nominee for governor at the last election, does not intend to accept a federal position under the Wilson administration or has not been offered one is indicated by the fact that he recently organized at Crookston, his home town, the Polk County State Bank, which was granted a charter by Kelsey S. Chase, state superintendent of banks. The bank has a capital of $40,000 and a surplus of $10,000. Mr. Ringdal is president and G. O. Hage cashier.

Mr. Ringdal was in St. Paul until early in June, when he returned to his old home.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

That a new era in agricultural methods, in which the one-crop system will be supplanted by diversified farming and stock raising, is close at hand in the Spokane country is the belief of persons in close touch with the situation.

C. L. Shuff, who is associated with a group of Spokane capitalists, including Jay P. Graves, W. C. Ufford, J. C. Barline, C. M. Graves, J. W. Cook and A. J. White, in the development of a 6,000-acre live stock development project twenty miles north of this city, declares that in a few years the territory tributary to Spokane, instead of shipping in $30,000,000 worth of dairy products, hogs and poultry each year, will be exporting these products.

"The ceaseless warfare waged by commercial organizations, by bankers and by business men generally against the single crop system has begun to show decidedly good results," states Mr. Shuff. "When the transformation of farming has been completed, we will have a greatly improved investment field, our land will be more valuable and its per acre profit will be immensely more.

"This improved situation is already in the making. I know many men who have made their fortunes in the Spokane country who are preparing for the future by making more investments, and by being in the front of the greater-profit movement which is coming with diversified farming."

The part Mr. Shuff and his associates are taking in this movement is evidenced by their big development project twenty miles north of Spokane, where on a large scale they have made preparations to insure the success of men who will cultivate the land and start a dairy, a pen of pigs or a poultry yard. Settlers are given ten years in which to complete payments. The company, which is organized under the name of the Milan Farms Development Company, clears the land, plows and fences it and puts water on it for irrigating.

R. R. Rogers of Spokane, western manager for the Vermont Loan and Trust Company, announces this week that his company has taken over the business of the Realty Mortgage Company of Spokane, absorbing its capital of $50,000. The Realty Mortgage Company was organized and financed about a year ago by John W. Smead of Greenfield, Mass., and F. J. Holman and R. R. Rogers of Spokane, to transact a mortgage loan business, principally in Montana, with an eastern sales office in Greenfield, Mass. All of the above men were interested in the Vermont Loan and Trust Company, Mr. Rogers being its western managers and Mr. Holman a director. The western end of the Vermont Loan and Trust Company will remain under the management of Mr. Rogers, and Mr. Smead will maintain an office in Greenfield, subsidiary to its eastern office in Brattleboro, with the title of vice-president. The Vermont Loan and Trust Company was organized in 1886 and confined its business to North Dakota and Minnesota until 1890, when it opened an office in Spokane and commenced to loan money on first mortgages in the Inland Empire. Since that time more than ten million dollars of New England money has been loaned by this company to farmers of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

ber, and declare western bankers will have no need of large loans of eastern capital, according to J. P. M. Richards, president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, on returning from an extended business trip to eastern financial centers. Mr. Richards speaks optimistically on general business conditions. "I visited the offices of the Morgan people," said Mr. Richards, "and while they offered our company $500,000, they assured me that there would be no need of it and that financial conditions would be better by October. They pointed to the fact that the European situation is settling rapidly and that money is bound to be easier soon. The Chemical Bank and Trust Company officials take the same stand, and while they are willing to send $2,000,000 into our territory if necessary, they say there will be no urgent need of it." Mr. Richards represented the Spokane Clearing House Association at a conference of bankers in Chicago on currency legislation.

Work is to begin immediately on the union station to be built in Spokane for the O. W. R. & N. Company and the Chicago, Milwaukee and Puget Sound Railway, the contract having been let to Grant Smith & Co., on a bid of $650,000. The station is to be completed in nine months. The depot will be on Trent Avenue between Stevens Street and Washington Street and will include almost the entire block. It will be 300 feet long and will have a width of 58 feet. It will rise four stories above the street and the first story will be of granite with granite base, and the main body will be constructed of faced brick.

Spokane county is one of the few Pacific northwestern counties to employ an agricultural expert, the commissioners this week having selected Prof. J. R. Shinn for that work. He will take charge November 1st and will receive $2,000 a year. Professor Shinn was raised on a farm and spent four years at the University of Illinois and four years in the experiment station of that state. He also studied at the University of Idaho and is familiar with conditions and needs in Spokane county.

Forrest I. Gill of Republic, Wash., has been appointed deputy state bank examiner for eastern Washington by Governor Lister. Mr. Gill was born in Maywood, Mo., July 24, 1881, and has been a resident of Washington for thirteen years, the first two of which were spent as a student at Washington State College. After leaving the college he was bookkeeper in the First National Bank at Pullman for three years and then removed to Tekoa, where he was cashier of the Citizens State for seven years. For the last year he has been identified with mining interests in Republic.

Thirty bank clerks in the Spokane Chapter of the American Institute of Banking resumed their special study course in banking law this week under direction of Roy C. Redfield, who had the class last year. The course was not completed at the end of June and it will be continued for two or three months this fall. When the course is completed the clerks who have taken the complete course will take the regular chapter examinations, and upon passing will be awarded the regular institute certificates. Twelve of the number will be ready for the examination this fall. The course is a two years' one, the first year being devoted to banking and finance and the last to commercial law. The chapter will start a course in bookkeeping and accounting this fall. The chapter will expend $300 or $375 in installing a library in its rooms in the Exchange Bank building.

G. W. Peddycord has resigned as vice-president of the Spokane State. At a meeting of the board of directors the office was filled by the election of J. M. Dungan of Spokane, who has been a director in the bank. The new vice-president is owner of a bank at Creston, Wash.

George C. Gage, note teller at the Exchange National and president of the Spokane Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, will leave September 11th for Richmond, Va., to attend the annual convention of the A. I. B. in that city.

EDMONTON NEWS

Dr. W. C. Dunn, secretary-treasurer of the Wabamun Power and Coal Company, which has extensive coal holdings at Lake Wabamun, forty miles west of Edmonton, announces that he and his associates contemplate the erection of a five-story building of reinforced concrete to accommodate a number of small industrial concerns which are looking upon Edmonton as a favorable location for manufacturing and distributing their products. The structure will be modern in every respect and will be located with a view of affording economical transportation facilities. Electrical power will be used to drive the machinery and the lighting, heating and ventilation features will be the latest improved methods.

Announcement was made in Edmonton on August 25th by Albert O. Horton of the Siems-Carey Construction Company that the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway will be opened for passenger traffic to the Pacific coast on November 1, 1914. The company is now assembling additional workmen and material between Mile 142, B. C., and Prince Rupert, where a record year's work will have been accomplished by the end of the season. Station men, he said, will work all winter in the rock cuts and with the break of spring everything should be in readiness for the final dash, when the ends of steel will be brought together with the driving of the goldenspike. Mr. Horton said that the work along the line is progressing rapidly and that more has been accomplished in the last two months than in any three months previously.

Five hundred miles of new line on the Canadian Northern Railway will be completed in the province of Alberta this year, according to advices received in Edmonton on August 25th. Steel has been extended to the Athabasca river, 191 miles west of Edmonton, and it is expected that the summit of the Canadian Rockies, 260 miles west of here, will be reached early in November. Construction work is being carried on to the Albreda summit, seventy miles beyond the summit in the Yellowhead Pass and 330 miles from Edmonton. This should be completed early next season. Steel has been laid for 100 miles north from the Canadian Pacific Railway at Kamloops, B. C., and it is expected that the gap of 235 miles between the ends of steel will be closed next summer. On the Peace river branch steel has been laid for thirty miles between Onoway and San Guido, thirty miles, and sixty-eight miles from Edmonton, and it is announced that construction work on a bridge of four hundred feet, sixty-five feet above mean water level on the Pembina river, will be started this fall; with the trestle approaches the bridge will be 2,400 feet in length. Another span is across the Paddle river, which requires a bridge and approach trestles of 2,800 feet. The bridge will be ninety-five feet above the mean water level. Other trestle work is in the Athabasca valley at Whitecourt.

Sixty miles of grade will be completed this fall on the line between Camrose and the Battle river. The branch between Camrose and Edmonton South will be in operation this fall. Steel is laid for 135 miles from Warden Junction and twenty miles west of the Saskatchewan river at Rocky Mountain House. Forty miles of steel will be laid to reach the Collieries. It is expected that steel on the Vegreville-Calgary line will reach the Brazeau coal fields before the close of the season. This line is ballasted to within forty miles of Calgary, and the Kindersley branch from Saskatoon is ballasted to its junction with the Calgary line at Munson.

The line from Edmonton to Tollerton, 135 miles, will be turned over to the operating department before the end of the year. Tollerton is on the bank of the Macleod river, three and a half miles south of Edson. It is the first divisional point west of Edmonton. The second divisional point will be at the foot of Yellowhead lake, five miles beyond the summit of the Yellowhead Pass in the Rockies and 265 miles from Edmonton. A station will be located at Jasper, fourteen miles east of the summit, which is a divisional point for the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Representatives of farm publications with combined circulation of 2,000,000 visited Edmonton August 23d to 25th on a tour to gather information regarding western Canada. The tour was arranged by Herbert Vanderloof, editor of the Canada Monthly. The party included P. V. Collins, publisher of the Northwestern Agriculturist, Minneapolis; Fred Cook, associate editor of Opportunity Magazine, Chicago; Clayton M. Jones, Jameson, N. Y.; Frederick L. Chapman, Raymond O. Penney, editor of Farm Life and Agricultural Epitomist, Spencer, Ind.; William Folk, editor of the Farm Journal, Philadelphia, and Hugh J. Hughes of Farm, Stock and Home, Minneapolis. While in Edmonton the visitors were guests of the board of trade. Speaking for the party Mr. Jones said they had not seen a poor field of any variety of grain in western Canada. "On all sides," he added, "could be seen vast fields of grain, turning golden in color and almost ready for the reaper. Western Canada is a revelation."

Mr. Justice Beck, sitting in the supreme court of Alberta in Edmonton, ruled in a lengthy opinion, in the case of the Canadian Northwestern Railway Company against the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, handed down on August 24th, that a railway company holding a dominion charter takes precedence over a company incorporated by a provincial legislature. The plaintiff sought an injunction to prohibit the defendant from constructing its Camrose-Alsack branch line over the Canadian Northwestern Company's land. The defense showed that it is building the line under authority from the dominion government, while the petitioners obtained its power from the Alberta legislature at the 1912 session. The court held that a dominion chartered railway has the right to expropriate the land of a provincial company.

GOVERNMENT CROP REPORT ISSUED

Enormous losses inflicted on the corn crop through the intense heat and the unparalleled drought of the last summer are officially shown in the government's crop estimates for September. The figures are a remarkably exact verification of the popularly accepted trade advices.

The government report of August showed a loss as compared with the crop of 1912 of 453,000,000 bushels, but this loss was swelled by 321,000,000 bushels by the last report, thus making the shortage as compared with last year 774,000,000 bushels. Adding a loss of 10,000,000 tons of hay and the known shortage in pasturage, meadows and fall forage in general, and the appalling importance of the situation begins to be appreciated.

Nevertheless, the seven so-called corn surplus states have been reduced to four this year, and even in these the northern or less droughty areas are not as a rule up to ordinary, and from this they taper off into medium to very poor crops.

Of the loss of 774,000,000 bushels in the total crop 740,000,000 bushels are in the seven surplus states which immediately surround Chicago. Oklahoma has been hard hit. Kansas approaches a total failure. Nebraska will raise about half of a normal crop, Missouri not much over one-third. Southern Iowa and southern Illinois have suffered severely. Nevertheless, the two latter states, with Indiana and Ohio, remain the only ones of the seven that can still be claimed as surplus producers.

The seven states have this year a promise of 1,092,000,000 bushels, against actual production last year of 1,832,000,000 bushels. The present promise for the entire United States, which produces three-fourths of the corn of the entire world, is 2,351,000,000 bushels, against 3,125,000,000 bushels in 1912.

The shortage in the oats crop is 353,000,000 bushels as compared with the yield of last year, the crop promise now being 1,065,000,000 bushels, against 1,418,000,000 bushels last year.

The shortage in the potato crop is 96,000,000 bushels, the indicated yield being 325,000,000 bushels, against 421,000,000 bushels for 1912.

There is a shortage in barley of 56,000,000 bushels, the indicated yield being 168,000,000 bushels, as against 224,000,000 bushels last year.

The wheat crop alone of the important food crops of the country shows a gain over the previous year, entirely due to the enormous winter wheat yield which matured before the long drought. The spring wheat crop is 87,000,000 bushels short of last year, but winter and spring combined make the greatest crop ever produced in the United States. This total of 754,000,000 bushels compares with 730,000,000 bushels last year and 748,000,000 bushels in 1901, which was the largest crop ever previously produced.

KANSAS BANKER DEAD

Porter G. Walker, vice-president of the Atchison (Kan.) Savings, and widely known in southwestern banking circles, died at Denver, according to a dispatch received at Atchison. Mr. Walker was forty-five years of age, and had been engaged in the banking business at Kerrville, Tex., and Osborne and Floxie, Kan.

BACK TO THE LAND

By Berton Braley

There are too many "dreamers and thinkers"
And not enough tillers of soil,
There are too many eaters and drinkers
Who use up the product of toil,
There are too many boosters and boomers
With manners too easy and bland,
We're cursed with too many consumers
We ought to go back to the land.

There are too many getters and takers
And not enough men who produce
There are too many broad rolling acres,
Untouched and untilled—out of use;
We stick where the grime and the grit is
And the streets with the poor are a-swarm,
We're crowded too much into cities
We ought to go back to the farm.

We've got to be workers and plowers
Who sweat in the field like true men,
We've got to make use of our powers
To make the land blossom again;
What, me? On a farm? And to STAY there?
Well, not for a bundle of pelf!
I was trying to show you the way there,
But I'll stick in the city, myself!

PAINTSVILLE (KY.) NATIONAL

Paintsville (Ky.) National, capitalized at $200,000, has surplus of $120,000, undivided profits of $23,350 and resources amounting to $1,190,000. Deposits at the time of the last call of the comptroller were more than half a million.

The officers are as follows: Dan Davis, president; I. R. Turner, vice-president; Jno. E. Buckingham, cashier, and Jas. W. Turner, assistant cashier. Mr. Buckingham was president of the Kentucky Bankers Association the past year and presided at the Louisville convention this week in fine style.

TEXAS STATE BANKS SHOW INCREASED WEALTH

The capital of Texas state bank and trust companies increased almost one million dollars from June 4th to August 9, 1913, the dates of the last two calls of the state department of insurance and banking for statements of condition. Twenty-three new banks with a capital of $498,000 were chartered, five banks increased their capital stock $80,000 and one trust company increased its capital stock $500,000. Four banks were liquidated and one bank decreased its capital stock, leaving a net increase of $933,500. There was a decrease in surplus and undivided profits of $8,327.64 and an increase in loans of $2,347,028.03, due to the approach of the cotton season. Individual deposits also decreased $7,333,276.97. There are now twenty-five banks in the state conducting saving departments, the cash reserve showing $86,810.96 over the required fifteen per cent.

BANK FOR YORKVILLE

State Auditor Brady has issued a permit to George McWhirter, Clarence W. Beecher, Frank E. Ament, Merritt N. Beecher and J. M. Austin for the organization of the Farmers State of Yorkville, at Yorkville, Ill., with a capital stock of $30,000.

A. G. Rodez of Des Moines doesn't believe in banks—at least not the regular kind. He has been keeping his small change in a combination affair in his residence at Des Moines. Recently, robbers got into the house, took the bank containing $74.60, two watches and a thirty-eight caliber revolver.

A. I. B. CONVENTION

The eleventh annual convention of the American Institute of Banking held in Richmond, Va., September 17th, 18th and 19th, drew delegates from all over the country. The convention was called to order by President Moser in the ball-room of the Jefferson, Wednesday morning. Addresses of welcome were made by Governor Mann and Mayor Ainslee, which were responded to by F. A. Crandall of Chicago, chairman of the executive council of the A. I. B. Col. Fred E. Farnsworth delivered greetings on behalf of the American Bankers Association.

After President Moser's annual address reports were heard from the executive council, secretary, treasurer and standing committees.

Thursday morning, Harry V. Haynes, vice-president of the A. I. B., presided. Senator Burton of Ohio talked on the proposed currency legislation. Next there was a symposium on bank advertising and business building under the direction of Fred W. Ellsworth, publicity manager of the Guaranty Trust Company, New York. Those delivering addresses were C. B. Hazlewood, assistant secretary Union Trust Company, Chicago; L. A. Mershon of the U. S. Mortgage and Trust Company, New York, and F. M. Polliard, assistant cashier Exchange National, Pittsburgh.

In the afternoon George H. Keesee, a member of the program committee, presided. Secretary Bryan was billed for a talk at this session. This was followed by an inter-city debate between Chicago and Pittsburgh on the following question: "Resolved, that the so-called 'Blue Sky' legislation would be for the best interests of the people of the United States," the Chicagoans taking the negative.

Friday morning the presiding officer was Robert H. Bean of Boston Chapter. There was a symposium on "Clearing Houses and the Extension of their Functions," under the direction of O. Howard Wolfe of New York Chapter, secretary of the clearing house section of the A. B. A. This was participated in by Charles A. Ruggles of Boston, J. A. Broderick of New York and Jerome Thralls of Kansas City.

In the afternoon special committee reports were heard and new officers elected.

President's Address

President Moser in his annual report called attention to the progress which the institute is making and stated that since its organization over 1,000 of its members have been promoted to official positions. Of 181 men who presented themselves for position as bank examiners for the state of New York only 50 were successful and of this number 28 were institute men.

Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House, had for his part of the program "Community Advertising." He suggested judgment in preparing bank advertisements designed to secure new business for the bank. One of the things which he proposed was that a series of booklets be gotten out by a central agency and be delivered through the mail to the home address of each individual, telling in an impressive and simple way the need of saving, how to save and what a bank really is and how it will help the savers—how a saver may anticipate his wants; accumulate his funds in advance and then purchase for cash the articles he needs at one-half the price his neighbor, who buys on the installment credit basis, is compelled to pay. He said what we need is not less advertising but better advertising. "Show me a bank that does not advertise and I will show you a dead one," said the speaker.

Mr. Thralls also discussed at the convention the subject of agricultural development and vocational education, emphasizing the necessity for improved agricultural methods and a useful education for the youth of the land. "Much has been said and done on the 'back to the farm movement,'" said the speaker, "but in my opinion it is all in vain. The only hope is to popularize farm life through making the homes modern and comfortable, reducing the burdens of the farmwife and giving the oncoming generation in the country every facility for education that is available to the boy and girl in the city. In other words, we must put the rural population on a par with the city population from every possible standpoint."

C. B. Hazlewood, assistant secretary of the Union Trust Company, is of the belief that bank advertising in the last few years has been distinctly along the lines of efficiency.

Frank M. Polliard, assistant cashier of the Exchange National of Pittsburgh, talked on bank advertising and business building. He believes that one way of building up business is for the banker to give a part of his time to the organization and maintenance of chambers of commerce, boards of trade, industrial commissions and the like.

Leroy A. Mershon, publicity manager of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, New York, talked along similar lines. "Financial periodicals," said the speaker, "are for the exchange of the latest ideas and thought and the best ones are usually read with absorbing interest by bank and trust company men. It makes them a valuable medium for advertising and they should be supported."

Joseph A. Broderick, bank examiner in charge of the credit bureau, New York State Banking Department, delivered a very instructive address on clearing house examinations and the registration of commercial paper. We regret that space restrictions preclude our printing Mr. Broderick's address in full.

Secretary Farnsworth said that many of the leading members of the A. B. A. and the state bankers' associations are institute graduates; that these men have been selected as representative bankers of proven ability and through their work the value of the knowledge they gained through institute study is successfully apparent.

Fred W. Ellsworth, publicity manager of the Guaranty Trust, New York, had charge of the symposium conducted on bank advertising and business building. He told of the necessity of proper advertising and of the many benefits which accrue to a bank as a result.

HOUSE PASSES CURRENCY BILL

childish. Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bryan—I talked with Mr. Bryan to-night—want this amendment."

Warns of "November Result"

Representative Murray of Oklahoma said that it was an insult to democrats to endorse such an amendment.

"I want to say now," he shouted, "that the people of this country will not follow you to the polls next November on this issue."

Representative Sherley poured oil on the troubled waters only to have them stirred again a moment later by Representative Murdock.

Mr. Sherley said the amendment could do no harm and might do good, and that it was time for democrats to forget what was behind and reckon with what was before.

"The republicans are playing politics with you," was the taunt of Mr. Murdock. "They propose to get a separate vote on the amendment and the bill in the house and put you democrats on record. It's a trap that they are asking you to walk into—if you want to walk into it, go ahead."

Will Demand Separate Votes

At the conclusion of Mr. Murdock's speech Representative Wingo announced he would demand the separate votes on the amendment and the bill. The democrats paid little heed to the "warning," and the vote stood 104 to 38 for the amendment.

Republicans and progressives concentrated their fight on a number of amendments offered to the note issue section of the bill, which the democrats disposed of with a rolling chorus of "noes," monotonously repeated. At one time sixteen amendments proposed from the minority side of the aisle were voted down in rapid succession.

SUE STOCKHOLDERS OF DEFUNCT BANK

Suit has been filed in the circuit court against about 200 stockholders of the Franklin Bank of Louisville, which made an assignment in 1911, to recover the remaining forty per cent due creditors under the double liability clause of the Kentucky banking law. The Louisville Trust Company, assignee of the defunct bank, is made defendant also. Plaintiffs are depositors of the Franklin Bank and they ask to be allowed to prosecute the action for the benefit of all creditors. It is alleged that assets remaining in the assignee's hands probably will pay only the remaining costs of settlement and that it will be necessary to enforce the full liability against solvent stockholders in order to pay the remaining indebtedness of the bank.

TALBERT DECLINES TO TESTIFY

Washington, September 15.—Joseph Talbert, vice-president of the National City Bank of New York, which is now under investigation by the treasury department on the charge of "bearing" two per cent bonds and of illegally lending $44,000,000 to a Chicago traction syndicate, has declined to appear before the senate committee on banking and currency.

The announcement that Mr. Talbert had declined the committee's invitation was made officially to-day by Chairman Owen when he gave out the names of those who had been requested to appear and explain their views on the pending administration currency measure. Desirous of learning the views of both proponents and opponents, the committee made a carefully selected list of twenty experts, including practical thinkers, university professors and prominent merchants. The declination of Mr. Talbert was the only one received by the committee.

KENTUCKY CONVENTION

Bankers from all parts of the state assembled in Louisville Wednesday and Thursday of this week for the twenty-first annual convention of the Kentucky Bankers Association. The Seelbach hotel at Fourth and Walnut streets was the headquarters.

The convention was called to order Wednesday morning by President John E. Buckingham, president of the Paintsville National. Mayor W. O. Head welcomed the delegates, the response being made by G. K. Holbert, director of the Union Bank and Trust Company, Elizabethtown. President Buckingham then delivered his annual address followed by reports of the secretary, treasurer and chairman of the executive committee.

In the afternoon an elaborate buffet luncheon was tendered by the Louisville Clearing House Association to the visiting bankers and their friends in the Rathskeller of the Seelbach.

Thursday morning the Hon. T. Kennedy Helm, general counsel for the Kentucky Bankers Association, gave an address on the "Blue Sky" law. Percy H. Johnston, a national bank examiner for Kentucky, talked on "A Scientific Credit System for Country Banks," and Col. Thos. J. Smith, banking commissioner for the state, had as his subject "Trying to Get Results." After committee reports adjournment was taken.

A fine line of entertainment and one which will not be forgotten soon was provided by the local bankers. In addition to the noonday luncheon of the first day, the visitors were taken to the state fair grounds as guests of the Louisville Clearing House Association, the state fair being held in Louisville this week.

Mr. Atherton Speaks

J. M. Atherton, president of the Lincoln Savings of Louisville and the principal speaker at the convention, closed the first session with an exhaustive discussion of the features of the proposed new currency bill.

President's Address

President Buckingham in his annual address called attention to the fact that the Kentucky Bankers Association now has attained its majority. While the organization has not accomplished all of the things which it set out to do, still it compares favorably in point of efficiency with the bankers' associations of other states. The Kentucky Bankers Association has succeeded in having enacted much beneficial legislation along banking lines and is constantly striving to have more passed. An adequate "Blue Sky" law just now occupies a prominent place among the things needed. It is realized that this is a subject requiring the best thought and effort, for a poorly drawn statute probably would prove to be more detrimental to the best interests of the public than would the evils which the law sought to eliminate. President Buckingham does not believe that any serious business disturbance will result from the new tariff. He is opposed to certain features of the currency bill but gives the administration credit for sincerity of purpose and a disposition to listen to advice and to make such changes as may seem to be consistent and practicable.

Secretary's Report

Secretary Arch B. Davis reported a membership of 598 banks with only 18 non-members. In point of membership Kentucky ranks third or fourth among all bankers' associations in the United States. This compares with a rank of twenty-second several years ago. The association is on a sound financial footing. There is a balance from the year's work of about $1,465. The association now has cash and securities to the amount of nearly $5,000.

which compares with a deficit of almost a thousand dollars four years ago.

Bank Commissioner Makes Address

Bank Commissioner Thos. J. Smith told of the creation of his department and the passage of a banking law in Kentucky, which he attributed in a large measure to the activities of the Kentucky Bankers Association. He took occasion to rap those people who are opposed to bank supervision, saying:

"Some carping critics have steadily opposed all legislation and progress looking to the supervision of state banks. The claim has been oft repeated that each new piece of banking legislation only encroaches upon the right of the bank to run its business to suit itself, and serves only to make a mere clerk out of a bank official, whose sole duty it is to do the bidding of the supervisory authorities.

"The state certainly owes to its citizens the duty of maintaining the strictest possible su-been enacted looking to their regulation, examination, and control.

"Prior to 1912 there were few safeguards thrown around banking institutions in this state. The frequency with which bank failures occurred led the legislature, in 1912, to pass a comprehensive act looking toward the regulation, examination and proper conduct of all state banks, and providing for the closing and winding up of the affairs of all such as were found to be in an insolvent condition. This legislation has, as its ultimate aim, the protection of the depositing public, and it is doubtful if any legislation enacted in recent years is calculated to have so beneficial an influence and effect."

Percy H. Johnston Speaks

The subject of the remarks of Percy H. Johnston, a national bank examiner, was "A Scientific Credit System for Country Banks." Mr. Johnston is of the opinion that the greatest weakness of our country banks is the lack of a credit system. He said that the credit system of a great many of these small institutions is largely in the keeping and oftentimes exclusively so, of the memory or knowledge of an executive officer, usually the cashier or the president, and when that officer dies or moves away the bank is somewhat at sea.

Mr. Johnston suggested as a plan that every country bank install a liability ledger showing the direct and indirect indebtedness of every borrower; that this book be accurately kept and that the direct liabilities as shown by the book at all times balance with the loans and discounts. He suggested that in the upper left-hand corner of the sheet a statement be given as to the assessed valuation of the realty of the borrower; a like statement as to the assessed valuation of his personal property; that there be provided a line saying "Our Valuation." Under this line there would be a line saying "Amount of Incumbrance." On the upper right-hand corner of the sheet there would be a line reading "Maximum Indebtedness" and underneath that there would be another reading "Maximum Indirect Indebtedness." He also suggested that space be provided to indicate whether the borrower was prompt or slow. It was pointed out that, while the scheme proposed would not eliminate all losses likely to be sustained as a result of injudicious loans, it would have a tendency to reduce the losses to a minimum.

NEW SALES MANAGER FOR MEILICKE CO.

Anthony Joyce, formerly a salesman in the Chicago office of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company, has been appointed sales manager for the Meilicke Calculator Company of this city, a concern organized only a few years ago and which has made rapid strides during the brief period of its existence.

Mr. Joyce for sometime handled all of the large banks in Chicago for the Burroughs Company. For the last year he has been district instructor of the Chicago district and assistant to J. F. Gillen, district manager of the Chicago district of the Burroughs Company. In this capacity it has been his duty to lecture to the sales force at stated intervals on the principles of salesmanship and demonstration. Mr. Joyce is a live wire and will prove a valuable addition to the staff of the Meilicke Company.

The Meilicke Calculator Company was reorganized May 1, 1913, and the capital stock increased from $100,000 to $500,000. The new company is incorporated under the laws of Maine with C. A. Meilicke as president; G. M. Ludlow, vice-president, and R. H. Griffin, treasurer. Mr. Griffin is vice-president of the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago.

Agencies have been established in the principal cities of the United States, including the following: Atlanta, Baltimore, Birmingham, Boston, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Denver, Detroit, Houston, Louisville, Memphis, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Seattle and Washington; also in Winnipeg, Manitoba, and Regina, Sask., Canada.

The business of the company is in a satisfactory condition and the sales are increasing rapidly.

The machine which the company manufactures consists of four devices, a time computer, holiday detector, maturity finder and interest calculator. Each one of these devices could be operated separately and would be an improvement over present methods, it is claimed, but in the machine the four devices are combined as one, and in any problem the operating of but one device brings to register answers on all the others, so that one turn of the hand pervision over banks chartered by it to the end that each institution shall rigidly keep sacred the contract made with the state when it asked for and received its charter, and that bank failures and the consequent loss to the citizens of the state, who deposit their money in the state banks, shall be reduced to a minimum.

"Our court of appeals, in a most able and exhaustive opinion, rendered by Judge Lassing, the whole court concurring, upheld the action of the department in regard to the closing of the Commercial Bank and Trust Company of Louisville, and the following extract from that opinion clearly shows that the court has stamped with its approval the new banking act:

"Banks are to the commercial world what arteries are to the human system. Through them passes the vitalizing, life-giving medium of exchange, and upon their healthy condition commercial activity and prosperity in the main depend. Banks thus become, in a sense, public institutions. Though organized and financed by private individuals and for personal gain, they nevertheless serve an almost indispensable public purpose, and upon this account, in most of the states, legislation has wheel gives four distinct answers. The machine computes interest at any rate on any amount, reckons time between any two dates, and detects whether or not the date of maturity is a Sunday, Saturday or legal holiday—all in one simple, non-tiring hand movement, thus accomplishing the work of many minutes in a few seconds—with the added advantage of absolute accuracy being assured.

The Meilicke calculator is built like a clock, but is more accurate; it never varies a tenth part of a cent and maintains its accuracy year in and year out.

In the ordinary computing machine a mental operation must be performed—the problem must be solved in a sense by the mind of the operator before the result can be obtained on the machine. The Meilicke calculator gives the exact interest to an interest problem without a thought on the part of the operator. All that is necessary to refer to the proper date from which interest is to be computed, revolve the wheel, and the results flash out quickly and with absolute accuracy.

In spite of the fact that this machine enables one man to accomplish the ordinary work of three—it does not seek or aim to displace skilled human endeavor, but to free the expert's mind from the shackling grind of picayune, unnecessary detail—thus increasing brain productiveness and mental activity. It puts accounting efficiency at a premium instead of a discount—and this, through eliminating the drudgery of brain-tiring, thankless and unproductive detail. This machine is the culmination of combined mechanical ingenuity and expert accounting knowledge.

To comprehend the economy derived by the use of the Meilicke calculator one should consider that practically all interest calculations are made with time running to or from the current date. The calculator is therefore set for the current day the first thing each morning, as follows: The hand wheel is turned until the current date on either calendar wheel is opposite the date opening; then the brake button is pressed while the cylinder is turned until the black line or blank day appears in the interest opening. The same simple operation is repeated on the other side, and the machine is then set for the day. This is accomplished in two seconds' time. The holiday detector is set only once a year.

To figure interest from past to current date, use the left-hand wheel; to figure interest from current date to future date, use the right-hand wheel. Given the number of days, turn the cylinder until that number appears in the time openings and instantly and automatically the maturity date appears on the right-hand calendar wheel; simultaneously you read the correct interest and whether or not the maturity falls on a holiday. Given the maturity date, you turn that date upon the right-hand calendar wheel and read the number of days in the time openings; again you read the correct answers in interest and whether or not the date falls on a holiday. Its operation is the very extreme of simplicity.

The calculator does not compute one item at a time, as is usual, but gives all answers as to amount of interest, time between dates, date of maturity and whether a holiday, simultaneously with a single turn of the hand wheel. It is this ability to jump from problem to answer direct without secondary calculations which commends the Meilicke calculator to progressive men as a useful item of equipment in all offices where the computation of interest enters into daily transactions. This machine calculates with equal precision and facility, no matter whether it be for thirty days, ninety days or five years and ninety-seven days. The calendars are perpetual and the holiday detectors are easily arranged to provide for any number of specifications of holidays which may be peculiar to any particular business or locality. Interest calculations in foreign money are figured as easily as in American money. As no dollar signs are used, the machine serves for marks, francs, etc., as well as for dollars.

In an everyday problem like the following: Note of \$700 dated November 11, 1911, bearing interest at $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent; required to find the accrued interest up to date, you get your answer in interest direct by one slight move of your hand. Your cue is to turn to date of note, when your answer in interest appears without even glancing at the result in days, which of course is immaterial except as a means to an end. The answer in days, however, is there if wanted. In almost every interest problem there are at least two elements—first, time, and, second, interest. By any other method than that of the Meilicke calculator the time must be computed as a separate and preliminary operation before you can begin to compute interest. The strong feature of the Meilicke calculator is that it not only reckons time, but actually eliminates the element of time. The Meilicke operator, taking a single date as his cue, gives the hand wheel a slight turn to bring up that particular day on the calendar wheel and then reads his interest without even referring to the time. This machine saves all of the time now spent by accountants in calculating time. Figuring interest on notes on which partial payments appear is computed by dealing with the date of original note and date of each payment only, and without even finding a new principal.

There are fifty-two Saturdays, fifty-two Sundays and about sixteen holidays in a year, a total of 120 days, or about one-third of the year, so that approximately one-third of the paper made out regardless of holidays will fall on holidays, and interest should be figured from one to three days beyond maturity date. It is safe to say that on this account about one-third of all loans run an average of two days for which sometimes no interest is charged. The calculator automatically finds the date of maturity and at the same time shows whether or not that day falls on a holiday, Saturday or Sunday. This in itself is a great saving of time, as it wholly relieves the accountant's mind of the holiday question and saves him the necessity of consulting a holiday calendar.

This machine was invented by C. A. Meilicke, the president of the company, who formerly was engaged in the banking business, where he realized the need of a calculating machine such as he has finally produced. All who have seen the device are enthusiastic as to its merits.

THE NEW OFFICERS

The following are the new officers of the Illinois Bankers Association for 1913-14: President, S. B. Montgomery, president State Savings Loan and Trust, Quincy; vice-president, J. S. Aisthorpe, president First Bank and Trust Company, Cairo; treasurer, C. H. Fox, assistant secretary Chicago Savings Bank and Trust.

George Woodruff, president of the First National of Joliet, is the new chairman of the executive council.

Nelson N. Lampert, vice-president of the

SECRETARY CRAMPTON NOT RE-ELECTED

Secretary R. L. Crampton was not re-elected by the executive council at the close of the Chicago convention. He was allowed to hold on, subject to the pleasure of the administrative committee, until the January meeting of the council, at which time an election will be held. The vote by which the election failed is said to have been 20 to 12. The last three ex-presidents, Phillips, Harris and Crabtree, are said to have declared their positive refusal to support present conditions. Among those mentioned for the place prominently was S. Y. Whitlock of Tuscola, but many of the members wanted time to make a careful survey of the matter before deciding.

THIRD NATIONAL ELECTS DIRECTOR

Alfred J. Siegel has been elected a director of the Third National, St. Louis, to fill the vacancy created by the death of former president Charles H. Huttig. Mr. Siegel is president of the Huttig Sash and Door Company.

WOMEN DELEGATES HERE

There were two women delegates to the convention—Miss Flora Buck, cashier of the Farmers State of Genoa, and Mrs. E. E. Brumbaugh, the only other woman holding an executive bank position in the state.

Miss Buck said:

"Women in the banking field? Why not? They are every bit as capable as a man, and their natural intuition and instinct would be a greater guard against fraud than a man could give. It will not be long before they will invade the banking business, as they have done nearly everything else."

S. B. Montgomery, the new president, declared the importation of meat will soon be a serious question.

"The bankers of the West and the Middle West have long known that a shortage in meat was sure to occur, due to the conversion of the large ranches into small farms," he said. "We will soon have to face the question of importing a large part of our meat."

INDIANA BANKERS ELECT OFFICERS

At the convention of the Indiana bankers held in Indianapolis this week the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, M. S. Sonntag, president American Trust and Savings, Evansville; vice-president, John P. Frenzel, Jr., assistant cashier of the Merchants National, Indianapolis; secretary, Andrew Smith, vice-president Indiana National, Indianapolis (re-elected); treasurer, G. R. Brockin, cashier Farmers Deposit Bank, Montpelier.

S. B. MONTGOMERY

HULBERT'S OBJECTIONS TO CURRENCY BILL

E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust, appeared before the senate banking and currency committee this week and stated his objections to the pending measure.

Summarized these are as follows:

1. It includes but one-third of the banks of the country.
2. It increases the reserves banks are forced to carry.
3. It gives commercial banking powers to the reserve banks, putting them in competition with the member banks.
4. It forces the reserve banks to transfer checks free of charge, thus depriving small banks of income to the extent of 5 per cent of their capital stock annually.
5. It requires the reserve bank to loan member banks the face value of collateral.
6. The time limit for farm loans is too short.
7. It equivocates on the retention of the old standard.

STRONG RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED

The committee on resolutions reported through Col. J. S. Aisthorpe of Cairo a very strong set of resolutions in harmony with those recently adopted by the currency commission in Chicago touching upon legislation in Washington. The report was well received and unanimously adopted.

William George of Aurora reported for a separate committee on resolutions tendering the thanks of the convention to all the speakers who participated, to the Chicago bankers and the splendid committees which looked after the entertainment, and to the management of the LaSalle hotel for courtesies extended. The resolutions closed with a glowing tribute to the retiring president, J. D. Phillips of Green Valley.

NEW BANK BUILDING FOR QUINCY

The plans for a new seven-story building for the Illinois State, Quincy, Ill., have been approved by the institution's officials and the new structure will be erected at once. The Choice of a Banker is the most vital factor to any bond investor

This is self evident, as your selection of a bond is largely made on the recommendation or the information furnished by your investment banker. To know, therefore, that his representations are reliable is of the first importance.

You should also remember in choosing your investment banker that his services should only begin when your purchase is delivered and his profit is made. His assistance should still be at your disposal if you wish to sell any bonds purchased, or if you wish to temporarily use them as collateral in borrowing money.

There are many and varied valuable services which an investment banker may render his clients during the entire life of their investments.

This institution endeavors to maintain a rounded service, complete in all its details, with a fully equipped statistical department at your disposal.

Our recommendations of securities purchased for the investment of our own funds will be gladly furnished on request. Ask for bond list No. 3019 C. B.

50th Anniversary The First National Bank of Chicago

FIFTY years ago—July 1, 1863—The First National Bank of Chicago opened its doors for business. Its progress is typical of the development of Chicago and the vast territory of which it is the commercial center. Its policy, built upon the idea of efficient personal service, has enabled it during this half century to achieve not only a marked growth but also to maintain the very highest standard of banking. From the beginning it has recognized the first principle of good banking—that the interests of its customers are identical with those of its shareholders. The success of one is essential to the success of the other. The facilities of the First National Bank of Chicago are international in scope. Foreign relations, constantly extended during the entire period of the bank's existence, enable it to handle financial business in every part of the world. Small as well as large accounts receive personal and individual attention from officers especially qualified in their specific lines, thus enabling the bank, at all times, to maintain each department at a high standard of excellence. An intimate knowledge of the demands of banks and bankers, merchants and manufacturers has been acquired by the officers of the bank, and in this knowledge is the value of their service—a service that is appreciated by financial and commercial interests from coast to coast.

On the basis of efficiency, absolute safety and personal convenience this bank invites the business of responsible people, confident of its ability to render satisfactory financial service in every conservative form.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

E. M. WING of La Crosse, one of Wisconsin's best informed bankers, has given out "The Simple Truth About the Currency Bill," which is a gem.

PART of it is in the shape of a tabulated summary cleverly designed and very convincing. Get a copy if you appreciate clear vision.

WE have it from a friend that Jos. T. Talbert did not decline to appear before the senate committee but "was absent when the letter came."

THIS good friend says he believes in "giving the devil his dues." So do we, but we don't class Mr. Talbert with the dark spirits. He's a bright and shining light in the banking world.

NO president ever laid down the gravel at a state banker's convention with a clearer conscience than did John D. Phillips at the La Salle hotel in Chicago on Friday.

HE quit with the good will and esteem of every member, having eradicated every trace of former factional feeling. That's some record in Illinois.

THE program, which he handled alone (for safety), was one of the ablest ever presented. There wasn't a dull number on it.

HIS non-banker speakers were able and attractive. His bank orators the best in the profession.

MELVIN A. TRAYLOR, the "meat expert" of the packers national convention, took off his apron over at the Sherman and showed up as a full-fledged delegate at the La Salle.

HE'S a clever talker and quite in demand. His bank is a "live stock" institution of the liveliest kind.

ONE drawing room on the Boston train will contain the two Woodruffs and W. G. Edens. Politics barred.

ANOTHER will have J. W. Wheeler, J. S. Pomeroy and J. H. Ingwersen. Hard combination to beat.

BOTH trains full to the roof with a waiting list to replace cancellations. Nothing ever worked out finer.

THE "Philadelphia Plan" of electing A. B. A. officers resembles the "Aldrich Bill" in that its manufactured support "faded away" when the real thing came along.

SAM W. REYBURN, president of the Union Trust at Little Rock, Ark., may miss the Boston convention. He has just been appointed receiver for the Little Rock Trust because of the death of its president and chief owner.

MRS. H. M. BROWN of Michigan, "the only woman secretary," will get on board the Chicago-Boston special at Toledo along with forty of her faithful subjects.

Formerly National Bank Examiner

Commercial Paper and Investments

Established 1904 60 Wall St., New York Member A. B. A.

DID you notice the warm eulogies of the Illinois secretary in the official addresses and committee reports? Neither did we.

PRESIDENT PHILLIPS' address fully reflected the man. It was able, dignified and kindly.

THOSE who came up from the Indianapolis convention to the Chicago talkfest never tired of telling of the big hit made by Mr. Reynolds on the currency.

AS a "hitter" he's Heine Zim., Ping Bodie and Hans Wagner rolled into one.

ASCHER COX doesn't wield the big club, but he gets there with the pussy foot just the same.

ONE of the association heavyweights says he's "as good as John L. in his palmyest days." (He means Hamilton, not Sullivan.)

IT was early on Wednesday when W. G. Edens donned his reception committee badge at the LaSalle. He was fresh(?) from the Indianapolis sleeper.

WITH him was W. T. Fenton, who paid the Reynolds address to the Indiana bankers the highest of compliments.

ANDREW RUSSEL was one of the commanding figures in the LaSalle lobby. He's one of the conservatives.

WD. STEWARD of Plano didn't feel at ease until he'd signed up for the Boston special. Same goes for P. D. Castle and Chas. S. Kidder.

THE gentlemen received each a leather jewel case and the ladies a solid silver coin purse of the "vanity" style. Big hits were scored in both cases. Henry S. Henschen did the selecting and is to be congratulated.

CHAIRMAN of the Board (banquet) Jas. M. Hurst ought to have a gold medal also.

The group dinner and all the stunts are his individual output. He was the committee.

WT. PERKINS, in charge of reservations, would have been happier if the refrigeration congress had thawed out and departed a little more promptly.

AS it was, some of the out-of-towners had to wait for rooms. The LaSalle is the busiest hotel in the city, anyway. There's a reason of course.

WM. G. SCHROEDER bore his new councilmanic honors modestly.

BREVET PRESIDENT MONTGOMERY and Brevet Vice-President Aisthorpe tried to look unconcerned, and succeeded, too. Strong men in the chairs this year.

GEORGE WOODRUFF will be a great chairman of council. You can depend on no backward step being taken for the next three years.

SOON it will be Chicago's time again. Schroeder would be a fine follow-up for Woodruff in 1914. He's tall timber all right.

FINE bouquets, those, which President Phillips threw to Chairmen Harris and Bradt, and they were earned by services well performed.

"UNCLE" HERDIEN of Galva was on the ground early and didn't miss a thing. He's one of the highly respected veterans of the association.

THE ladies at the LaSalle enjoyed "lining up" for their pictures in the Chicago dailies. Lots of "marked copies" went off to the folks back home.

WM. C. WHITE and Wm. E. Stone of Peoria arrived at daylight on Wednesday and waited around for metropolitan breakfast time to arrive.

W. G. EDENS had a room at the LaSalle. 'Fraid to go home lest something might get by.

THE new member of the A. B. A. council, elected by the A. B. A. members at the La Salle, is Nelson U. Lampert of the Fort Dearborn National. It was unanimous.

MR. LAMPERT had a piece of a term recently and liked it. The fellows who elect liked him, too, and thus it was a love match.

W. G. EDENS was put on the nominating committee at Boston, which showed plainly that Illinois wanted to do all it might for Joseph Chapman.

NOT a man present but felt that if he were running for the vice-presidency of the A. B. A., at the Hub-meet, he would want Comrade Edens for left-end tackle or any other tough place on the team.

EDENS was Illinois' best indorsement of the Minneapolis man. Illinois "ain't mad at nobody."

FROM down state, Wm. C. White was made A. B. A. vice-president to succeed H. E. Otte, whose administration was the real goods on every occasion.

SECRETARY S. B. RANKIN and the president of his association in Ohio, R. D. Sneath, were present at all sessions of the convention.

IN the twenty-three years Mr. Rankin has kept the records and the secrets of the Ohio association he never acquired the habit of going to neighbor state conventions.

BUT he likes it and next year he will buy a wardrobe trunk and start out lovely. He's a modest fellow and when he saw President Phillips' eagle eye upon him fled down the nineteen-story elevator.

GEORGE D. BARTLETT was there with a head chock full of Wisconsin progressive notions. He was busy looking for pointers.

HE has a Chicago-Boston train of his own scheduled to do the spiral both going and coming. Goes via Washington and returns by way of Montreal.

SOME of the out-of-towners were Franklin Johnson, R. L. Rinaman and A. O. Wilson, all of St. Louis.

J. W. WHEELER, head of the Capital Trust, was down from St. Paul.

FROM Iowa there were E. L. Johnson and J. H. Ingwersen.

S. T. FISHER and wife came over from Princeton, Ind.

MISS FLORA BUCK, cashier of the Farmers State at Genoa, was the envy of all the ladies. The photographers snapped her about every hour.

R. S. HAWES, "Buck" Taylor and George Hitchcock, all of "St. Louie," played golf a part of the time.

WE heard that they "settled" with John Jay Abbott when the game was over.

FROM New York there were DeVausney of the Seaboard; Roach of the American Exchange; Purdy of the Chase; Risley of the Commerce, and Snelson Chesney (imported) of the Liberty National.

THE new members of the council, elected, are V. A. Wigren, Galva; C. H. Ireland, Washburn; S. E. Bradt, De Kalb; Wm. G. Schroeder, Chicago; L. E. Rockwood, Gibson City; Geo. W. Telling, Danville; J. C. Reese, Pana; J. W. Miller, West Point; A. R. Cox, Xenia, and S. E. Crebs, Carmi.

THE new members ex officio as group chairmen, are H. C. Roberts, Princeton; H. N. Antrim, Freeport; C. B. Wright, Crystal Lake; Stuart Duncan, La Salle; G. R. Nelm, Tuscola; T. F. Chamberlain, Brighton; E. N. Kinney, Beardstown; G. B. Noiles, Greenville, and Willard Wall, Murphysboro.

J. W. HELINSKI of the North West State said he never could understand why words of three syllables should be so violently accented on the first, as is the custom of some of his friends.

NEITHER could L. Drwyenski of the Peoples Stock Yards State.

M. A. TRAYLOR of the National Stock Yards National would be a "find" for any big bank wanting to do more business in Texas and the Southwest.

HE'S a keen business getter, a good public speaker and has the goods. Put him down as a best bet along these lines.

THE whole Cathcart family was up from Sidell, which cut down the population considerably.

MORE from St. Louis. They were J. A. Berninghaus of the Central, F. W. Sowle of the Mechanics-American, and E. C. Stuart of the Third National.

JOHN W. LITTLE, secretary of state to the new president, S. B. Montgomery, was on duty all the time.

OH, yes, he made a FEW trips to the registration desk.

WERE GLAD TO SEE YOU AT THE CONVENTION
COME AGAIN!

THE LIVE STOCK EXCHANGE NATIONAL BANK

missed a convention in thirty years. No, he doesn't look that old to us either.

THERE was Ker of du Rocher, Prairie du Rocher in full.

AND Auten, Jr., represented the Auten and Auten bank. Why not?

NOTE that the Petefish bank was represented by Yapple-Matt. Figure it out for yourself.

WEMPLE of Waverly isn't a bad line either.

ZION CITY bank sent Bull and "Hurd" Clendinen. Catch it?

WE were told that R. Oehm had a hard time giving his name over the phone. The operator always said "R. M. what?" Try it.

PAGUR, Parke and Pinger was one firm on the register.

PRESIDENT D. D. HEINSHEIMER of the Iowa association was an honor-guest.

E. E. CRABTREE was busy. He brought his two lively, pretty nieces, the Misses Mary and Alice Wadsworth.

M. F. DUNLAP and Andrew Russel signed up for their two banks and helped look after Senator L. Y. Sherman, who scored a big hit.

THERE were some delegates rooting for Richmond, Va., as the place of holding the next A. B. A. convention.

R. S. HAWES, of St. Louis, is the Grand Snickersnee of the Reserve City Bankers Association, a sort of "Hoos Hoo in Banking" crowd.

HE and his brother officers were at the LaSalle during the week and fixed up a big stunt for Boston.

IT is to be an evening shore dinner at the famous Georgian café, famed around the world for its fish concoctions.

NONE but real members can attend. It will be the pitchfork for pretenders.

MONDAY evening, October 6th, at 6 P. M., is the date. All will be over in time to attend the Council Club festivities or to keep theatre engagements.

MEETING with President Hawes was Grand Secretary and Keeper of the Big Seal Edward Seiter of Cincinnati.

ALSO Grand Treasurer J. P. McKelvey of Pittsburgh. He was aided and abetted by Edward Kiesewetter (if you don't like the spelling, you try it) of Columbus, Ohio.

FRÉD. A. CRANDALL was down as "not present, but consenting." He agreed to sign "any old minutes that Seiter will write."

C. H. MARSTON was there from Boston to explain the plan and he will be "assistant hef" or words to that effect, to see to the arrangements.

ANDREW J. FRAME of Waukesha, Wis., was about the last arrival at the Chicago convention. He had just finished his testimony before the senate committee in Washington and dropped in on his way home. Mr. Frame and wife have a reservation on the Chicago-Boston special.

ONE of the most vigorous movements which developed in the LaSalle corridor was a boom for Walter Rarick for chairman of the council to succeed George Woodruff.

MR. RARICK has been a nominal candidate on previous occasions when through kindness of heart he always insisted upon retiring in favor of the other fellow.

the convention, one of which he intends to put to immediate use.

NEXT year you will find all of the Ohio ex-presidents wearing a beautifully enameled gold pin, same as they do in Illinois, and which privilege is much enjoyed by the "exes."

CHAIRMAN S. E. BRADT of the good roads committee closed his splendid report with the very highest tribute to the good work done in the cause by President W. G. Edens of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association and by Homer J. Tice, who offered and put through the famous good roads bill at Springfield.

MR. BRADT declared that Mr. Edens' work in amalgamating all good roads forces in the state into an effective organization could not have been accomplished by any other than a natural genius at organization.

NO part of Mr. Bradt's report received more vociferous applause than that mentioned above.

WILLIAM GEORGE of Aurora, a famous long time convention goer, was so pleased with the Chicago meeting that he decided promptly to attend the big convention at Boston. After ten or fifteen years without a skip he could not let it go by.

FRÉD B. CAPEN, the big investment banker at Bloomington, saw his first Illinois convention when it assembled on Thursday. He was shown over the jumps by his old comrade, Charles B. Mills of Minneapolis.

MR. CAPEN liked it so well that he walked upstairs to the mezzanine floor, paid his initiation fee and joined the state association. He has given a solemn pledge that never again will he miss one, even if he has to walk to it.

JOHAN R. WASHBURN was busy entertaining the out-of-town correspondents of the big Continental and Commercial National. The joke among the boys was the constant habit John had of limiting them to one kind of dessert.

IT required all the facilities of the big La Salle to fit out one of his combinations. "Dick" Hawes stuck to Anheuser-Busch, a famous St. Louis product. E. A. Seiter called for Moerlein's because that is a boost for Cincinnati, while "Eddie" Hughes insisted that, while he did not drink it, Schlitz is the only real goods, for it helped to make Milwaukee famous.

H. H. GODDARD GETS PROMOTION
Harry H. Goddard, formerly cashier of the First National, Mt. Carmel, Ill., has been elected vice-president to succeed Joe G. Stansfield, who died recently.

Officials of the new La Salle (Ill.) Savings Bank and Trust Company have announced that the institution will be ready for business on October 1st.

IN this he only is imitating L. A. Goddard of the State Bank, who has a habit of doing the same thing.

NEW YORK'S list of representatives would not be complete without naming Mr. Townsend of the Importers and Traders Bank. He was one of the active participants.

A Magazine of Unusual Value to Investors

THE Investors' Magazine, published by this House, has been greatly increased in size and is now issued monthly instead of semi-monthly as heretofore.

In spite of the fact that no subscription fee is asked for the magazine we have steadfastly endeavored to make each issue of genuine interest and permanent value to every conservative investor. ☛ The increased size of the publication in its new form provides for the addition of new departments and a multiplication of the peculiarly interesting and informative features which have characterized it in the past. Every issue will contain one or more carefully prepared articles by men of prominence in the commercial or financial field, discussing those phases of the investment question upon which they are best qualified to speak with authority. ☛ We have also prepared a new Booklet which describes in detail the merits of the First Mortgage Bonds we sell, in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000, netting the investor, 5½ to 6 per cent. The soundness of these securities, together with the care with which we safeguard our clients is best shown by the fact that no investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us since this House was founded thirty-one years ago. ☛ We will be pleased to add the names of actual investors to our mailing list without any charge or obligation whatever.

Bankers Gather Here for State Convention

Bankers from all parts of Illinois, as well as a number of other states, were on hand this week to attend the sessions of the Illinois bankers convention held in this city at the La Salle hotel Thursday and Friday. Some of the delegates were on hand the fore part of the week. The Chicago banks proved themselves experts in looking after the comfort and convenience of their guests and the royal manner in which the visitors were entertained will not be forgotten soon.

Wednesday there was an exhibition of bank systems, equipment, appliances and advertising, the entire eighteenth floor of the La Salle being given up for that purpose.

The annual group dinner was held at six o'clock Wednesday evening and at two in the afternoon the executive council of the association held a meeting in the college room.

Thursday morning the convention was called to order by President J. D. Phillips of Green Valley. After invocation by the Rev. George Craig Stewart of Evanston, David R. Forgan welcomed the out-of-town bankers, the response being made by E. E. Crabtree of Jacksonville, an ex-president of the association.

President Phillips then delivered his annual address, after which Senator L. Y. Sherman talked on "The Distinction Between Regulation and Control." After the appointment of committees on resolutions and nominations, the A. B. A. members of Illinois held a meeting, H. E. Otte of the National City, vice-president for the state, presiding.

The afternoon was given up to addresses by ex-Congressman A. F. Dawson of Davenport, Iowa, president of the First National, Robert S. Seeds of Birmingham, Pa., and Homer J. Tice of Greenview, who explained the new road law. Mr. Dawson's subject was "Will the Owen-Glass Measure Fill the Bill." Mr. Seeds had for his topic, "How God Made the Soil Fertile."

Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile National of St. Louis, was down for a talk entitled "Is the Glass-Owen Currency Measure in its Present Form Workable?" George M. Reynolds told of the need of an adequate banking and currency law, after which reports were heard from the committees on agriculture and good roads, the executive council and the treasurer.

The group dinner held in the banquet room of the nineteenth floor was greatly enjoyed by those present, as was the entertainment which followed.

Thursday at three o'clock there was a reception to the visiting ladies in the Munger room of the Art Institute, the wives of the presidents of Chicago's clearing house banks receiving. In the evening there were theater parties to the Garrick, Grand and Olympic.

Friday luncheon was had at the South Shore

Country Club, after which an automobile tour of the city was made. At the South Shore luncheon a very attractive souvenir in the way of a menu card was provided. Those who preferred a ball game to the auto trip went out to the White Sox park and saw the game between Chicago and St. Louis.

Appropriate souvenirs were presented by the Chicago banks to all the bankers and their ladies in attendance at the convention. The association gave each member a souvenir fob seal bearing the insignia of the association and the numerical number of each bank.

David R. Forgan in his speech welcoming the delegates to Chicago said that bankers and their business are not properly understood. He criticised the proposed currency law and believes if enacted it will have a bad effect and cause many banks to take out state charters.

E. E. Crabtree of Jacksonville responded gracefully to Mr. Forgan's remarks. He said the down-state bankers are proud of Chicago, which they consider as their city, and that they always are glad of an opportunity to spend a day or two here.

President's Address

But the time has come when duty calls and to shirk a duty would be as unpardonable as it would be cowardly.

A year ago when you, my friends, in your charitable kindness, elected me to the presidency of this great organization, I firmly resolved that to get results with as little noise as possible would be the policy of the administration, and to that original resolution we have firmly adhered from that day until this.

Realizing that the success of the administration depended largely upon the men associated with it that did the work, together with the hearty co-operation of the members, my first duty was to appoint the standing committees.

In looking for a chairman for the agricultural and vocational education committee, no other name appeared but the name of the gentleman discovered and appointed by Mr. Crabtree and myself as the first chairman of said committee, my efficient predecessor, the Hon. B. F. Harris, of Champaign.

Likewise in selecting a chairman for the good roads committee only one name appeared, the name of a practical man, a man that had been on the job for fifteen or sixteen years in his own township, a man that had done things, and Governor Dunne could have made no better selection when he appointed him one of the state highway commission. Hon. S. E. Bradt, of DeKalb.

With these two men chairmen of their respective committees, backed up by the strong, splendid, efficient gentlemen that are associated with them, we had a right to expect what we have received, much progress, results achieved, a long step forward on the two roads that lead to better things in the public domain.

Strange as it may seem, these questions are practically new, so far as the Illinois Bankers Association is concerned, although they have been discussed and acted upon in other countries for sixty years or more, and in our own state, by the Farmers' Institute, for a score of years.

I congratulate the bankers of Illinois and the nation, and other business men's organizations, and men in their individual capacity, who have taken up this great work and extended their efforts into the broader fields of usefulness. Occasionally we hear a murmur, a slighting remark, a protest, a questioning of motives, a denial of responsibility.

But listen, my friends, the first man born of woman became a murderer and had the stamp of a felon placed upon his brow because he denied any responsibility for the welfare of his brother.

It certainly is a hopeful sign when business men are broad enough, patriotic enough, and manly enough to look beyond the boundaries of their sphere and spend their time and money in the interest of their fellow man. The man that is governed by his prejudices, or from selfish motives, does not make the most desirable citizen. But he only who is willing to recognize the rights and needs of others is worthy of emulation.

When attending one of the out-state meetings it was my pleasure and good fortune to meet an old gentleman, some eighty years of age, as I recall it, who was a banker, a farmer, and a stock man. Needless to say we soon became good friends. After talking with him for some time, and getting some valuable information and good advice, and discovering that the old gentleman was up-to-date in every way, I said to him, calling him by name, "How does it come that a man of your age can be so up-to-date? Most men by the time they have arrived at your age in life have been in a rut for twenty years, and when you talk to them on such subjects as we have discussed to-night, they tell you what their fathers did fifty years before." The old gentleman, with pardonable pride, stretched himself up and, quick as a flash, explained it all in one word, "activity." The old gentleman was right. He had struck the keynote. He had kept up with the times. He had marched in the front rank of the procession of progress all his life. Gentlemen, may the bankers of Illinois do as well, for their usefulness, both present and future, depends upon their ability to meet and solve unselfishly and intelligently, with an eye single to the best interests of humanity, all new problems that confront them.

The greatest question before the American people to-day is agriculture—nothwithstanding provided it with land and buildings, and is contributing with princely generosity toward its work, in addition to the official support and participation therein by Italy and forty-nine other governments, together representing ninety-five per cent of the world's area and ninety-eight per cent of the world's population. With such an institution thoroughly aroused to its duties and working with other organizations all over the world, great and permanent good must come, and will come.

Mr. Phillips here cited statistics relating to agriculture in foreign countries, showing that the United States is not measuring up to the agricultural standing of other nations. He told some of the steps which have been taken to improve agricultural methods in this country and advocated the employment of county demonstrators as a means of educating the farmers to farm more scientifically.

About 200 banks have been added to the membership during the past year.

President Phillips protested against the feature of the currency bill which provides nine months' farm mortgages for national banks.

Ex-Congressman Dawson in discussing the pending currency measure said the people of the United States are face to face with the most momentous legislation which has been ing the importance the politician has placed on the tariff and currency reform, while down in Washington, D. C., under the influence of the sweltering heat, trying to earn his salary by the sweat of his brow.

The maintaining, preserving and upbuilding of the fertility of the soil are the corner stone upon which not only the prosperity of the farmer depends, but of the state and nation as well. The fertility in the soil is the fountain from which flows the life's blood of all vegetation.

We might have our roads paved with gold, and a banking system so perfect in its construction that no flaw could be found in its working, perfection itself, and yet with an impoverished soil starvation stares us in the face and destruction the inevitable result to the nation.

Some one may ask the question, "Do you think there is any danger of such a result in this country?" and I answer without any equivocation, "None whatever." Neither in this country nor any other country. Why not? Because the nations of the world have been thoroughly aroused to the importance of the question, and in the year 1905 an international institute of agriculture was established in Rome upon the initiative of His Majesty, Victor Emanuel III, king of Italy, who up for enactment for a generation. He called attention to the need of passing a wise and just law. He believes that banking reform is infinitely more important to the great mass of people than to the bankers; that in endeavoring to enact a banking currency law the matter should be approached in a broad-minded way and consideration given to the general good rather than to selfish interests.

"The administration at Washington," said Mr. Dawson, "is striving to construct a sound system that will meet the requirements of business at all seasons of the year and that will protect the people from a recurrence of the disastrous financial disturbances of the past. In this effort it is entitled to our friendly cooperation and assistance. So in examining the Glass-Owen bill let us do so with an honest desire to point out wherein it can be improved and strengthened."

The speaker endorsed a number of the features of the bill but is of the opinion that, as a whole, it needs a number of amendments to perfect it. Mr. Dawson believes that the proposed law embodies the fundamental principles of a sound system.

The speaker criticised the note-issuing feature of the bill and said that the provisions for mobilizing bank reserves are in the main to be commended, but that they could be improved by judicious amendment.

Mr. Dawson is not in favor of establishing twelve federal reserve banks—at least right away—believing that it would be wiser to start in with three, or five at most, and add to that number as conditions should warrant.

Government control does not meet with the approval of the Davenport banker, who says that the bankers ought at least have a minority representation on the federal reserve board.

The speaker called attention to a number of other changes which he believes should be made in the bill, all of which have been suggested by bankers who have held conferences to consider the proposed law.

Mr. Dawson believes that the defects to which he called attention can be remedied easier by a few amendments which will in no way affect the fundamental principles underlying the measure. He is of the opinion that these amendments will be made by the senate.

He believes that the law-makers at Washington to enact a measure which will be fair to all concerned.

Senator Sherman Talks

Senator Sherman in his talk to the bankers explained the difference between regulation and control, stating as his opinion that it is proper to prescribe conditions governing the conduct or operation of a business, or the ownership of property, to such an extent as shall be found to be necessary for the public welfare, but that control, which signifies administration and command, never is justifiable, unless there is some useful purpose to be served.

He used as an illustration the pending banking and currency bill, which, he claims, seeks to control the banking business. The senator intimated clearly that he will not support the bill. He believes that the government is exceeding its rights in attempting to enact into law some of the principal features of the present bill, e. g., that which provides for the incorporation of federal reserve banks with a compulsory subscription by the existing national banks in an amount equal to 20 per cent of their capital stock. The senator also is of the opinion that "the attempt to control credit" can end in nothing but disastrous failure.

Harris Submits Report

Chairman B. F. Harris of Champaign presented the report of the agricultural committee.

In stating the position of the committee with reference to vocational education the following points were brought out: It is necessary that attention be paid to the largest number of children who are in school for the shortest period irrespective of their location; the poorest schools and the poorest teachers (because underpaid) are as a rule in the rural communities. The country pupil should have educational facilities equal to those of the city pupil, and to accomplish this outside aid is necessary. The committee is of the opinion that this work should be carried on in connection with and as a part of our present public school system. It is recognized that as a very small percentage of children go to the high school the most practical place to begin work is in the elementary grades.

per cent having already taken the preliminary steps of nominating applicants for the position of county superintendent of highways and nearly as many have prepared their maps showing the system of state aid roads.

"It is the desire of the state authorities that every county shall avail itself of the amount to be allotted to it under the law, and to this end, the co-operation of the bankers as well as all other citizens is asked. If your county for lack of correct information or for any other reason has failed to take the necessary steps, will you not interest yourself in this matter and assist in getting the information properly before your people.

"If your county has already taken the preliminary steps, we believe you would be of service to your community in keeping in touch with the progress of the movement.

"We find prevalent in many communities the idea that the law invests the state highway commission with certain authority which it proposes to exercise in an arbitrary manner, more especially in regard to designating that part of the system of state aid roads in each county which shall be improved each year and the material of which it shall be constructed. The designating of the roads to be improved lies with the county boards and with them alone, the state commission having no initiative whatever in the matter. It is true that the state department governs in the matter of the type of construction and properly so, because after the improvement of the road the state must assume all future maintenance, repairs and rebuilding. Therefore, while local conditions and local sentiment will be given all possible consideration, it is the duty of the commission as representing the entire state to use only durable material and the best of construction.

"I wish to say, however, that the state highway commission will not attempt to deal arbitrarily with any man or any county board, but propose to meet everybody on the plane of the greatest good for the greatest number. The amount of money available for the two years will build but a very small proportion of the state aid roads, yet it is probably all that can

Address of Robert S. Seeds

Robert S. Seeds of Birmingham, Pa., delivered an agricultural number Thursday afternoon. Mr. Seeds' subject was "How God Made the Soil Fertile."

Briefly, some of the points touched upon by the speaker were restoration of the soil by addition of vegetable matter, improving the soil from an organic or animal matter standpoint and the way to handle barnyard manure. Mr. Seeds is the owner of a farm at Birmingham, Pa., and he explained to the bankers some of the agricultural methods he has employed and which he has found successful. Mr. Seeds has redeemed an abandoned farm in Pennsylvania and the state engaged him to go out and tell the story. He has lectured to a number of bankers' conventions.

George M. Reynolds discussed the currency bill exhaustively at the Friday morning session and was applauded vociferously by the bankers present.

Gov. Eberhart of Minnesota, who was unable to reach Chicago on Thursday, failed to appear Friday. He was billed for an address.

BURLINGTON CROP REPORT

Burlington Railway's crop report says that Illinois corn is in good condition, except along the Galesburg division where hot weather damage occurred and retarded growth. The Iowa crop is estimated at from fifty to seventy-five per cent, and in poor condition. Missouri corn damage is fifty per cent, and rain would bring no benefit now. In Nebraska corn is fair north of the Platte, but little south of the river, where it is being cut for silage. Wyoming expects a half crop.

NEW KANSAS BANKS

Records of the Kansas bank commissioner's office show that out of twenty applications for charters for banks filed with the state charter board in the past six months but five have been granted. Kansas now has 929 state and 211 national banks.

THE NEW CONSTITUTION

In the thirty-nine years of its existence the American Bankers Association has become the most powerful social and business organization known to history. In recent years it has prospered in memberships, grown in influence and shown a business utility far beyond the expectations of those who organized it. It has progressed under a very inadequate and much patched up constitution. One of its recently developed shortcomings was its failure to provide a successor to take the place of a president removed by death or other cause. Two years ago general revision was first proposed at the New Orleans convention. A committee on revision was appointed which reported at the Detroit convention one year ago that revision was not a complete answer to the demand of the association for a better and more modern instrument. The committee was enlarged and authorized to report a fully revised constitution to the convention which will assemble at Boston October 6th. Months of the very hardest work have been devoted to its completion by Chairman Robt. E. James of Easton, Pa., and by his associates, W. J. Bailey of Kansas, O. E. Dunlap of Texas, C. H. McNider of Iowa, Gordon Jones of Colorado and Sol Wexler of New Orleans. The lion's share of the work fell to Chairman James, whose long experience in parliamentary work fitted him well for the task. When the first draft of the new constitution was reported on at the Briarcliff meeting of the council in May last, it had cut off the sections from representation on the council. This created some uneasiness on the part of one or two of the sections, each of which had enjoyed three memberships ex officio. The committee took the matter up anew and in the document to be offered for adoption at Boston each section will be allowed one member upon the council, that honor falling to the chairman of the section during the year of his administration. Among the many new and admirable provisions in the new constitution as offered by the committee is that touching upon the suspension or expulsion of a member. It can be done and action can be taken only when written charges have been made and signed by the complainant. This is a great advance over former practices. An emergency meeting of the entire general convention can be had upon petition of one-third of the membership or upon the request of three-fourths of the members of the executive council. All former presidents of the association, whether qualified as delegates or not, will be entitled to the floor privileges of delegates hereafter, but without a vote. Election shall be by ballot when more than one nominee is to be voted for for a single office; otherwise the secretary will cast the ballot. The president of the association hereafter will be the chairman of the council, that position as a separate office having been abolished by the new constitution. In absence of the president of the association a chairman pro tem will be elected. The vice-president will have the distinction of being chairman of the finance committee. Under the new constitution a banker who accepts an unexpired term upon the council will be eligible for re-election for the full term. Heretofore this could not be done. Under the new constitution a member of the council serving a full term cannot succeed himself. Special meetings of the council may be called upon the request of ten of its members. The executive council will elect or employ all officials of the association and may remove any or all of them from employment. The council is charged with preparing the program for the annual and special sessions of the general convention. It will fix the amounts of all salaries and compensations paid directly or indirectly from the funds of the association, and must require a total statement of all moneys expended. It is authorized to employ auditors. Furthermore under the new constitution the council will designate depositaries for all association funds, provide a custodian for all of the securities of the association and make annual reports. In the past it has been the custom of the treasurer to designate the depositary. The general secretary also is required to make a statement of all salaries and compensations paid either directly or indirectly from funds of the association. These provisions are intended to consolidate the business offices at headquarters so as to bring the operations of the sections into more complete harmony with those of the general association. Heretofore the section committees fixed the compensation of the section employees, the amounts varying very widely as between the sections. Under the new system much of this will be better regulated. A check will be had also upon vouchers issued by the sections and the treasurer will pay over no more appropriations in bulk, money disbursements being subject only to proper vouchers representing actual services, expenses or materials purchased, and money unexpended will revert to the treasury. No member of the executive council shall be a member of more than one of the permanent committees. The committee on law will have six members, two of whom will retire each year. The committee on federal legislation will serve under the same restrictions. The committee on membership will be composed of three persons, one of whom will be elected each year. This committee will pass upon applications for memberships unless it shall delegate its authority to the general secretary. The best plums which remain to be given out under the new constitution will be the two places on the administrative committee, which will be composed of the president of the association and two members of the council. These members will be elected, one from the one-year class and one from the two-year class, so that each member will have had a year's experience on the council before he will be eligible to serve with the president of the association on the administrative committee. The finance committee will have ten members divided among the three classes of membership with this restriction—that no member of the council representing any section or no member of any committee asking for an appropriation can serve on the finance committee. The protective committee will be composed of three members, one of whom will retire each year. This is a vast improvement over past practices, not only in this committee, but in all others. The new constitution defines the duties of all these committees explicitly. The work of the administrative committee is the most important. It will have general supervision over all committees created under the the new constitution or by the convention itself. This will enable the association to have harmonious action between the various committees and no disputed jurisdiction. The decision of the administrative committee is final, unless revised by the executive council itself. The finance committee will be charged with auditing books and will have the power to check over all items for salary, expenses or other purchases. The protective committee and every member of the association is prevented from compromising or compounding with parties charged with crime. This is a very important provision and has been in vogue with many of the state associations for some time. Under the new constitution there will be no hold-over memberships on committees and memberships will be equitably distributed as to territory. In former days politically inclined members of the association kept themselves "as good as on the council" with committee places for as much as ten or twelve years at a time. Under the new constitution no member can serve on more than one committee, which is another matter which in times past gave considerable dissatisfaction. All of the old committees and committee memberships existing at the time of the adoption of the new constitution are abolished and terminated by it. Of course, the general convention may appoint committees during the sessions, but these will lapse upon report being made to the convention. The

NORTHWESTERN BANKERS—

YOUR GRAIN DRAFTS are drawn chiefly on Minneapolis. The utmost promptness in presenting them to the drawees is very important. The Northwestern is equipped to handle such drafts with the greatest despatch. Its morning mail sometimes brings in as much as $1,000,000 in this kind of paper alone. The drafts are presented for payment immediately after receipt and the proceeds passed through the same day's clearings. A prompt, definite settlement is thus secured. Each item receives careful, individual consideration. You are notified by wire at once if any difficulty arises. The completeness of the system of collecting as developed by The Northwestern is the result of its forty-one years' experience gained directly at the grain terminal. The total resources backing the bank's efforts are over $35,000,000.

general convention may appoint committees to which may be referred any subject for consideration during the interim between sessions of the general convention. These committees will lapse upon report being made to the ensuing convention. No matter how valuable the member's services have been upon any standing committee, it will require the unanimous consent of the general convention for his immediate reappointment. This is intended in effect to see that the honors as well as the work of the association is passed around. There will be a special order of business at each annual convention hereafter, at which time changes in membership on continuous committees and appointment of convention committees will be considered. The currency commission is treated as in a separate class and will be continued, the membership being kept up to fifteen, vacancies to be filled by the council. The nominating committee, under the new constitution, is given very important duties. It may nominate one or more persons for each office, but its report shall not exclude the naming of any person as a candidate from the floor of the convention. All by-laws and standing regulations of the sections must be approved by the executive council, which will be the real governing body of the association under the new constitution if adopted at Boston. A national and a state bank section have been provided for and other sections may be added on by by-law whenever desired. The new constitution, as a committee report, may be adopted at Boston by a majority vote. To change any of its provisions or to add any new ones will require a two-thirds vote of the members present at the convention or a three-fourths vote of the entire membership of the executive council. A by-law or amendment added by the executive council must be approved by a majority vote of the convention at the next annual session.

It seems to be the general opinion by those well informed in the matter that all differences which grew out of the provisions of the new constitution as read at Briarcliff have been adjusted and there is little likelihood of opposition to its adoption at the Boston convention.

ST. LOUIS BANKER RECEIVES CONSULAR APPOINTMENT

James E. Brock, secretary of the Mississippi Valley Trust of St. Louis, has been appointed vice-consul in St. Louis of the Republic of Paraguay. He succeeds Charles M. Pynne, who removed to Boston. Mr. Brock will retain his position in the trust company, with which he has been connected for more than twenty-two years.

Mr. Brock became interested in the Latin-American countries during a visit to Panama in 1911. He has indorsed trips to South American countries by St. Louis merchants and bankers to promote trade interests.

A. F. DAWSON MAKES HIT

A. F. Dawson, president of the First National of Davenport, Iowa, made quite a hit at the convention on Thursday afternoon with the good stories which he told. Here are some of those told by the brilliant ex-congressman: A stranger finding himself in a small town on Sunday morning, decided to attend a place of worship. Accordingly he went to one of the churches in the town and listened to what seemed to him an interminable sermon. But, as all things must, the sermon finally ended, whereupon the pastor announced that immediately after the close of the service there would be a meeting of the board in the vestry room.

After the congregation had filed out of the church the tired auditor made his way around to the vestry room. Shortly afterwards some of the board members put in an appearance and, perceiving a stranger present, were very much surprised. They asked the man if he understood there was to be a meeting of the board and he replied that he was perfectly aware of the fact. Before long the minister came in, and he also was very greatly astonished at seeing a stranger. He said, "Sir, do you understand this is to be a meeting of the BOARD?" "Certainly, when I listened to that sermon of yours, I was never so BORED in my life."

Last summer Mr. Dawson was traveling along a road in Iowa when he came upon a boy fourteen or fifteen years of age working in a field. It was an intensely hot August day, the boy was perspiring freely and seemed to be greatly fatigued.

Mr. Dawson engaged the lad in conversation and finally inquired what compensation the youth received for his services. "Well, you see it's like this," replied the boy. "I get nothing if I do it, and if I don't do it I get hell."

The Kansas state bank commissioner has received the estimate that Kansas this year raised 76,000,000 bushels of wheat.

CHINA REVOLUTIONIZED

The famous Bobbs-Merrill publishing house of Indianapolis and New York has bought out the most interesting business man's book offered in many seasons. It is John Stuart Thompson's, author of "The Chinese." A glance at the table of contents of this excellent new work shows at once that it is a thorough and minute study of all conditions in China, to which has been added much literature, much history and much relating to the national character of the people, their government and its affairs. In short, it is a compendium on China past, present and future. Distinctly and pre-eminently it is the business man's book of the new, republican China. It is immensely interesting as well as informative and the picturesque style invests even the statistics with a readable quality. The genesis of the recent revolution and much of the past history of the country are given careful consideration in the first chapter, which comprises one hundred and thirteen of the total of five hundred and ninety pages. The chapters which follow are devoted to matters of vital interest to every progressive American who sees in the New China an added field for his endeavors.

Industrial and commercial matters are discussed in a most instructive manner. Reference is made to the former prevalence of despotism and graft. Mining resources, manufacturing possibilities, docks, railways, shipping and water routes are extensively described. Agriculture and forestry; architecture and art; military and naval matters; religion and marriage; social standards and the morale, all are carefully considered. Public works; systems of communication; the development of general trade and the business of the country are reviewed. Considerable space is devoted to the capitalist class; the difficulties of espionage; finance and the budget; money standards and currency; internal and international politics; the influence of Japan, the European nations and America.

There is to be a grand field for professional men, doctors, lawyers, architects, engineers, artists, naval and military experts and capitalists. Mr. Thompson makes plain the opportunities which exist. English papers term it "the book of the hour," and it means more to Americans than to the English. It is an American book on America's far east politics and commerce. The author gives the first details of his plan for an Anglo-American naval alliance whereby, with the same efficiency, $500,000,000 a year can be saved for commercial and educational and financial expansion. This is a work to get at once and to study incessantly.

Harry H. Goddard has been chosen vice-president of the First National, Mt. Carmel, Ill., to succeed Joe G. Stansfield, who died recently.

TWO STRONG FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Foremost among Indiana's strong financial institutions are the St. Joseph County Savings and the St. Joseph Loan and Trust Company of South Bend. The combined resources are more than $6,500,000, representing the largest and strongest financial institution in the northern part of the state.

Officers of the Savings Bank are as follows: Jacob Woolverton, president; Benj. F. Dunn, vice-president; Rome C. Stephenson, vice-president and treasurer; George U. Bingham, secretary, and H. E. Elbel, cashier.

Officers of the Trust Company are J. M. Studebaker, president; Jacob Woolverton, vice-president; Rome C. Stephenson, vice-president and treasurer; George U. Bingham, secretary, and H. E. Elbel, cashier.

Mr. Woolverton is the active manager of both institutions and his success as a financier has been remarkable. During the sixteen years he has been in the banking business he has never made a loan wherein a loss was sustained by either institution.

John Moler Studebaker is the only survivor of the famous Studebaker brothers, who established the mammoth vehicle manufactory at South Bend. He has always taken an active interest in the affairs of this financial institution and its success is largely attributed to his business sagacity and foresight.

Mr. Stephenson is president of the savings bank section of the A. B. A. and is well known to bankers throughout the country.

BANKERS FORM ORGANIZATION

Representative bankers and officers of loan associations of Leavenworth (Kan.) city and county met at the Commercial Club rooms in Leavenworth recently and formed a permanent organization. It was decided to hold a meeting each month and to co-operate in the development of the county. Officers were elected, who are to serve for one year. They are Albert Wulfekuhler, president; Otto Bauer, vice-president; H. T. Cockrill of Jarbalo, treasurer; Albert Bauer, secretary. It will be the purpose of this organization to work for the advancement and development of the county along educational and agricultural lines. Similar organizations are to be perfected throughout the state.

The situation is one of both farming and manufacturing, there being about ninety varied industries in the city of Chicago Heights, with fertile farms in the surrounding township. Mr. McEldowney is one of a family of bankers, succeeding his father, the late W. J. McEldowney, to the presidency, and is a brother of the late John Howard McEldowney of the National City Bank of New York. The "McEldowneys" and Chicago Heights have long been closely associated, the patriarch of the family, John McEldowney, having helped establish the settlement in 1835.

Mr. McEldowney represents Group Four as vice-president.

SAYS STATE BANKS SHOULD GET SHARE

Superintendent of Banks Alex. Walker of Alabama believes that the state banks should share equally with the national banks in the distribution of the $1,500,000 government funds allotted to Alabama to aid in the moving and marketing of crops. According to Mr. Walker the burden of handling the crop usually falls on the state banks, financial institutions of the small cities and towns of the state, and he is of opinion that the money allotted to Alabama by the government will not serve its chief purpose unless a large amount of these funds is deposited in the smaller banks. Not only does Mr. Walker believe that the state banks should share with the national banks in the apportionment of the funds, but he thinks the smaller banks should be charged the same rate of interest as the larger banks.

It looks to me as if there is a movement on foot to discriminate against the state banks," said Superintendent Walker recently. "I do not think this is fair. The burden of handling the cotton crop of the state usually falls on the banks in the small cities and towns of the state and I doubt if the money apportioned to this state by the government will serve its chief purpose unless a large amount of the funds is placed in the state banks."

The farmers of the state usually rely upon state banks to aid them in the movement and marketing of the crop, and in this respect state banks usually extend greater aid to farmers than the national banks. I wish to see a fair apportionment of the government funds among the state banks because I believe that with these institutions the money will serve its original and chief purpose."

The bank has kept pace with the town's growth. The officers are as follows: Orville B. Miller, president; J. M. Brownback and J. Gorin, vice-presidents; S. E. Walker, cashier, and G. P. Lewis and W. A. Miller, assistant cashiers.

Officers of the bank said that Samuel Blier, the cashier, had disappeared last Thursday, and until the books of the institution could be examined its condition could not be ascertained.

INDIANA CONVENTION

The Indiana convention held in Indianapolis September 23d and 24th brought out a large attendance. Tuesday morning President J. L. McCulloch, president of the Marion National, called the bankers to order. The delegates were welcomed by Governor Ralston and Stoughton A. Fletcher, president of the Indianapolis Clearing House, the response being made by Fred I. Barrows, cashier of the Central State of Connersville.

Secretary Andrew Smith reported the addition of fifty-six new members during the past year. Out of 939 banks in the state 845 are members of the state association.

J. C. Johnson, vice-president of the Citizens National of Evansville, made a hit with his instructive talk on bank examinations.

Tuesday afternoon George M. Reynolds made a good impression with his able talk on the proposed banking and currency bill. Senator Owen was billed to talk at this session on the currency bill, of which he is joint author with Carter Glass.

Wednesday morning the Hon. A. Q. Jones, counsel for the Indiana Bankers Association, spoke on the uniform negotiable instrument law. In the afternoon the trust company section met and was addressed by its president, B. C. Bowman of the Muncie Trust Company. E. E. Gates, an attorney of Indianapolis, talked on "The Trust Company and Its Relations."

The speech of George M. Reynolds of Chicago took the convention by storm, and there wasn't even standing room in the assembly hall when the big financier began to talk. He was followed by Senator Owen, who did not even approach his success at the Ohio convention, all the fire in his remarks having been taken out by Mr. Reynolds' speech.

President's Address

President J. L. McCulloch of Marion gave a short resume of the work of the association the past year.

In the course of his remarks Mr. McCulloch predicted that the currency bill will have been passed by the senate and signed by the president before next Thanksgiving Day. He favors the passage of the bill with some few changes and believes that the bankers should assist the government to pass a law which will treat all interests fairly.

Speaking of the agricultural committee of the association, President McCulloch said:

"At the last meeting of our association I was instructed to appoint a committee on agriculture and vocational training. In appointing this committee I realized that our committee on agriculture for the previous year—Charles Goodbar, John Zulauf and Walter Bonner—had done such good work and made such a good start for the association in this direction that the best thing I could do would be to reappoint those three men, and I therefore made Charles Goodbar of Crawfordsville chairman of the committee, and added as his coworkers John Zulauf of Jeffersonville, Walter Bonner of Greensburg, Ralph Todd of Bluffton and Charles Willson of Michigan City. These five men have worked hard and faithfully, and I wish here and now to thank them for the time and devotion they have given the work and to assure you that much good has been done and much interest aroused in this important question of agriculture throughout the entire state under the guidance and leadership of this committee on agriculture of the Indiana Bankers Association.

The committee has had many meetings and early in the year decided to attempt to co-ordinate and concentrate the efforts of some fifteen or twenty different organizations throughout the state who were either directly or indirectly trying to help along agricultural development. With this end in view and with the consent and help of the officers of the association, after many consultations and meetings with the executive officers of these different organizations, a very large and successful two days' meeting was held at Indianapolis on June 3rd and 4th, which was a great success not only because of the very large and enthusiastic attendance, but especially in awakening widespread interest throughout the entire state among all classes of people in this great and important subject of agriculture, and incidentally bringing prominently before our entire people the fact that the bankers of Indiana were ready and willing to help in every way in this work and even to be leaders in an earnest effort for better and more practical help to the agricultural development of our state.

Legislation

"During the first two months of 1913 we had the usual biennial meeting of our state legislature. I appointed a large, conservative and influential legislative committee to keep in touch with what the legislature was doing and proposed to do. This committee and the secretary and president of our association who worked with them were certainly at all times treated with great courtesy by our good, broadminded, conservative governor and by the legislators in regard to matters pertaining to legislation. We succeeded in helping to get passed several laws which we believe will not only help the bankers, but the entire business interests of the state; among these I may mention the "uniform negotiable instrument law," which the bankers of Indiana have been trying for nine years to make the law of our state.

"We gave our best influence to the educators and many other interests in helping to get passed by the Indiana legislature that wonderful vocational and educational bill which I believe is going to be of widespread importance and help, and which has already attracted the attention and interest of our whole country and puts Indiana in the front rank as a leader in agricultural, manual training, and vocational work.

"The 'Bad Check Law,' the law regarding 'getting credit by false or incorrect statements,' and many other laws of that character which are wholesome and fair, and will do the business community good, were also passed.

"The 'old chestnut' of 'guaranty of bank deposits, came up, but after a full and free discussion of this subject between a large representative number of bankers and the full membership of the legislative committee having the proposed bill in charge, the proposed bill was allowed to die in the committee's hands.

"The 'Blue Sky' law which we were instructed by our last convention to try and have passed by our last legislature got into such a hopeless tangle in the closing days of the legislature that it seemed impossible to have a fair 'Blue Sky' law passed which would accomplish what was desired, and yet not hurt some proper and conservative business; so that law finally died by the governor's veto, because it was generally felt it would do more harm than good.

"I feel that on the whole we accomplished much good in our work with the legislature, and we were enabled to do what we did because we came out openly, candidly, and in a fair and broad-minded way before the committees, espousing nothing but what was fair, conservative and reasonable for the entire business community and for the best good of the entire state."

Explains Negotiable Instrument Law

Aquilla Q. Jones, counsel for the Indiana bankers, explained the uniform negotiable instrument law recently passed by the Indiana legislature largely through the efforts of Andrew Smith, secretary of the association.

Explains Credit System

W. E. Balch, manager of the Indianapolis Merchants' Credit Bureau, spoke on "Real Credit Information." He said the plan devised by the bureau is simple, being based on accounts carried on the ledgers of business houses, which combined their interests by forming the bureau and using it as a clearing house for credit information. Old ledger accounts are registered in the bureau by a card system, showing whether customers are prompt, slow or nonpaying, and as new accounts are opened by business houses they are added to the bureau's records.

"The bureau does not take the place of the mercantile agencies," he said, "but deals with ledger information. It has taught many people that if they would have credit at the business houses they must deserve it."

Reynolds Talks

George M. Reynolds in his speech said it is generally agreed that there is a need for legislation on money questions but that the legislation should be to augment the present banking system, which has shown few breakdowns. He said he had been in Washington, where he had talked with administration leaders, and he is, he said, satisfied that they are "open-minded and trying to enact the best possible currency law."

Mr. Reynolds said he could see many good things in the currency bill as it is now pending in the congress, but there are some features to which many bankers are opposed. Chief among these is the plan for organizing federal reserve banks. He said these banks would provide safeguards against financial depressions and provide for note issues and credits, so that the financial needs of business could be met. These banks, he said, would be especially helpful to the business of the country when public confidence is disturbed. These banks will enable an interchange of credits to be carried on without the actual transfer of money from one city to another. There are periods of the year, he said, when $150,000,000 is temporarily withdrawn from circulation that money may be moved from one city to another by the express companies. Under the federal reserve bank system it would be a question of bookkeeping and not of shipping the money.

Bankers are objecting to the federal reserve bank plans, he said, chiefly because the proposed law compels a national bank to enter the system under penalty of forfeiting its charter if it declines to do so. The banks must invest in the stock of these banks and place a portion of their reserve funds in the federal bank vaults, while the national banks are not to have representation on the managing boards of the federal banks. The plan as proposed, Mr. Reynolds said, would require the national banks to take $125,000,000 worth of stock in the reserve banks and to keep $500,000,000 in the vaults of these reserve institutions. The national bankers, he said, desire a voice in the management of the reserve banks. He said that in France, England and Germany this central bank idea is carried out successfully without the bankers having to take stock in them, and he believes a similar plan could be worked out in the United States.

Senator Kern on Program

Senator John W. Kern spoke briefly. He said there are few men in congress who have superior knowledge on the intricate currency question.

"There is not a man in congress," he said, "who is not earnestly seeking information. They all realize their limitations and are eager to pass a law which will serve all business interests. There is no feeling of hostility in the senate or house against banking methods as they are now conducted. I hope this convention will not hesitate to send men to Washington to help the congress get a good bill. There are many interests to be considered in framing a currency bill. While the bankers may desire that it make certain provisions, there are other important business interests which have opposing views."

Another speaker was Charles W. Fairbanks, who in a general way discussed the importance of the pending currency legislation. He said it is the greatest question that has ever confronted the government of the United States.

Address of J. C. Johnson

J. C. Johnson, vice-president of the National of Evansville, presented an able discussion of bank examinations and he emphasized the necessity of more thorough and capable examination of the banks. One of the troubles necessary to contend with nowadays is inadequate compensation of the examiners, which is not conducive to the most efficient service. Mr. Johnson is of the opinion that the fee system of paying is wrong and that the office should be put on a salary basis. He also advocated placing the appointment of the examiners under civil service in the hope of eliminating politics from this department.

Address of Edw. E. Gates

Edward E. Gates, an attorney of Indianapolis talked on "The Trust Company and Its Relations." Mr. Gates commenced by defining a trust company and telling of the service which it is able to render its patrons. He called attention to the advantage of employing an incorporated trust company in preference to an individual trustee.

Mr. Gates next went on and gave a history of the early organization of trust companies, as well as of savings banks and safety deposit companies. He told of the agitation to place trust companies under supervision and of their growth in this country; of their growth in Indiana and of the statutes governing them; of the relations and responsibilities of the trust company and its officers.

NEBRASKA CONVENTION

The seventeenth annual convention of the Nebraska Bankers Association occurred on Thursday and Friday of this week in the city of Lincoln. At the first morning session J. M. Evans, cashier of the Farmers State of Shurt, delivered an address on "Deducting Mortgage Secured Notes from Capital Stock for Taxation."

At the afternoon session the committee on agricultural development presented its report of the year's work. There were two addresses, one on mutual relations of banker and farmer by Prof. E. W. Hunt of the "Twentieth Century Farmer," and the other on farmers' cooperative demonstration work by J. C. McEowell of the United States Department of Agriculture. After adjournment of this session a trip was made to the state farm in special street cars. In the evening there was a cabaret, luncheon and smoker at the Lindell Hotel, given by the banks of Lincoln.

Friday morning the group presidents were heard from and there were talks by Gov. Morehead, and J. G. Berryhill, a director of the Iowa National of Des Moines, on "Proposed Currency Legislation."

At the afternoon session C. V. Nelson, cashier of the First National of Stromsburg, spoke of "The New Thought Movement in Banking," and ex-Gov. W. J. Bailey of Kansas, president of the Kansas Bankers Association, talked on "Manufactured Unrest." After the reports of committees and the election and installation of officers, the convention adjourned.

In the afternoon there was a base ball game between Lincoln and Omaha and in the evening a banquet at the Lincoln hotel tendered the delegates and visitors by the banks of the city.

President's Address

President George F. Sawyer of Western in his annual address to the Nebraska bankers reported the business of the association, of the banks and the general business of the state in a satisfactory condition. Although the corn crop was damaged severely by the dry weather, there was garnered one of the largest small grain crops in the history of the state. All the indications now are for continued good business for the ensuing year.

President Sawyer told of the importance of agriculture to any community and of the increased interest which is being manifested in this subject by the bankers and others. He advocated vocational training in the public schools. Mr. Sawyer is of the opinion that the remedy for the wrongs of which the farmer complains lies in proper education and training for his vocation and in the adoption of better business methods rather than through the making of laws often inimical to his own interest.

"Agriculture is the foundation underlying every business in Nebraska," said the speaker. "We have no mining, we have no extensive manufacturing. The success of every business in our state depends on the success of the farmer. When he prospers, the banks prosper. When adversity comes to him, great depression and sometimes ruin comes to us. Before a man can enter the ministry, before he can practice law, or be an instructor in our schools, he must, in addition to a general education, specialize for the particular work in which he intends to engage. They who claim exclusive ownership of the land, and on whose vocation the existence of the whole human family depends, should and are beginning to realize the necessity for a more practical preparation for their work. This movement for better agriculture is challenging the attention of all classes of people as never before, and I venture the prediction that he who manipulates the soil must so qualify that he may use it not solely for the benefit of the present but for the benefit of future generations. Unwilling so to do, he must yield his place to those who will.

"In our agitation for a more intensive handling of the soil, in our anxiety for greater success of those engaged in the activities of farming, we must not forget that all over the great state of Nebraska, from East to West, from North to South, is born a generation, the present pride and future hope of this great country. Let us consecrate ourselves to the proposition that in leaving with them the accumulations of our depletion of the soil there shall go with it experience, training and practical education, by which they may restore our waste, and from which there shall grow a strong, useful and enduring manhood, a happy, beautiful and contented womanhood."

Address of C. V. Nelson

C. V. Nelson, cashier of the First National, Stromsburg, Neb., addressed the Nebraska bankers yesterday (Friday) on "New Thought Movement in Banking." He said in part:

"In order that we are to continue in helping upbuild this great nation we must be standard bearers, be and do that which we know is right and legitimate. In the case of a merchant buying goods he pays the same price for the same quality regardless of place or dealer. Our methods should be so conducted that it is not necessary for any combine; supply and demand regulate this. You are all aware of commercial paper a year ago quoted 3¾ to 4 now 6 to 6½. creasing very materially and loans high? Have you raised the loaning rate correspondingly? I dare say very few have. Why not? Surely you would consider the man insane who would sell his corn at forty cents per bushel when the market prices were seventy cents, his only reason for such transaction being that that is all it was worth when cribs were full. Is not the result for the banker the same? Money values fluctuate, but do we respond? Would our customers not be better off to know that the interest rate fluctuates just as do other commodities. Consequently we would not have the inflated price of farm lands and the like. Those buying maintain we get money at so low a rate and grain prices so high that we can make it all right, when as a matter of fact they get farm loans at five per cent which should be seven per cent. Of course this will be remedied by law in process of enactment by congress interpreted to me by an advocate of the administration currency bill that it would regulate grain prices so there would be a uniform price at all times, and certainly this would apply to everything. Is not the life of a nation dependent upon its financial standing? There is a limit to which we can go. We are in the midst of one of those readjustment periods. Commodities and fixed articles have been soaring while money has become cheaper. Thus the nation has gone literally wild over speculation or wealth seeking with demand for more money.

"The whole nation is almost led to believe that any seeming wrong condition is laid up against the government and the remedy to be instituted by legislation; so there the politicians have us. Whereas it lies in the individual and we play the little boy act of blaming some one else for a misdeed without searching for the guilty one.

"I contend that before we can have a permanent settled condition in this country by doing away with these adjustment periods a new national standard must be erected. Can you draw on your imagination to the extent that with the large and varied interests in this nation to accommodate, not please, that it is wise or American in principle to allow a professional politician, good at diagnosing political ailments but never as yet able to prescribe a remedy to hypnotize a congress, to pass a partisan monetary act, a departure from all former practices and experiences?

"I contend that we should demand that we amend, if needed, our present banking and monetary law and not have something pushed upon us unknown and untried. It seems to be the spirit of the times to be continually wanting something we have not. The most desired thing is more money, the excuse given that it takes so much to move the crop every season. Did not the ruling permit national banks to take out of circulation to the amount of their capital put millions of more money into circulation? The crops are yet to be moved and more money is needed. Is not the excessive use of credit rightly using up capital? Would it not be safer to provide a safeguard for this rather than provide a source from which unlimited capital is to be had by putting up a certain class of security and this to be done by an institution we are compelled by law to own stock in but have no voice in its management?

"I believe an entirely new banking system is not what we want."

rectors, an active executive officer of that growing banking institution, which is characterized as the strong financial institution among the progressive farmers and business men of Sangamon county.

The responsibility placed upon him by the board of directors and the officers is as high a tribute as they could possibly pay to Mr. Keys as a banker and financier, and shows the measure of esteem in which he is held by the officers and directors of the bank.

He is a member of a family that has been prominent in business and socially in Springfield for several generations. His father, Edward D. Keys, is one of the charter members of the Illinois Bankers Association and one of the foremost bankers and financiers of central Illinois. He has been actively connected with the various committees of the American Bankers Association for several years.

Mr. Keys is a young man who has displayed unusual legal ability, which has fitted him for a successful administration of the affairs of trust and estates. He has served as administrator for several large estates, and also has been appointed by the United States circuit court as a trustee and receiver in many bankruptcy cases. He is also active in public and social affairs and ready to serve any measure of benefit to the community in which he resides.

He has held several prominent positions of trust in municipal and county affairs in Sangamon county. He is one of the prime movers and supporters in the enactment of the present hard road law in this state. He was among the first to persuade Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman to become a candidate for the United States senate, and was one of his close advisers during his campaign, his large acquaintance among the legislators of the state and his continued activity contributing to its success.

Mr. Keys has a very pleasing personality and has been a very active entertainer in bankers' conventions and naturally has many friends with whom he enjoys an extensive acquaintance.

The Farmers National of Springfield has a capital stock of $200,000, surplus and profits amounting to $325,000, and deposits of $2,250,000.

The bank has established a bureau of information for all visitors attending the Illinois state fair, and they will be shown every courtesy.

TWO NEW MEMBERS OF A. B. A. COUNCIL

CHARLES A. HINSCH
CINCINNATI, OHIO

JOHN McHUGH
SIOUX CITY, IOWA

Two well known bankers who will take their seats on the A. B. A. Executive Council next week are Charles A. Hinsch, president of the Fifth-Third National of Cincinnati, and John McHugh, president of the First National of Sioux City, Iowa.

Mr. Hinsch is one of the most ready talkers among the banking fraternity. He made a speech at the Chicago currency conference which distinguished him at once as a clear thinker and a forcible logician. At Columbus he appeared to be about the only one of the vast audience who could hold his own with Senator Robert L. Owen. He has served Ohio before with credit and will do it again.

Mr. McHugh is an ex-president of the Iowa Bankers Association. He was the originator of the idea of having the group chairmen, who constitute the executive council of the Hawkeye organization, meet each month in order to shape the policy of the association. Mr. McHugh's opinions on currency matters are much sought.

BOOM EMMERSON FOR STATE TREASURER

L. L. Emerson, well-known Mt. Vernon banker, probably will be backed by down-state republican leaders for state treasurer in the primaries next year.

ENDORSE CURRENCY BILL

At a meeting of the finance committee of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, composed of Harvey G. Riggs, W. J. Singleton, F. W. Crane and J. M. Winters, the pending banking and currency bill was endorsed. It also was the sentiment of the committee that some provision should be made for banks outside the national reserve centers.

NORTHWEST BANKERS SPECIAL

The Northwestern bankers special, aboard which were financiers from Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, North and South Dakota, left Milwaukee Tuesday. The route planned embraced a circle tour by way of Washington, D. C., and New York, returning via Quebec, Montreal and Niagara Falls.

CALDWELL SPEAKS AT SCHOOL OPENING

George B. Caldwell, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings, spoke last Saturday evening at the opening exercises of the School of Commerce, Northwestern University. His talk was on the value of business training in relation to banking and commerce.

IOWA BANK OFFERS CORN PRIZE

Leavitt and Johnson National of Waterloo, Iowa, is offering a prize of $1,000 to the growers of the best corn in Blackhawk county during the 1914 season. The premiums will range from $10 to $200 and will be awarded in more than forty prizes. Every one is eligible to enter the contest.

CHARLEY McNIDER was up at Minneapolis and met the Lord Chief Justice of Scotland. Also Lochiel, whom Joseph Chapman is descended from, the "head chief thief of all time," of the same name.

McNIDER claimed relationship with both of them, so George Orde says, "which accounts for many things."

EX-PRESIDENT CHARLES SHADE of the Iowa association telegraphed for two compartments on Monday on the Boston special.

HE had intended going on the "bat-wing" special, which only put him late for the real-thing special.

"BANK DIRECTORY OF NEW ENGLAND" is being sent out in soft green leather covers, done in gold, by the National Shawmut of Boston.

IT isn't a game-of-chance directory, having been compiled by the National Shawmut staff in a careful manner. It is indexed and all delegates to Boston convention will get them.

THE very handsomest book on new banks, bank buildings and equipment has been published by the E. Jackson Casse Company of Chicago.

IT contains three color views in new banking rooms and exterior views of new buildings, done in three colors.

THE illustrations are full page, printed on one side only, and the book is a costly one. The Casse Company bank engineering experts will send a copy free to those intending to build or remodel. It is a liberal education in bank architecture and bank engineering.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS has missed the first convention special out of Chicago in over ten years. This time he and Mrs. Reynolds started for Boston via the White Mountains to pay a long promised visit to friends.

EXECUTIVE council of the Georgia Bankers Association has asked congress to consider the currency commission resolutions. The Georgia senators are asked direct to favor the changes in the bill.

PRESIDENT L. P. HILLYER adds his name to the address to congress. The Georgia bankers are "standard" in every resolution.

SWEDISH - AMERICAN NATIONAL Rockford, has purchased property at Fourth and South streets for a new three-story building.

KEYSER is the hardest fellow in the world to satisfy. Now he wants to capture four more bank customers, and he won't be happy ill he gets them.

SHE'S "about twenty-five" but at getting by with a bad check was too gay for the bank at Norwood, Mo.

THE trouble is with those darned country banks that won't take Keyser's advice to "be on guard all the time."

"FORWARD ST. LOUIS" is the new boom paper printed by the Business Men's League of that city. Looks fit to do the work intended.

J. A. LEWIS is on the staff, so you may look for two hundred yard drives for eighteen straight.

W. M. R. COMPTON & CO. of St. Louis has filed a bill in the southern district court of Iowa, "to test the new 'Blue Sky' law."

EVER sit in a warm sleeper beside a man who had just taken his overcoat out of the moth proof?

WHEN you hear a man talking on the new currency bill you don't have to wait long to know the view-point. He may be a patriot or he may be thinking only of the vanishing collection account.

CHICAGO banks are lending money in New York in considerable volume, and the country West is calling for less this year than for many years at this season.

J. W. PHELPS and wife of Los Angeles, Cal., spent the week in Chicago, prior to going to Boston on the Big Special.

MR. PHELPS is the moving spirit in the Home Savings bank, one of California's most prosperous institutions.

J. F. SARTORI did not travel East this time with John Perrin "on the Vichy wagon," but he will be "glad to see you George" just the same when he greets Mr. Reynolds in Boston.

MRS. C. E. BATCHELLER of North Dakota is on the nominating committee again at Boston. She'll be on deck when the session opens.

AT Detroit she went without dinner rather than be late for the committee session.

SEATTLE wants the 1915 A. B. A. convention. The clearing house has so decided and will present a strong invitation at Boston.

COLONEL OTTLEY will press Atlanta's claims for 1914. Richmond will offer her splendid hospitality for 1914 and so may Atlantic City.

SECRETARY O. HOWARD WOLFE of the clearing house section has been elected president of the New York Chapter, A. I. B.

L. E. PIERSON and F. O. Watts started early from New York to Boston by motor car. A hard pair to beat.

NELSON N. LAMPERT, Illinois' new man on the big council of the A. B. A., will qualify at Boston. Would be good timber for a vice-presidential nomination.

SECRETARIES J. E. PLATT and George H. Richards left by the P. R. R. special for Boston on Tuesday. Hoped to see the committee at work on the new currency bill at Washington.

THERE will be an "official special" train back from Boston leaving Saturday behind the Century and getting into Chicago about noon Sunday. It will be the answer as to "how will I get back?" No extra fare.

ON one of the going trains is Clare Hartigan, A. G. P. A. New York Central lines. On the other is George K. Thompson of Century fame. They will make your reservations on request. Hunt them up.

AT Boston will be a special man from the Pennsylvania to fix up all who want to return via New York and Washington. He will do all the telegraphing and fixing up at no cost or trouble to you. Hunt him up.

MARBLE BANK MONTHLY, published by the Union Trust and Savings, Spokane, continues a model for savings literature.

ARTHUR REYNOLDS will include the response to the Boston addresses of welcome in his opening remarks at the convention.

ON his way West Mr. Reynolds will stop over in New York and deliver an oration on "Centralization of Banking and Mobilization of Reserves" before the Academy of Political Science at the Columbia University. This will be on the evening of Monday, the 13th.

WE get it over the "long distance" that Senator Aldrich is coming over to Boston to take a swipe at the new currency bill.

MANY other leading currency experts have signalled that they will be at Boston to take a hand.

PERHAPS Washington can spare a few from the committees in charge of the new bill to state the other end of it.

WOULDN'T you like to be present when Senator Owen and ex-Senator Aldrich came together? So would we.

MR. REYNOLDS hopes the convention will develop into a veritable currency symposium.

IN last week's haste, at the conclusion of the election of a secretary "pro tem" for the Illinois Bankers Association two typographical errors were included in THE CHICAGO BANKER.

ONE spelled Walter S. Rearick's name "Rarick" and the other told how President John D. Phillips laid down the "gravel," meaning gavel.

THE only way Mr. Phillips laid down any gravel was in paving the way for harmony and efficiency in the association.

PART of the "laying down" was done in executive session of the council and we dash tell. B. F. Harris was in at the corner stone laying also. Here's hoping they find the man they want.

AMONG the late arrivals on the Boston special are John Perrin of the currency commission, Los Angeles, and the clearing house examiner of that city, John W. Wilson.

KELSEY S. CHASE, superintendent of banking in Minnesota, was another of the late ones. So was ex-President Charles Shade of the Iowa Bankers Association.

ENID DAILY EAGLE has started a boom for Secretary W. B. Harrison for governor of the state. He'd be a dandy secretary for Illinois. So would P. W. Hall of Iowa.

MISS WOODRUFF, of Joliet, at school in the East, hopes to join her brothers on the way to Boston at Albany.

SECRETARY W. B. HARRISON of Oklahoma was in Chicago with the Southwest Boston special, starting from Kansas City.

SO was Gordon Jones of Denver and a lot of other good fellows.

SECRETARY J. E. PLATT of South Dakota will take the place of Secretary F. H. Colburn of California at the Boston meeting of the secretaries' section, responding to the address of welcome.

ROSS H. WALLACE, secretary of the Union Trust Company, Indianapolis, Ind., was in Chicago this week. He trains with the younger crowd in the state organization, of which John Frenzel is a shining light.

S. E. BRADT of De Kalb, Ill., was on the Detroit program at the good roads congress. W. G. Edens presided at the session held in the name of the American Bankers Association.

EDITOR DE PUY of the Northwestern Banker was in Chicago this week en route to Boston via Philadelphia.

SPEAKING of Philadelphia makes us so very, very sorry. We had been thinking of going to Boston to yell for Law when it was learned that Philadelphia had had the office twice and one of the times the president was an officer of Mr. Law's bank.

THE time for a second helping of pie for the big Philadelphia First National hasn't come around (with most of us) until a few other banks have been distinguished by holding the honor.

NO more has Philadelphia any distinct "yell" coming for the office a third time when a score of rival cities haven't had it at all.

ARTHUR REYNOLDS, president of the Des Moines National Bank, who has been a very faithful and ardent worker in every position he has occupied in the American Bankers Association, will without doubt receive the highest honor the association has to offer by being elected president this year. The reward will be well deserved. Mr. Reynolds is a student of financial affairs, in addition to being a most successful banker. On monetary questions there is probably no one in the country better posted than he. The association is entering upon an era of co-operation and construction with the farmer and business man and it will need the guiding hand of a man well versed in its affairs, such as Mr. Reynolds. —Northwestern Banker.

SOME more late comers (on the train) are E. M. Scott of Cedar Rapids, Ia., T. L. Carroll, Gothenburg, Neb., and N. T. Banfield Austin, Minn.

ARTHUR D. SIMMONS and wife of Osceola, Iowa, captured one of the finest cancellations that fell in the basket.

THE CHICAGO SAVINGS continues its list of fine oil paintings, done to order, and then reduced and reproduced in colors on the monthly calendars sent out.

OCTOBER issue shows the fine Harper Memorial Library at the University of Chicago. The view point and the color work are splendid.

F. R. BABCOCK has succeeded John H. Jones, resigned, in the presidency of the Federal National, Pittsburgh.

CAN it be that that great banking and financial journal—Pittsburgh "Money"—has overlooked the efforts of H. J. Haas of Philadelphia to elevate one of his fellow citizens to the vice-presidency of the A. B. A. at Boston?

OR, can it be that "Money" thinks no bank should have the office twice until a few Pittsburgh banks have had the honor? Must be!

FUNNY that the "home paper" should be so careless of the interest of a "favorite son."

THE nearest thing to a mention of the "Philadelphia Plan" in the last issue was a timid little notice about a moving picture show.

"COMMERCIAL WEST says: "The bankers of the West present Joseph Chapman, of Minneapolis, for vice-president of the American Bankers Association, and expect to see him elected to that office at the Boston convention. Mr. Chapman is ready, as always, to give his best services; but he is too busy boosting better farming and practical education to campaign for any office."

SPONDYLOTHERAPY is a sort of mental X-Ray by which those county cashiers in Missouri (Keyser please note) can read the thoughts of the man with the phony check. What a lot of trouble it will save the little dean of the secretaries.

N. E. FRANKLIN of Deadwood, and J. C. Bassett of Aberdeen, S. D., went to Boston by way of the senate committee rooms in Washington. They were to testify on currency matters.

SECRETARY F. R. FENTON of the Investment Bankers Association, 111 West Monroe street, Chicago, is sending out the invitations for their 1913 convention to be held at the Blackstone hotel October 28th, 29th and 30th. It will be a hummer.

NOTHING slow about the Boston business men. They are sending notices to bankers having hotel reservations that charge accounts have been opened in their names—bills to follow at end of month.

PRESIDENT WILLIAM A. HEATH of the Chicago Bankers Club, has received notice that Carter Glass' speaking engagements are being cancelled to avoid a nervous break-down.

CHAIRMAN GLASS has been on the job for eleven months, which has put his health in jeopardy.

HIS doctor says he must get rest or collapse. He has cancelled his dates in Boston, New York, Chicago and elsewhere.

NOW it is up to President Heath of the club to dig up a star for the opening night. He is taking a dark lantern and a pair of hoppers along to Boston. Help him if you can think of anything good.

EN'S Association at Green Gay in time to kick his grip and catch the big Boston special.

SECRETARY P. W. HALL, of Iowa, one of the top nothers, has sent out his 1913 proceedings book in green and gold, the binding being in fine cloth.

THE Des Moines convention was such a hummer this year that the report assumes an important look of a library volume.

E. L. GURNEY of Nebraska, long time prominent figure in A. B. A. circles, was a little late in deciding to go to Boston, but with his usual good luck picked up a fine "cancellation," right in the middle of a car.

LUCK brought W. L. McKee of Chicago and Casper Rowe of Cincinnati, both ninth hour reservations, together in a compartment.

D. R. FORGAN has had his address of welcome—a little gem—delivered at the Chicago convention of the Illinois bankers, printed in neat folder form.

ANY country banker headed for Chicago should read it for he then will know how much he is appreciated at this reserve center.

LISTEN! The establishment of its own protective department has changed the annual deficit of the A. B. A. budget to a balance. "Burns, he done it."

CHAPTER men will kindly note the size of the bouquet thrown in their box by Acting President Arthur Reynolds in his address opening the Boston convention. You must stand pretty well with him.

NO fear need be felt that you will not fare well under the new constitution with such a friend at court. (This is for Franklin Johnson down by the big bridge.)

THE agricultural and educational protégé of the association fathered by Joseph Chapman (B. F. Harris, successor in trust) will stick out its chest when it hears what Mr. Reynolds thinks of it.

THE real words are a secret as yet, but it's the biggest boost ever passed along by such high authority.

LATER, on Chicago Bankers Club opening meeting, President Abram W. Harris of Northwestern University will speak, but "NOT on the currency." Dr. Harris is one of the cleverest of after-dinner entertainers.

HERE are a few gems from Secretary Bryan's address to the junior bankers at Baltimore. Andrew Jay Frame will be glad to get them verbatim.

"WE have had for two generations legislation on banking systems, but they have been almost universally framed in favor of the bankers."

"I BELIEVE the creation of the regional bank is a step in the right direction—a step well in advance. The Owen-Glass bill was not drafted with the idea of centralization. There has been too much centralization. There has been too much Wall Street."

"I BELIEVE the provision allowing banks to raise money not only on government bonds but on commercial security is a great blessing."

THIS is how the chapter boys received the Great Commoner:

"TUMULTUOUS, repeated and prolonged applause swept the great audience which thronged the auditorium when William Jennings Bryan, secretary of state, entered the hall leaning upon the arm of Governor Mann."

THIS was Bryan's concluding sentence:

"IN conclusion, I congratulate the great state of Virginia in having given birth to a president who is for once heartily in accord with congress and to one who has at heart the revision and reformation of our currency system."

Expecting to receive a fair compensation for its services, and without pretense of giving something for nothing,

The Responsibilities of a Bank Director

W. H. Bucholz, vice-president of the Omaha National, addresses Nebraska bankers at group meetings, pointing out some of the problems which confront the average bank director and calls attention to the qualifications necessary to discharge the duties of such an office successfully

The national banking law requires certain qualifications of a director and among other things requires him to take an oath of office, which reads in part as follows, and is most important:

"So far as the duty devolves on him, he will diligently and honestly administer the affairs of such association. That he will not 'knowingly violate' or willingly permit to be violated any of the provisions of the national banking law," etc.

This oath is subscribed in many cases—I might say, in most cases—without a full realization of its importance and its possible application later on, should occasion make it necessary to refer to it.

It has been held by the supreme court of this state that it must be proven, in order to hold the director personally responsible, that he had knowledge of any fraud or deceit complained of. Under this decision, and similar decisions elsewhere, if a director does not inform himself as to the condition of the bank, and graces the office in a more or less ornamental capacity, he really assumes no responsibility, although he has loaned his name to the institution, presumably derives a profit from his investment in its stock, and holds himself out to the public as the director of a bank in which he invites the people to have confidence.

In national banks it is now required that three-fourths of the directors be residents of the state in which the bank is located. Also they must be residents in the neighborhood so that they may know the trustworthiness of those who are to be appointed officers of the bank, and in order that they may be familiar with the character and financial strength of the proposed borrower.

The effort of the comptroller has been to make the director realize his responsibility and to place him in a position to have knowledge, so that he may be held liable, if he fails to perform his duty.

This, without doubt, was the purpose of Comptroller Murray's much discussed twenty-seven questions, which he sent to all national banks and to which he required answers by the directors. This action at first brought a good deal of criticism and many objections. These have since, for the most part, been silenced. But criticism or no criticism, he had the courage to insist upon replies to these questions. It was an honest and well considered effort to charge the board of directors with knowledge of the affairs of the institution with which they were connected so that the plea of ignorance could no longer be made.

In still another case the supreme court of the United States has decided that where certain assets of the bank are declared by the examiner to be bad, and the comptroller orders these charged off, that if such order is disregarded, thus showing a false condition of the bank, a subsequent purchaser of stock, relying upon the published statement of the bank, may recover from the directors any damages sustained if the capital is later found to be impaired.

The control of a bank is placed in the hands of the board of directors by the stockholders. It is well to note, however, that directors are not individual agents of the corporation. The only powers conferred on them are vested in them while acting as a board. The assent of a majority of the individual members is not the assent of the bank and is not binding upon the corporation. It is necessary for them to act as a body and when convened as a board.

Objection by an individual member to any action of the board will only release him from liability when such objection is noted in the minutes and the comptroller of the currency notified.

The director is liable for attesting a false statement. Yet how many directors, under the present practice, know whether the statement which they are attesting is really true or false?

Directors are not expected to know all about the details of the bank's business. These may, with propriety and according to custom, be committed to the officers selected by them, but they can not escape the responsibility of supervision. They can not rest content in the belief that their full duty is discharged by the selection of officers in whose integrity and ability they have faith.

I believe a course of instruction to directors by the comptroller of the currency and the state banking department, fully informing them of the responsibilities assumed and the liabilities incurred, followed by such regulations as would compel at least a general knowledge of the affairs of the bank entrusted to their charge, would do much to establish the true relation of a director, locate definite responsibility and fix liability for any neglect. You would then be apt to get good supervision and that real assistance and co-operation needed by the bank official from his director which would be of service in preventing post mortem inquiries.

Each national bank examiner is now required to bring the board of directors together in conference after an examination and to discuss with them the condition of the bank. He must obtain from them a signed statement, certifying that to the best of their knowledge and belief they regard the signatures to notes genuine; that such notes are worth at least the value at which they are carried on the books. He exacts a promise that whatever action may be necessary to correct matters requiring special attention will be taken. If losses are admitted, the examiner must see that they are charged off by the order of the directors, and must generally confer with them in regard to the management of the bank in order that in all matters, wherever necessary, the condition of the bank may be improved.

There must and should be co-operation between the bank examiner and the directors. With a full realization of the responsibilities resting upon him, a director should welcome an opportunity of conferring with a capable examiner who has just examined the institution with which he is connected. The interests of both are identical and both desire a clean, well conducted, and well administered institution.

But lest we forget, let me remind you that we can not expect reward without merit. It is well to have good laws; it is desirable to have qualified, efficient examiners; it is most helpful to have responsible and vigilant directors; but it is absolutely necessary to have men of trained ability, and, most important of all, men of character, as active bank officials.

The banker should be a lender on good paper; as large a portion as possible of this should be inherently liquid. He should depend on interest, exchange, and commissions for his profit, avoiding all speculations, so that he may stand as an example of the steady and constant accumulator and as the guide in a wise economy. In the conduct of business he can not defy the lessons of experience and must therefore shun innovations and stick well to the ancient landmarks of correct practice.

He may safely be progressive, but this does not mean that he must seek out of the way and improper par channels at the expense of an indulgent and perhaps temporarily over-ambitious correspondent, because he may have occasion to draw on his correspondent's good will for matters of greater importance.

He should keep fully abreast of the times, but to do this it is not necessary that he should own several automobiles, or possibly assist in conducting a selling agency for that modern extravagance, nor that he should join in any extreme movement for the acquisition of land in other states or in Canada, because local development is more desirable, even though it may temporarily be less profitable, and because an investment in school and municipal bonds and farm mortgages for his customers' surplus money is a much surer reliance in the long run.

He may supply the legitimate and proper loan needs of his customers, but he may do this, if he is well equipped by education and training, as their banker, without continually straining his own or his bank's credit by regularly borrowing money throughout the entire year to be reloaned perhaps to an unduly expanded optimist.

Banking is not a hit and miss business—it is almost an exact science. Its fundamental principles demand obedience and this demand is as inexorable as were the laws of the Medes and Persians. The banker has a position of trust and if he would wear the laurel wreath of final success he must be faithful to that trust and ever unswerving in his fidelity.

A Book for Banks

Railway equipment obligations, because of their fundamental soundness, have become a very popular form of investment for banks. They combine in a high degree the three requisites of a good investment—security, marketability and liberal income.

We have prepared a comprehensive book which describes the equipment issues of the principal railroads, and will be pleased to send a copy to any bank or banker on request.

FOUR STATES BUILD ROAD

For the purpose of building 150 miles of improved automobile roads, connecting more than 400 towns and 5,000,000 people, the Ozark Trails Association was organized at Montene, Ark., by 300 delegates from Arkansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Kansas.

The association plans to raise $5,000 annually through dues paid by members. This will be used in the promotion of good roads and their upkeep after they are built. The association will not contribute financially to the actual building of the roads, but will offer $2,000 in prizes yearly for the best pieces of road built.

The territory to be embraced by the association consists of from ten to twelve divisions, each division having a road to be marked every half mile with a white marker bearing the words "Ozark Trails." The route runs as far north as St. Louis, west as far as Oklahoma City, Kansas City and Wichita, Kan., south as far as Rogers and east at Montene.

NEW YORK STATE BANKERS CONFERENCE

The New York State Bankers Association has appointed a committee to determine upon a place for holding next year's annual convention. The committee consists of L. W. Henry, secretary of the association. Among the places mentioned are Syracuse, Lake Placid, Atlantic City and New York City. The city of Syracuse has extended an invitation to hold the convention there.

The special is due to reach Boston to-day (Saturday) at four o'clock. The bankers were in Chicago Wednesday from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m. Stops were made at Niagara Falls, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal; from there on the trip was made to Boston by daylight without stop through Vermont and New Hampshire.

Those on the train included the following: W. J. Bailey and wife, Atchison; P. W. Goebel and wife, Kansas City, Kan.; C. G. Hutcheson and wife, Kansas City, Mo.; W. W. Bowman and wife, Topeka; Asa E. Ramsey, Muskogee, Okla.; W. B. Harrison and wife, Enid, Okla., and J. D. M. Crockett, Kansas City, Mo.

WILSON MAY EXPLAIN CURRENCY BILL

Reports from Washington this week indicate that President Wilson is desirous of going before the people and explaining some of the features of his currency bill. The President has firmly set his mind upon passing currency legislation at this session and is of the opinion that his plans will be expedited by appealing to those who create public sentiment.

The President thus far has shown remarkable ability in the work which he has undertaken, evidencing a thorough comprehension of the difficult problems with which he has been confronted and a persistency which accomplishes whatever he sets out to do.

PLAN NATIONAL THRIFT CLUB

S. W. Straus, the well-known Chicago banker, recently has visited a number of cities in the middle and western states in the interest of a national thrift organization with branches in the principal cities of the country.

The Chicago financier is of the opinion that the prosperity of the United States during the last few years has caused the people to become reckless and thousands of them are not saving. "Much of the expenditures is for luxuries," said Mr. Straus, who believes that Americans should follow the example of the French, who are very thrifty.

PLAN FOR ILLINOIS CORN DAY

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 30.—"Corn day" in the public schools of Illinois will be celebrated more extensively next month than ever before, in the opinion of Francis G. Blair, state superintendent of public instruction, who is preparing an illustrated circular to be sent to every school superintendent and principal in the state.

This will offer suggestions for the observation of the day, give a sample program for school exercise and contain information on selecting and testing seed corn, planting and cultivation, and on getting rid of pests that damage the crop.

While the boys are competing for prizes and making displays of their corn the girls will show samples of their sewing and other handiwork. Special efforts will be made to interest the girls in poultry, fruit and flowers.

ANGUSTUS D. SHEPARD DEAD

Augustus Dennis Shepard, former president of the American Banknote Company and one of its founders, died Monday at Fanwood, N. J., after a short illness. Mr. Shepard was 78 years old and had been retired from business for eight years.

Mr. Shepard was a prominent figure in the banknote printing trade for over forty years. He effected the merger in 1879 of the old National Banknote Company and the American.

INDIANA'S NEW COUNCIL MEMBER

At a meeting of the A. B. A. members in Indiana at the Indianapolis convention last week, Earl S. Gwin, former president of the State Bankers Association, was elected a member of the executive council. C. L. Balthis of New Albany was elected vice-president for the state and A. G. Lupton of Hartford City selected to serve on the nominating committee.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS UP

Chicago bank clearings for September were $1,308,471,747, which is an increase of $101,819,914 over the corresponding month last year, or 8.43 per cent. In the previous months of the year, with the exception of January, the increases have been below $100,000,000 and as low as $11,701,905 in May. September clearings, therefore, made relatively the best showing since last January.

HARD TO GET A CHARTER IN KANSAS

Records of the Kansas bank commissioner's office show that out of twenty applications for charters for banks filed with the state charter board in the past six months but five have been granted. Recognizing the theory that a bank is a reservoir and not a creator of wealth the state law has specifically limited the ability of the state charter board in issuing bank charters. The board must carefully investigate the local requirements and it is more often that a charter is refused because an additional bank might disturb business conditions and weaken local credits than because the proposed financial backing for the institution is not altogether satisfactory. Kansas now has 929 state banks and 211 national banks.

"BILL RAISER" GETS PRISON TERM

Robert H. Davis, said by government authorities to be the best "bill raiser" in the United States, was given ten years on each of four counts by Judge Dyer in the United States district court at St. Louis Monday, after a plea of guilty to having raised $5 bills to $20 and $50 bills. The sentence for each count is to run concurrently.

Davis was arrested in St. Louis July 11th and had a $20 bill in his possession which was found to have been raised from $5. He laughingly said he did not know he had it. Later he was recognized by Steven A. Connell, in charge of the United States secret service department at St. Louis, as a former convict at the Leavenworth federal prison. He admitted his identity and confessed that he had raised bills.

Many of the bills were found in Illinois and in St. Louis. So accurately had the raise been made that in some cases they were not detected even by bank examiners and were first caught after reaching the subtreasury office.

UNABLE TO REALIZE ON JUDGMENT

It was learned this week that the depositors of the defunct Carnegie Trust Company will in no way be benefited by the judgment for $406,414 secured against the Merchants and Manufacturers Securities Company. The Securities Company is virtually without assets and the state banking authorities have no hopes of collecting the claim.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The past and present of Illinois history were linked together recently in a beautiful way when two members of the Funk family of Bloomington, large farmers and bankers of McLean county, attempted to find the "old trail" leading from Bloomington to Joliet. Jacob Funk, president of the State National, and LaFayette Funk, director of the State National of Bloomington, "two of the ancient Illini—members of that fast disappearing band to which Lincoln, Douglas and Grant belonged," traveled in an automobile on the old road over which they were driven cattle from McLean county to Chicago before the Civil War. The spot where they delivered their cattle and hogs was the old "Bull Head" market where Ogden Avenue now meets Washington Boulevard. While they fancied that clumps of trees looked familiar yet they could see little that was remembered. However, the old Archer road, thirty miles from the city hall of Chicago, now winds around as it did in 1855, and this was recalled by the aged brothers. Some of the houses on this old road were recalled.

It was in 1855, fifty-eight years ago, that Jacob and LaFayette Funk drove their last herd of stock into Chicago, which community they had known earlier as a small town. In the intervening years they have often talked of the old trail but they had never attempted to find it. They searched for the old tavern in Joliet, where they used to stay all night, but it too had disappeared. Railroad journeys and this automobile trip had taken them into Chicago since the old days of horseback riding following contrary cattle and hogs.

Jacob and LaFayette Funk, with A. B. Funk, president of the First National of Bloomington, are the three surviving brothers of the late Issac Funk, pioneer settler in the backwoods of McLean county and who purchased a wealth of Illinois real estate to give to his children and grandchildren. Isaac Funk was a large stock feeder and his sons were early trained to the farm. They have been farmers and bankers for three generations. The deceased sons are George W., Francis M., Benjamin F., Isaac and Duncan M., and a deceased daughter, Mrs. L. H. Kerrick. The Funk name has been so large in Illinois affairs that many bankers reading these lines will recall knowing many members of the family.

Kansas Banker Proud of State

"Hard luck" stories of Kansas crop failures mean nothing to C. F. Pettyjohn, investment banker of Olathe, Kans. According to Mr. Pettyjohn the Garden of Eden was located in Kansas and the apple tree stood in Olathe. Mr. Pettyjohn and wife went by automobile from their home to Peoria, where they visited with G. F. Carson, the Illinois representative of the Pettyjohn investment banking house. "The farther I rode through Kansas the prouder I am that I live there," is the statement of the Olathe banker, who is said "to be an ardent soul filled with Kansas enthusiasm which of itself is an inspiration." Mr. Pettyjohn is a regular reader of THE CHICAGO BANKER.

S. C. Eells, Elk at Ninety

The death of Samuel C. Eells, one of the grand old men of the banking business in Illinois, which occurred at his home in Dixon last week and mentioned in last week's issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER, brings to mind the fact that Mr. Eells was initiated into the Elks lodge at the age of about ninety years, making him one of the oldest, if not the oldest, Elk ever initiated. Mr. Eells, president of the City National of Dixon, was initiated into the Elks lodge only a year or two ago.

He was born in Walton, N. Y., in 1822 and came to Dixon in 1854, becoming bookkeeper for the private banking firm of Robertson, Eastman and Company. The next year he became a member of the private banking firm of Robertson, Eells and Company and in 1865 they organized the Lee County Bank which since 1885 has been known as the City National. Mr. Eells was cashier for many years and since 1891 the president. He leaves an estate of $500,000. Business was suspended in Dixon while the venerable banker of ninety-two was buried. He had a wide acquaintance, and many bankers keenly regret to learn of his passing.

First of Elgin in New Home

The new banking home of the First National of Elgin is attracting wide attention from visitors and it ranks with the many new modern banking offices which have been recently installed in Illinois. The new bank faces the principal street intersections of the city caused by the junction of Grove avenue, Douglas avenue and Chicago street, and near the same corner are located the Union National, Elgin National and the Home National. The new building is in keeping with the growing business interests of Elgin, one of the best cities in northern Illinois, and the bank with capital of $200,000 and surplus of $100,000 and with deposits of about one million dollars faces a bright future. A longer description of this new bank will appear later in THE CHICAGO BANKER.

Elgin is perhaps known throughout the world better than most Illinois cities, as the dairy interests and the watch manufacturing interests centering there are known throughout the business world. Elgin butter and Elgin watches are household words everywhere. The city has many other diversified business interests with various manufacturing establishments, the Northern Illinois Hospital for the insane and large religious printing and supply houses. The community has very attractive residential qualities, as the Fox river bisects the city and the entire Fox river valley north and south of Elgin is one of the beauty spots of Illinois.

Marriages of Bankers

William McFerren, vice-president of the First National of Hoopeston and a son of J. S. McFerren, the well known banker, canner and farmer of that city, was married September 20th to Miss Marjorie Wells of Norwalk, Conn. The young people went to Pacific coast points on their honeymoon and will be at home in Hoopeston in a new modern home which the groom is now erecting.

L. A. McAlpine, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Marinette, Wis., was married September 9th to Miss Mabel Young of Farmer City, Ill. Colorado points of interest were visited by Mr. and Mrs. McAlpine after which a month will be spent in the summer home of the groom. Mr. McAlpine has been in the banking business in Marinette for twenty-five years, having been with the Stephenson National before taking his present position.

New Bank at Normal

State Auditor Brady has issued a permit for the incorporation of the Normal State Bank of Normal, McLean county. Normal, a residential and educational town adjacent to Bloomington, is having a substantial growth and many new people are moving to that city. Normal is the seat of the Illinois State Normal University, the oldest of the state's chain of normal training schools for teachers, and many bankers attended this institution before taking up banking. Normal has been known as a large nursery center and one of the most important centers of the horse trade in Illinois. The permit, calling for a capital stock of $50,000, was issued to James Hinthorn, F. M. Moats and H. W. Pierce of Normal and J. F. Shepard of El Paso.

B. F. Harris Contributes Article

B. F. Harris, vice-president of the First National of Champaign and chairman of the committee of the Illinois Bankers Association on agriculture and vocational education, is a contributor to the "Illinois Agriculturist," the student agricultural journal of the University of Illinois. His article, appearing in the first issue of the present university year, is entitled "The Banker-Farmer." Mr. Harris writes especially of the report which he made at the recent Kansas City conference of the various state committees on agriculture and vocational education.

Mr. Harris has promised to become a regular contributor to the Illinois Agriculturist and this journal, read by agricultural students in the university and by farmers over the state, will explain to many what the bankers of the various states are trying to do in their encouragement of scientific agriculture.

Illinois Notes

William Bernard, for a number of years with the Illinois National of Springfield, has resigned his position to assume the management of the Bernard Music Shop. Mr. Bernard has owned the music store since last spring, but has not given it his entire time, which he will now do.

A large tract of fine farm land, the last piece of real estate belonging to the estate of the late Charles Ridgely, a member of the well-known Ridgely banking family of Springfield, and for many years president of the Ridgely National, was sold October 1st. The land is located near Auburn and comprises fifteen hundred acres.

Samuel W. Allerton, a director of the First National of Chicago and one of the large owners of real estate in Piatt, Vermilion and other counties in the Illinois corn belt, has offered to give to the town of Allerton, near which he owns much valuable farming land, the use of his large water tanks so that the village can have water-works. Mr. Allerton will maintain the tanks and keep them filled at his own expense if the village will lay the water mains. Mr. Allerton is president of the State Bank of Allerton.

Macon county is anxious to have a county soil expert and the James Millikin University in that city is co-operating with the United States government in securing the services of one trained to do the work.

LaSalle county, which was the first county in Illinois to take advantage of the Tice law for highway improvement, has voted $35,000 for good roads work. This county will also be ready to receive additional aid when funds forfeited by other counties are re-allotted next February. LaSalle county bankers and citizens in general have been hard at work upon the good roads topic since the pioneer days of good roads talk.

As an object lesson in the value of old-fashioned thrift it may be noted that 434 students of the Rockford high school earned $22,736 during the summer. The work varied from carrying the hod to office work and included all kinds of "summer jobs" for boys and girls. Principal C. P. Briggs of that school has compiled careful statistics showing the value of this work. The principal of the high school at Geneseo, in a recent communication to the Chicago Record-Herald, outlined the work and earnings which his students had done in the summer. School authorities have the hearty support of all broad-minded bankers in encouraging thrift among public school pupils.

A. N. Johnson, whom bankers favoring good roads have heard speak on different occasions and who is state highway engineer of Illinois, has been honored by being named non-resident lecturer in engineering and road construction in Columbia University, New York City. He held a similar appointment last year.

Joliet, Aurora and Streator are three Illinois cities where wholesale forging has been carried on recently. In Joliet the pay checks of the Chicago and Joliet Street Car Company have been skillfully duplicated, while various other schemes have been used. The police of these cities especially have been active in stamping out the nuisance.

I. E. Merritt and Mark R. Koplin, president and cashier of the Hoopeston National, who have recently established a private bank at Wellington, near Hoopeston, following the failure of the bank of Alexander Pate, announce that they will erect at once a neat bank building of the village type which will be very modern and complete in every detail. The confidence of Wellington people in Messrs. Merritt and Koplin has been strengthened by the announcement and a bright future faces the new bank. Murray F. Merritt, son of I. E. Merritt and cashier of the new bank, has just been married to Miss Grace Scofield of Hoopeston.

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

The itinerary, consuming two weeks, includes Pittsburgh, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Montreal, Quebec, Toronto, Niagara Falls, Buffalo and Detroit, stopovers of varying lengths being made at each of the above named places. Institute Lecturer Appointed Ambassador

Paul S. Reinsch, United States ambassador-elect to China, was guest of honor at a banquet of one hundred members of the Milwaukee Chapter of the American Institute of Banking in the Hotel Pfister last week. Annually for ten years Prof. Reinsch has addressed the chapter and for eight years has been an honorary member of it.

"The nation is just beginning to realize how much currency laws and banking legislation mean in our everyday life," said Prof. Reinsch. "A closer association of the government with the bankers of America will have a salutary effect upon all our commercial life. Co-operation is the keynote of the new national life. Politics should be the handmaiden of business prosperity and this co-operation will finally relieve the banker of the nerve-racking, heart-breaking fear of a business panic." Other speakers included Mayor Bading, Gilbert E. Seaman, regent of the state university; John Gregory, of the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin, and Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association. Dr. Reinsch left for Washington on Saturday and will sail for China on October 7th, going by way of the continent and Siberia.

Dreher Institute Head

Officers and employees of Milwaukee banking houses are elated over recognition given this city's institutions through the election of H. J. Dreher, assistant cashier of the bond department of the Marshall & Ilsley bank as president of the American Institute of Banking. The contest for the office was a spirited one and Mr. Dreher was opposed by men identified with some of the most powerful eastern institutions. The new national president has been connected with the Marshall & Ilsley Bank for ten years and has been active in civic as well as financial affairs. He is treasurer of the City Club, University Settlement, Wisconsin Home and Farm, School for Boys, and St. James church. It is the first time a Milwaukeean has been elected head of the organization.

New Insurance Company to Open for Business

The Bankers Mutual Casualty Company, organized under the auspices of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, will be ready for business on November 1st. There are already 250 applications for policies. In all 400 banks of the state are expected to take insurance in the new company.

Former Milwaukee Banker Dead

C. F. P. Pullen, former Milwaukee banker, died on Saturday at the Riverside sanatorium as the result of a stroke of apoplexy suffered two weeks ago. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon, interment being at Evansville, Wis., Mr. Pullen's former home. He was the son of the late L. T. Pullen, Evansville merchant and banker. When the German-American Bank was organized in Milwaukee in the early nineties, Mr. Pullen resigned his position as postmaster at Evansville to become cashier of the new institution, a position which he held up to two years ago, when ill health compelled his resignation. He was public debt commissioner for many years. He is survived by his wife, a son, L. W. Pullen, Kansas City, and a daughter, Mrs. Pauline Roberston, Des Moines, Iowa. A brother, G. L. Pullen, is a banker in Evansville, and a sister, Mrs. William Antes, lives in Des Moines.

Purchase Bank Building

The Christian Schroeder & Sons Company have purchased the building at East Water and Michigan streets, formerly occupied by the Milwaukee National Bank and the Milwaukee Clearing House Association. The building was erected by the old State Bank of Milwaukee, the predecessor of the Milwaukee National, which was in turn recently consolidated with the First National. The bank vaults and furnishings are included in the purchase and will be used by the real estate firm, which intends to make the building its headquarters.

Held on Request of Bank

D. Watson Crombarger, insurance agent and real estate dealer, who has been astonishing Milwaukee with a flamboyant advertising campaign since his entering business here six months ago, is held by the police on a warrant issued at the request of the First National Bank, charging the issuance of false securities to secure a loan of $4,500. The specific instance cited in the charge is the raising of one share of stock of the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank of Milwaukee to represent eighty shares.

Wisconsin Notes

The annual report of the Chicago & Northwestern road, issued this week, shows a surplus of $3,775,407.72 after paying an 8 per cent dividend on its preferred stock and 7 per cent on common stock.

All of the old directors of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road, J. Ogden Armour and Stanley Field, Chicago; L. J. Petit, Milwaukee, and P. A. Rockefeller, New York, were re-elected at the directors' meeting in Milwaukee last week. All officers of the road were also re-elected. Commenting on Milwaukee's development in recent years, President A. J. Earling characterized the city as "the natural gateway to the great Northwest and destined to become the commercial capital of a territory rich beyond the power of the mind to imagine."

I. Everson, for seven years general manager of the Fox Lake State Bank, died last Saturday night at his home following an operation for appendicitis. Funeral services were held on Tuesday. He is survived by his wife and daughter, Mrs. A. W. Schroeder of Madison.

Major D. W. Cheney, for many years president of the Bank of Sparta and reputed to be the wealthiest man in Monroe county, died suddenly of apoplexy at his home last Saturday night. Funeral services were held Tuesday. Mr. Cheney was born in Black River Falls, Wis., in 1859 and went to Sparta with his parents when a child. He became prominent in public affairs early in life, was mayor of his city for several terms and served in the state legislature. He was postmaster during Cleveland's administration and was for many years the publisher of the Monroe County Democrat, but gave up his interest in the newspaper to become the principal stockholder in the bank. He is survived by one son, three daughters, and a sister.

The Bagley State Bank has increased its capital from $5,000 to $10,000. The Bagley bank was one of the few that remained outside the requirement of the state banking law of 1903 as amended in 1907, which provided that thereafter no bank should be permitted with a capital of less than $10,000 except such as were shown to have deposits not to exceed ten times the amount of the capital stock during any six months and that whenever the deposits exceeded that amount it would be necessary to increase the capital to the required amount.

The Salem State Bank has organized with $12,000 capital.

KANSAS CITY WILL NOT NEED CROP FUNDS

Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House Association, has announced that no application will be made for an allotment of the money set aside by the government for aid in moving the crops. The Fidelity Trust has received official notice of its designation by the secretary of the treasury as custodian of securities which local national banks were to put up if they expected to avail themselves of the offer.

"The wheat crop has been moved and about all the cattle that will be shipped have been marketed," Mr. Thralls said, "There only remains the corn crop, which is very light. The chances are that there will be plenty of funds on hand here to do what little crop moving is to be done." Some of the bankers said there was so much red tape to the government's offer that in order to comply with the requirements an extra staff of clerical help would have to be hired. Generally, it was stated, there would no application for additional funds this year.

"The crop losses all over the Kansas City banking territory make the problem an easy one to handle this fall," Alfred D. Rider, secretary of the Fidelity Trust Company, said: "There is a strong probability no applications will be made here, although I understand several have been forwarded to Washington from St. Louis."

PROFESSOR PRAISES MONEY BILL

Prof. Jeremiah W. Jenks, the currency expert, said at the opening of the New York University's School of Commerce and Finance in Cooper Union that the currency bill is, in his belief, "the best law possible now," and that it would be improved as fast as the public could be shown what was best.

"If business men took pains to study more carefully the principles and methods of political action," he said, "we should not have such unfortunate controversies as we have lately witnessed.

"The bankers have assumed that congress is acting from partisan rather than from patriotic motives and wilfully ignoring the advice of the experienced and trained experts. Some congressmen have assumed that bankers are wholly selfish and unpatriotic, but nothing is so harmful to the banks as bad business. They want the law that will best promote public prosperity, and they in turn have not realized, as a better understanding of political methods would have shown them, that the congressmen do not always find it politically possible to get the ideal law.

"The congressmen have had the best expert advice. They will get the best law possible now and improve it as fast as their constituents can be shown what is best."

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

W. T. Cantrell, vice-president of the Bank of Everton, Ark., has announced that the shortage of the bank is now estimated at $21,000, which includes $10,000 worth of forged bank stock.

The directors have decided to apply for a receiver. Martin L. Korff, the cashier, has been held to the grand jury, charged with embezzlement.

Arkansas Bankers to Advertise

Five barrels of apples, donated by the farmers of northwest Arkansas, are to be given away as one of the features of the publicity bureau to be conducted in Boston during the session of the American Bankers Association, October 6-10. George W. Rogers, cashier of the Bank of Commerce, Little Rock, will have charge, with others, of the work, and expects great things from it. In a letter to Commissioner John H. Page he said:

"The bankers assure us that the apples to be given away in Boston by the Arkansas publicity bureau will excel in every way, shape and manner the far-famed apples that tempted Mrs. Adam. We also expect to give away as souvenirs in this great cotton manufacturing center, 2,500 open bolls of cotton, samples of Arkansas' wonderful mineral resources, to advertise the great health and pleasure resort of Hot Springs and other sections of the state. The railroads will co-operate and furnish us with a large amount of valuable Arkansas advertising matter."

Forrest City Bank Re-opened

The Bank of Forrest City, Forrest City, Ark., which suspended business and closed its doors here on Saturday August 2d, was re-opened September 19th, for the continuance of business under the management of the same officers and directors. Judge E. A. Rolfe is president; Eugene Williams, cashier, and Chas. Simmons, assistant cashier.

Arkansas Faces Deficit

At a recent conference between Governor Hays and a number of Little Rock bankers

plans were devised for a call to the financial interests of the state in the interests of the general revenue fund. It has been the plan of Governor Hays for some time to present this matter to the Arkansas bankers and ask their co-operation in relieving the deficit of the general revenue. It is estimated by Governor Hays that at least $250,000 will be required to run the state's general expenditures between this and the time for the collection of the next state taxes. Governor Hays' idea is to secure advances from the banks over the state, including the banks of the smaller cities, at a nominal rate of interest, this loan to be repaid when the taxes come in. A call for a general conference of the banking interests of the state for October 13th has been issued to decide on definite plans for revenue and to see just what the banks are willing to do for the state.

The financing of the cattle industry is becoming a question of increasing importance to the bankers of the great corn belt.

Our experience of more than thirty years, our assets of more than six million dollars, and our location at one of the largest markets in the United States especially equips us for satisfactorily handling the accounts of those interested in the proposition.

Banks to Aid Farmers

The Kansas City Clearing House Association is taking up the question of Kansas City banks subscribing to the fund to purchase seed wheat for the farmers in the ten counties in western Kansas that suffered a total crop failure because of the drought. All the Kansas City banks have received letters from Charles Sawyer, bank commissioner of Kansas, who is custodian of the funds. The fund is to be lent to the farmers at 8 per cent interest, to be paid when they harvest their next crop of wheat.

"The bankers of Kansas City feel that they should participate in making the fund," said John W. Moore, vice-president of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce. "Western Kansas is Kansas City territory. We are a part of Kansas in a business way and should help the farmers over the rough spots."

SCHOOL SAVINGS SYSTEMS

Experience has shown that the inauguration of savings bank systems in the public schools has proven to be successful. The idea is not new by any means and such systems are in operation in the schools of a number of cities. The primary principle underlying such a plan is to teach the pupil to save. It is believed that such a feature in the school work has a constructive influence on the child, and that, if taught early in life to save, the habit will in most instances remain.

The movement was started a number of years ago and remarkable results have been achieved. In many instances the weekly deposits from a single school run as high as $125.

COLONIAL TO PAY TWO PER CENT

The dividend on Colonial Trust and Savings Bank stock will be at the rate of 2 per cent quarterly on the increased capital stock, beginning January 1st. On the smaller capital the rate was 2½ per cent.

Regarding the dividend for the current quarter the bank issued the following statement:

"The capital stock of the Colonial Trust and Savings Bank having just been increased from $600,000 to $1,000,000, the directors have authorized a payment of the usual amount of $15,000 in dividends October 1, 1913, to stockholders of record September 25th. This is equivalent to 2½ per cent on the original capital stock."

RECORD DEPOSITS IN NEBRASKA

Lincoln, Neb., September 29.—The consolidated report of state banks compiled by the state banking board shows the highest amount of deposits ever before known in Nebraska state banks. The total is $94,194,166, or an increase of $6,603,716 over the previous quarterly report. The report is for the quarterly period ending August 26th. The total number of depositors is 290,370.

The number of banks reporting is 710, with an average reserve of 30 per cent. Loans have increased $7,834,000 since a year ago and deposits have increased $8,498,000; the number of banks have increased 25. Since May 20, 1913, loans have increased $1,489,151 and there are 10 more banks reporting. Notes and bills rediscounted and bills payable have been reduced $321,625 and the reserve has increased 3¾ per cent.

How Not to Start a Bank Account

When I go into a bank I get rattled. The clerks rattle me; the wickets rattle me; the sight of the money rattles me; everything rattles me.

The moment I cross the threshold of a bank and attempt to transact business there I become an irresponsible idiot.

I knew this beforehand, but my salary had been raised to $50 a month and I felt that the bank was the only place for it.

So I shambled in and looked timidly round at the clerks. I had an idea that a person about to open an account must needs consult the manager.

I went up to a wicket marked "Accountant." The accountant was a tall, cool devil. The very sight of him rattled me. My voice was sepulchral.

"Can I see the manager?" I said, and added solemnly, "alone." I don't know why I said "alone."

"Certainly," said the accountant, and fetched him.

The manager was a grave, calm man. I held my $56 clutched in a crumpled ball in my pocket.

"Are you the manager?" I said. God knows I didn't doubt it.

"Yes," he said.

"Can I see you," I asked, "alone?" I didn't want to say "alone" again, but without it the thing seemed self-evident.

The manager looked at me in some alarm. He felt that I had an awful secret to reveal.

"Come in here," he said, and led the way to a private room. He turned the key in the lock.

"We are safe from interruption here," he said; "sit down."

We both sat down and looked at each other. I found no voice to speak.

"You are one of Burns' men, I presume," he said.

He had gathered from my mysterious manner that I was a detective. I knew what he was thinking and it made me worse.

"No, not from Burns'," I said, seeming to imply that I came from a rival agency.

"To tell the truth," I went on, as if I had been prompted to lie about it, "I am not a detective at all. I have come to open an account. I intend to keep all my money in this bank."

The manager looked relieved, but still serious; he concluded now that I was a son of Baron Rothschild or a young Gould.

"A large amount, I suppose," he said.

"Fairly large," I whispered. "I propose to deposit $56 now and $50 a month regularly."

The manager got up and opened the door. He called to the accountant.

"Mr. Montgomery," he said unkindly loud, "this gentleman is opening an account; he will deposit $56. Good morning."

I rose.

A big iron door stood open at the side of the room.

"Good morning," I said, and stepped into the safe.

"Come out," said the manager coldly, and showed me the other way.

I went up to the accountant's wicket and poked the ball of money at him with a quick, convulsive movement, as if I were doing a conjuring trick.

My face was ghastly pale.

"Here," I said, "deposit it." The tone of the words seemed to mean, "let us do this painful thing while the fit is on us."

He took the money and gave it to another clerk.

He made me write the sum on a slip and sign my name in a book. I no longer knew what I was doing. The bank swam before my eyes.

"Is it deposited?" I asked in a hollow, vibrating voice.

"It is," said the accountant.

"Then I want to draw a check."

My idea was to draw out six dollars of it for present use. Some one gave me a check book through a wicket and some one else began telling me how to write it out. The people in the bank had the impression that I was an invalid millionaire. I wrote something on the check and thrust it at the clerk. He looked at it.

"What! are you drawing it all out again?" he asked in surprise. Then I realized that I had written fifty-six instead of six. I was too far gone to reason now. I had a feeling that it was impossible to explain the thing. All the clerks had stopped writing to look at me.

Reckless with misery, I made a plunge.

"Yes the whole thing."

"You withdraw your money from the bank?"

"Every cent of it."

"Are you not going to deposit any more?" said the clerk, astonished.

"Never."

An idiotic hope struck me that they might think something had insulted me while I was writing the check and that I had changed my mind. I made a wretched attempt to look like a man with a fearfully quick temper.

The clerk prepared to pay the money.

"How will you have it," he said.

"What?"

"How will you have it?"

"Oh"—I caught his meaning and answered without trying to think—"In fifties."

He gave me a $50 bill. "And the six?" he he asked dryly.

"In sixes," I said.

He gave it to me and I rushed out.

As the big door swung behind me I caught the echo of a roar of laughter that went up to the ceiling of the bank. Since then I bank no more. I keep my money in cash in my trousers pocket and my savings in silver dollars in a sock.

BANKER HOLDS RECEPTION IN JAIL

David B. Hampton, millionaire bank president of Winchester, Ky., who was sent to jail for contempt of court because he refused to answer grand jury questions as to whether he furnished money for use in recent elections, was visited in jail by a thousand people. Hampton is fined $30 each day, being produced in court each morning and asked if he has decided to answer. His reply each time is "No."

CHICAGO BANK DOUBLES CAPITAL

Stockholders of the American State Bank recently voted unanimously in approval of the proposed increase in the capital from $200,000 to $400,000. While all of the new stock will be sold to present stockholders, 40 per cent of it, or $80,000, will be pooled to resell at $175 a share to outside interests desirous of doing business with the bank. The terms on which the new stock will be issued and the profit from the $80,000 to be resold figure a dividend of about $75 a share on the present $200,000 capital. After the stock increase the bank will have a surplus of $100,000.

OFFICES NOT EQUITABLY DISTRIBUTED

In all of the thirty-nine years which the American Bankers Association has been in existence the presidential office has not been held twice by the same bank. A careful scanning of the records shows that the central reserve cities have had the office more than half the time. New York and Pennsylvania have had the presidency nine times; Illinois and Missouri have had the presidency eight times. The great Northwest never has had it and it never has been held in the Southwest nor on the Pacific coast. The southern states have had the presidency four times and the vice-presidency twice when that official did not reach the higher position. As stated, no individual bank has ever had the position among its officials twice and until the present year no single bank has ever asked for the presidency a second time. Next to the last time that the chief office of the American Bankers Association was held in Philadelphia it was held by Morton McMichael of the First National Bank of that city. According to the records Massachusetts, where the thirty-ninth annual session of the great national association is being held this year, had the presidency for the first and second years of its existence, the presiding officer being Hon. Charles B. Hall of the Boston National Bank. The next year Alexander Mitchell, president of a big fire insurance company in Milwaukee, was elected and this is the farthest point northwest that this high position ever has ventured. There was a period when New York City held the position almost every two or three years, its long line of officials including George S. Coe, Logan C. Murray, Eugene H. Pullen, Joseph C. Hendrix, Alvah Trowbridge, G. S. Whitson and Lewis E. Pierson, seven in all. All of these came from New York City and none from any of the up-state towns. Three of the four times that the presidency came to Illinois it was held in the city of Chicago. There were Lyman J. Gage, John J. P. Odell, and George M. Reynolds for the city and John L. Hamilton for the down-state district. Missouri has had the position four times, three times in St. Louis and once in Kansas City. The names shown by the records are Charles Parsons, Walker Hill and the late Charles H. Huttig for St. Louis, while E. F. Swinney represented Kansas City. Philadelphia has had the position twice—first, Morton McMichael of the First National Bank and one year later Wm. H. Rhawn of the National Bank of the Republic, Philadelphia. The big chair has held but two Ohioans; M. M. White came from Cincinnati and Myron T. Herrick from Cleveland. Michigan held the gavel by the hand of George H. Russel in 1898 and by William Livingstone in 1911-1912. The southern representatives have been Robert J. Lowry of Georgia, Caldwell Hardy of Virginia, J. D. Powers of Kentucky and F. O. Watts of Tennessee. If anyone cares to look into the geographical distribution of these offices he only has to lay before him a map of the United States and draw a line connecting the cities of Milwaukee, Kansas City, Atlanta and New York, with a side trip to Boston, to include all of the territory ever honored by holding the chief office of the great American Bankers Association. Two-thirds of all the territory within A. B. A. jurisdiction, including all of the states north and west of a line drawn from Milwaukee to Kansas City and all of the states west and southwest of a line from Kansas City to Nashville heretofore have been deprived of representation. New England, the middle states, the middle western states and the southern states have had an unbroken monopoly in furnishing men for the executive chairs in the past. An attempt is being made this year at a more equitable distribution. The great Northwest is offering a candidate from Minneapolis and the great Southwest is offering one from Texas. For the position of president there will be no contest; that will go unanimously to Arthur Reynolds of Iowa. Philadelphia is offering a candidate, the third one from that city and the second from the same bank for the office of vice-president. Baltimore is offering one of her most estimable bankers for the office of treasurer. The nominations at Boston will be taken care of this year by a largely independent committee known as the nominating committee. A few states, mostly southern, have instructed their committeemen in the matter of voting for the office of vice-president. The committee may select only one of the two names to be offered or it may furnish the convention an opportunity of making its own choice direct. Whatever the result of the election, the association will be in good hands. The contest is largely whether or not candidates who have rendered great services are to be rewarded and whether or not large divisions of the United States never before honored are to be recognized. All of the candidates named are able men and good bankers and the members of the association will support loyally the convention's choice for its official staff.

"UNITY AND PROGRESS"

The 1913 convention of the Illinois Bankers Association now is a matter of history. The splendid Chicago committees which had charge of the convention arrangements and looked after the entertainment of the visitors are entitled to a great deal of credit for the way they acquitted themselves.

We believe that one can truthfully say the Illinois Bankers Association has lived up to the motto continued in its official insignia, "Unity and Progress." The members are all co-operating as a unit to increase the prestige of the association and the work of the organization is along progressive lines.

The administration of President Phillips was a distinct success and he succeeded in eradicating every trace of former factional feeling.

The program provided by President Phillips for the Chicago meeting was an excellent one, being both instructive and entertaining. As was expected, the currency question came in for the major part of the discussion. Speakers touching upon this important subject were open and frank, admitting that fundamentally the bill is sound because it seeks to remedy the three principal defects of the present system. At the same time, the opinion was that the bill ought to be amended in certain respects in order to enhance its efficiency, which could be accomplished without affecting any of the basic principles underlying the measure.

The more optimistic are arguing that all along the government has shown a disposition to act fairly in the matter and, in framing the proposed law, to give consideration to the advice and counsel of the banking interests. Consequently, it is believed that changes recommended will be made if it is made convincingly apparent that the recommendations are not actuated by selfish motives. This is all the bankers want, for, as was pointed out at the convention, the bankers have general business and public welfare in mind in making their suggestions to the federal officials.

Much has been accomplished by the association in behalf of advanced agriculture, and the passage of the good roads law was largely through the activities of the Illinois bankers.

GOOD ROADS AND MINNEAPOLIS

So many wise movements have emanated from Minneapolis and vicinity that the country has an expectant attitude toward the great Northwest. She gave us the wide-spreading, deep-rooted issue of better farming and more useful education for the boys and girls of the rural districts. Joseph Chapman was the Moses who discovered the small beginnings of the subject in the bull rushes. Even when a thing may not have emanated from Minneapolis her enthusiastic boosters take it up and develop it to a practical usefulness. Her bankers and business men heard the gospel of

NORTHWESTERN BANKERS—

YOUR GRAIN DRAFTS are drawn chiefly on Minneapolis. The utmost promptness in presenting them to the drawees is very important. The Northwestern is equipped to handle such drafts with the greatest despatch. Its morning mail sometimes brings in as much as $1,000,000 in this kind of paper alone. The drafts are presented for payment immediately after receipt and the proceeds passed through the same day's clearings. A prompt, definite settlement is thus secured. Each item receives careful, individual consideration. You are notified by wire at once if any difficulty arises. The completeness of the system of collecting as developed by The Northwestern is the result of its forty-one years' experience gained directly at the grain terminal. The total resources backing the bank's efforts are over $35,000,000.

THE NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL BANK MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

good roads from that distinguished evangelist, President W. G. Edens, of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association. They believed all they heard and dug deeper for other truths on the relation of bad roads to truck and small farming as well as dairying. It was found that on account of bad roads the farmers naturally tributary to Minneapolis took 21 per cent of their produce elsewhere—a total of $1,413,803. Bad roads "shut the gates" of the city on 850 farmers and kept about 4,000 purchasers out of the markets of the city. Conversely, the farmers of the tributary district lost on account of bad roads, because of longer routes taken, $61,000; loss of time, $75,000; extra trips, $137,000; inability to haul fertilizers at proper seasons $92,000 and because of other reasons, $221,000—a total of over $608,000. For these reasons it was figured that each farmer of the district lost $150 a year, or $1.70 per acre farmed, or nine per cent of his total crop. He paid as much for bad roads as for hired help. He paid $10 more for bad roads than for feed for his stock and twenty-five times as much as for fertilizer. He paid a bad roads tax of $14.30 per $1,000—one and one-half per cent of his total investment. What the farmer lost on bad roads would replace his farm implements every three years, the cattle every three years, the horses every four years, and all the other domestic animals every six months. The direct loss to the merchants of Minneapolis was another question.

A million loss per year was the guess of the statisticians who handled the bad roads losses to the farmer. It may be more. Here is a new problem for the Chicago bankers and Chicago business men in the Association of Commerce. The Minneapolis question of the farmer and bad roads is almost as important as the farmer and bad farming or the farmer's boy and bad schooling. It is repeated in and around St. Louis, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and all other cities which have neglected social economics. Transportation over bad roads is a real difficulty but not an insurmountable one. It adds greatly to the retail prices of produce while not increasing the income of the producer. Every city should do as Minneapolis has done; find out the truth and make it public.

MAY CLOSE MISSISSIPPI BANK

Greenville, Miss., Sept. 28.—Following the resignation of the president, it was announced here that the Bank of Washington would probably go into liquidation. Arrangements have been made with the Commercial Savings for the payment of depositors. Some are presenting their claims and either being paid or transferring their accounts to the Commercial.

After the president of the bank resigned on account of ill health, according to report, the directors at once met and decided upon the arrangement with the Commercial Savings for the payment of the depositors. It is said that this action was taken to prevent a run upon the bank, which was feared because of uneasiness created by the president's resignation.

DETROIT ROAD CONVENTION

The largest number of men ever gathered together met in Detroit this week for the Third American Road Congress, September 29th to October 4th. It is estimated that 5,000 delegates were present at the sessions. The congress was held under the auspices of the American Highway Association, the American Automobile Association and the Michigan State Good Roads Association.

The meeting was called to order Monday morning in Wayne Gardens by President Logan Waller Page, and there were addresses by Governor Ferris, Mayor Marx, President Page, who also is president of the American Highway Association; Laurens Enos, president of the American Automobile Association, and others.

Tuesday there were talks on proposed national aid for highways. Speakers representing the Lincoln Highway Association occupied a portion of the program at this session. The session was thrown open for general discussion after the principal addresses and a committee appointed to confer with advocates of the various plans of legislation in an endeavor to prepare resolutions which may be presented to congress as representative of the organized road movement of America.

In the afternoon there was a state legislation and road management session under the auspices of the American Bar Association and Wednesday construction and maintenance were discussed under the auspices of the American Highway Association.

Thursday afternoon was a financial session under the auspices of the A. B. A. W. G. Edens, of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, presided. Papers and addresses dealing with the various phases of road finance and accounting were presented. Mr. Edens talked on the general subject of financing road improvement; S. E. Bradt of De Kalb, Ill., discussed bond issues for road improvement, and H. P. Gillette, editor-in-chief "Engineering and Contracting," talked on highway accounting with special reference to maintenance.

Friday there were talks by Governor Ferris of Michigan and Senator Townsend.

An exposition was held at Wayne Gardens in which the national government, the state government and every industry relating to street and road improvement was represented. The office of public roads of the U. S. department of agriculture exhibited two series of miniature models, one series showing the development of road building from the early Roman roads to the types of road now in use, and the other showing all modern types of road, such as sand-clay, gravel, water-bound macadam, bituminous macadam, brick, concrete, etc. The exhibit also included models of bridges, culverts and drainage structures, electrically operated models of rollers, crushers, etc.

Foreign creditors of the bank, it is said, will be paid in full. Whether the stockholders will be paid in full or not is not known, but it was stated that liquidation of the bank's affairs would give them at least a very large part of their holdings.

TO AID MARKETING OF CROPS

There has been organized at Houston, Tex., a co-operative association for marketing farm products. One of the purposes of this organization is co-operation through the central agency of the Farmers Union of Texas at Houston in the work of marketing crops and in holding them in warehouses to regulate the supply to meet the demands.

The central agency will, for instance, issue to cotton growers about three-fourths of the normal value of their cotton and store it in warehouses at Houston to be sold when the demand justifies paying the producer at the time of sale the difference between the amount received for the cotton and the amount advanced minus a nominal commission, warehouse fee and insurance. Warehouse receipts will be used as collateral for financing the proposition.

The operations of the organization will extend to include the marketing and storing of all farm products.

Cleveland

Central States News Letter

Cincinnati

Directors of the Union National, Cleveland, are discussing plans for a new building to take the place of the present home at 308 Euclid Avenue. E. R. Fancher, vice-president, says that it has not yet been decided as to what style or size it will be. "If we build," said Mr. Fancher, "it will be on the site of the present bank. Our business has grown to such an extent that we feel the need of larger quarters. The building of a new home or the enlargement of our present quarters has been discussed informally but nothing definite has been done."

New Ruling on Special Assessment Bonds

Announcement by "Blue Sky" Commissioner J. H. Harper that in a great majority of the instances where "special assessment" bonds are offered by brokers, much of the detailed information required by the law to be filed regarding the securities may be dispensed with. This is of importance to dealers in securities, as it means they will not be required to hunt up and file with the department detailed information that is nearly always extremely difficult to obtain. The law provides that when the bonds are not the obligation of the entire taxing subdivision and payable out of the general tax, detailed information should be furnished. The announcement by Commissioner Harper is the result of conferences with bond dealers and an investigation of the form usually adopted in that class of securities. These conferences have disclosed that in reality "special assessment" bonds are in form and substance the obligation of the entire taxing subdivision in all save a few instances. Where the bondholder is not obliged to look to the special assessment fund for payment, the bonds are the obligation of the entire taxing subdivision, and dealers who offer to dispose of them will not be required to make detailed statements.

Columbus Banks in Good Condition

State banks of Columbus are in excellent condition, according to an analysis of the last reports, recently completed by the state department of banks and banking. This shows that the reserve on hand at the time of the latest call was 24.3 per cent, as against 24.7 per cent on June 4th, and compares with 23.76 per cent as shown by the comptroller's analysis of national bank reports. As the law requires the state banks to maintain a reserve of 15 per cent the reserves shown by the last call are regarded as particularly commendable. The ten Columbus state banks show an aggregate of resources and liabilities of $11,444,943.07 as against $11,458,014.26 for eleven banks of June 4th, the West Side Dime Savings Bank having been liquidated meanwhile. This shows a gain from the June 4th report, eliminating the West Side Bank, of $150,000. The consolidated statement of the condition of Columbus banks as compiled by the state department shows capital stock of $1,515,000; surplus, $441,000; undivided profits, net, $81,154.94; deposits, $9,375,682.05; borrowed money, $16,000; notes and bills rediscounted, $7,500; overdrafts, $5,950.84; state, county and municipal bonds, $849,459.68; other bonds and securities, $816,960.80; loans on real estate, $687,487.66; loans on collateral, $2,407,767.31; other notes and discounts, $3,528,315.79.

Bank to Pay Fifty Per Cent

Depositors of the Amherst (Ohio) Bank Company will receive a dividend of fifty per cent about November 1, according to Senator

C. D. Friebohn of Cleveland, special deputy in charge of the liquidation. The Amherst institution decided upon a voluntary liquidation July 3d following over $40,000 in unprofitable loans. It is expected that the depositors will receive seventy-five or eighty per cent of the $258,000 entrusted to the bank.

Beach City Bank Crash

With $130,000 tied up in the Citizens Bank of Beach City, which was closed by the state on Wednesday of last week, and no dividends available for three months or longer, business in the village is at a standstill. The money in the bank represents the savings of half the inhabitants of the village, as well as of many of the farmers of the surrounding country. The working capital of a number of business houses is tied up in the defunct institution also. The Sugar Creek township school board turned over $9,000 of the bank Friday, five days before its doors were closed. Of this money $3,500 was for the erection of a new building at North Brewster. Representative W. A. Warnes of Holmes county has been appointed special liquidation agent for the private bank at Mt. Eaton and Beach City.

Ohio Notes

William H. Harris has been elected cashier of the Citizens National at Wooster, Ohio, to take the place of Cashier E. W. Thompson, who died recently. Mr. Harris has been assistant cashier for three years. He also was elected to the board.

W. T. Huntsman, who recently closed a term as county clerk, has been made secretary-treasurer of the Continental Trust and Savings, Toledo. J. E. Gardner, who was secretary-treasurer, now is vice-president. Other officers of the bank are W. W. Morrison, president; D. A. Yoder, vice-president; C. A. Mathias, assistant treasurer. Mr. Huntsman's connection with the bank follows a long period of public service. He has been state examiner of municipal offices, chief deputy city auditor, chief deputy clerk of courts and clerk of courts. He was at one time connected with the S. M. Jones Company, and prior to that time was in the service of the Lake Shore railroad.

George W. Baker has been chosen a director of the Marion (Ohio) Savings Bank, to take the place of W. H. Houghton, resigned.

D. J. Schnurr has completed his examination of the affairs of the Murray City private bank, which was closed recently. "It was the worst bank ever saw," said Mr. Schnurr, "and things were in such a tangle they could not have been worse." Checks, drafts, bills, coins and stamps were found in hundreds. In checks alone there was more than $6,000 while the currency was not small in amount. The money found will aid materially in helping to meet liabilities, but depositors will lose heavily, assets being $18,835 less than liabilities. The cashier, S. P. Soliday, who also was postmaster at Murray City, has left the town.

New Bank for Washington

Construction work is nearing completion on the new Park Savings Bank building, Washington, D. C., and it is expected the structure will be ready for occupancy about October 15th. When finished the building will have cost about $37,000. The Park Savings Bank has been in business since November, 1909, and a few months ago, when it was evident that the institution had outgrown its original home in the Arcade building, it was decided to construct the new building. In this structure the whole of the first floor will be devoted to the use of the bank, and two large vaults have been placed in the basement. The bank room is being finished entirely in mahogany and marble, with grills of bronze. There are safe deposit boxes, coupon booths and all of the modern appurtenances for the convenience of depositors. The bank building has a frontage of twenty-five feet on 14th Street and a depth of 107 feet on Kenyon Street.

Forestville, N. Y., Gets Bank

The First National of Forestville, N. Y., which is to take over the business of J. C. Hutchinson and Company, has received its charter from the federal banking department. The J. C. Hutchinson Co. was chartered on December 20, 1906, and the date of the charter of the new national bank is September 13, 1913. The new bank has a capital stock of $25,000. The officers of the bank are: President, J. C. Hutchinson, first vice-president, A. G. Pierce; second vice-president, William F. Miller; cashier, W. E. Candee. The officers and H. F. Hutchinson constitute the board of directors.

FARM LOAN COMPANY ORGANIZED

There has been organized in California a corporation which will engage in the business of making long time loans to farmers. The directorate of the company will consist of prominent business and professional men of San Francisco and other cities of the state.

It is proposed to embody in the financial policy of the new corporation the better parts of the European systems. There will be provided a system of ten year loans at low rates, and in connection with this the borrower will have the option of discharging his indebtedness at any time in the period. Cash for the loans will be raised by issuing bonds against the borrowers' mortgages and the interest the farmer borrowers pay will depend on the price of the bonds. It is stated that the corporation will not charge borrowers more than two per cent above what it has to pay for the money it loans.

GOVERNOR COX ADDRESSES FARMERS CONGRESS

At the twenty-third annual Farmers National Congress held in Plano, Ill., last week Gov. Cox of Ohio advocated keeping the boy on the farm and restoring community life. All of the speakers at the congress were agreed that the high cost of living is due in a large measure to the emigration of the country lad cityward.

NATIONAL BANKS MERGE

Southern National of Wilmington, N. C., has consolidated with the Murchison National of that place.

Another $1,000 was added to the surplus fund of the Iron County Bank, Ironton, Mo., at a recent meeting of the directors of that institution. The surplus now is $16,000.

PHILADELPHIA BANK ON THE SITUATION

The Franklin National, Philadelphia, in its monthly digest of trade conditions, says:

"A year ago now we were on the eve of a presidential election. The business of each month of the year up to that time has been an improvement over the previous one, activities increasing right through the summer months and up to and beyond the election of a president including a change of the political party in power. This condition was a surprise to every one, as we had become accustomed to believe that business must of necessity be quiet during the summer and a falling off must be experienced during a presidential campaign. We learned that neither of these things were necessary. After such a long season of constantly increasing business, it was necessary that we have an easing up, and the most natural time for such easing up to come was during the summer months. This year we have witnessed the usual summer quiet and many people mistook the condition, believing it to presage financial and business trouble. It was argued that the dullness was due to the tariff bill and the currency bill, both of which would bring about such changes to business as to entirely upset conditions. Both the tariff changes and the currency bill are affecting business, and yet business is experiencing its regular fall picking up, almost all lines reporting the usual increases for September."

FIXES MISSOURI ROAD DAYS

Governor Major of Missouri has designated August 20th and 21st as public holidays to be known as good roads days, at which time every able-bodied man in the rural districts and smaller cities of the state is expected to work on the public highways. The proclamation issued by the governor provides for a general suspension of business and asks that the women of the state supply the workmen with food and encourage them with their presence and good cheer.

CALIFORNIA CONDITIONS

American National of San Francisco, in its latest financial letter, says:

"No effort has been made by the national banks of San Francisco or Los Angeles to obtain any portion of the $3,000,000 allotted to California by Secretary McAdoo from his $50,000,000 crop moving fund, and it is unlikely that any of the money will be used here. The necessities would have to be greater than have yet appeared to overcome the rather burdensome conditions surrounding the government deposit, especially that feature which compels the pledge of government bonds to secure ten per cent of the amount advanced.

"One of the most encouraging factors in the general situation is the improvement in the investment market. This is shown in a broader inquiry for first-class municipal bonds and a gradual rise in price of some of the best securities. Offerings of new securities have been cut down to a minimum, and the market shows signs of relief from the congestion that has afflicted it for several months past.

"Another encouraging feature is the financial situation in Europe. The Bank of England, the Bank of France, and the Bank of Germany all have been accumulating gold reserves, and are in much stronger position than they were at the same period in 1912. Peace once more prevails in southeastern Europe, and the Balkan states are seeking loans for purposes of rehabilitation.

"California is in the midst of a fairly profitable, though subnormal, harvest. As the shortage in supply both of canned fruits and dried fruits becomes more apparent, the market becomes more brisk and prices are advancing. Experts estimate the yield of raisins at hardly more than fifty per cent of last year's crop. The output of prunes, dried apricots and peaches will also fall below early expectations.

"On the other hand, walnuts will yield exceptionally well—perhaps 2,000 tons in excess of last year's figures—bringing a return of more than $4,000,000 to growers. Hop growers in the Sonoma valley and some portions of the Sacramento valley are in a fortunate state, with an abundant crop and high prices. Beans and olives are among the lesser products that are doing more than reasonably well. The remarkable growth of horticultural interests in California is illustrated by official figures prepared by the state from figures submitted by county assessors. According to these compilations, there are fruit and nut trees in bearing in California this year to the number of 46,809,791, a gain of about twenty-five per cent since 1910. In addition, the acreage planted to vineyards is 333,564 acres, as compared with 279,800 acres in 1910.

"The supremacy of California as a gold state is again pointed out in a statement issued jointly by the government mint bureau and the geological survey. This state led in the production of the yellow metal in 1912 with a yield of $20,008,000. Colorado was second with $18,741,200, and Alaska third with $17,198,600. Nevada, besides ranking fifth as a gold state, took first place in the production of silver, distancing both Utah and Montana, its nearest competitors."

LOS ANGELES BANKERS RESIGN

Los Angeles.—F. H. Haskell and A. C. Hupp have resigned as vice-presidents and directors of the Globe Savings Bank. They were officials of the Bank of Southern California at the time of its merger with the Globe. They will continue to have some connection with the Globe and assist in the liquidation of the affairs of the Bank of Southern California.

PRIVATE BANKER A BANKRUPT

James H. Belt, the Bunker Hill private banker who failed sometime ago, has been adjudged a bankrupt in the United States district court. In filing the petition of voluntary bankruptcy the petitioner gave his assets as $168,000, due him on bills and notes, and his liabilities as $188,790. The institution was one of the oldest private banking houses in Illinois.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by F. C. Redmond

The October circular of the Security National, Minneapolis, notes an improved business tone, a good general outlook and a situation insuring crop money sufficiency. It says in part: "Both the tariff changes and currency bill are affecting business, and yet business is experiencing its regular fall picking up, almost all lines reporting the usual increases for September."

In the conclusion of the summary, in which existing and prospective conditions in the entire United States are dwelt upon in detail, the Security National says: "The most active states in the country to-day are Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. The general situation is good, money is easier than for some time past and manufacturing and merchandising lines should show steady increases for the balance of the year."

Crop Movement Early

President E. W. Decker of the Northwestern National says that the feature of the fall season is the heavy movement of the grain crop out of first hands, that it is going on at a rate that indicates a new record for the quantity of the crop that will have been moved by December 1st. Even where farmers are not selling, but are taking out storage tickets and holding for higher prices, they are sending the grain to the markets and getting it off the farms.

October Dividends

A juicy dividend melon worth $250,000 was cut by the banks, trust companies and other corporations in St. Paul October 1st. The First National and the Merchants National alone divided among their shareholders more than $100,000. This has been one of the most prosperous years in the history of the Northwest.

Minneapolis banks also have declared their regular quarterly dividends, the First National, 3 per cent; Security National, 4 per cent; Northwestern National and Minnesota Loan and Trust, $2\frac{1}{2}$ and $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent; Metropolitan National, $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent and the German-American, 2 per cent.

Combine to Sell Bonds

The Northwestern Trust, St. Paul, combined with C. O. Kalman & Co. to dispose of the Summit Avenue 6 per cent three-year paving bonds. The first installment, $30,000, was placed on sale in the two institutions on Wednesday. The sale will follow directly along the lines laid out by James J. Hill last winter when he took the playground bonds and sold them in certificate form. The Northwestern Trust Company and Kalman & Co. will place the bonds on sale in the regular denominations, but each purchaser will be limited to $1,000 worth of each series. Orders will be taken for parts of the issue of $30,000, dated November 1st, and $40,000, dated December 1st, making $100,000 in all. A charge of 75 cents a $100 will be made to cover expenses and a premium. On account of the bonds being backed by St. Paul's best residential property it is expected that the public will take much interest in the sale. If the sale proves successful the Northwestern Trust Company and Kalman & Co. will take other city bonds and try to dispose of them in the same manner.

Duluth Booming

The business transacted in Duluth during September was more than 30 per cent greater than during September of last year, as measured by bank clearances. These were $34,403,550.43 compared with $26,398,382.32 in month's total will place Duluth in first place in the regular monthly report showing comparative bank clearances of the principal cities of the country.

"More grain has been shipped into Duluth up to this time this year than ever before in its history," said H. S. MacGregor, cashier of the City National. "Iron shipments have been heavy, and the range pay-rolls are larger than ever. These, I would say, are some of the reasons for the magnificent showing. You might describe the condition by saying that it is one of general prosperity," he declared. J. H. Dight, cashier of the First National, gave similar reasons for the unusual increase.

I. S. Moore of the American Exchange National, manager of the local clearing house, says that business conditions are better at the present than for some time.

Meet to Plan Development

A meeting of the bankers of the second congressional district of Minnesota was held Thursday night of last week in Mankato to discuss the best means by which agricultural development and education can be promoted in the district. It was felt that southern Minnesota has been somewhat slow to adopt the more advanced methods. Not a single county agricultural agent has been employed, although other parts of this state and North and South Dakota have had great benefits from these. It was urged that the counties ought to get into line and employ the best agents to be found. Among the speakers were Professor A. D. Wilson, head of the extension division of the state agricultural college work; F. E. Ballmer of Morris, district superintendent of county agents; John D. Deets of this city, secretary of the Southern Minnesota Better Development League, and others. Mr. Deets showed by figures that in the last ten years the number of farms in southern Minnesota has decreased, and that the amount of land added to the cultivated district has increased but very little. The population of eighteen of the counties has fallen off, a large part of this being in the farming community.

Open Savings Departments

The First National and the Merchants National, Fargo, N. D., on October 1st opened savings departments in order to conserve a great aggregate of small sums into industrial channels. Deposits ranging from $1 upward will be received, upon which quarterly interest will be paid at the rate of 4 per cent annually.

New North Dakota Bank

Articles of incorporation for the Scandinavian American Bank of Grafton, N. D., have been filed with the register of deeds of Walsh county, the incorporators as well as the stockholders all being prominent business men of Grafton or farmers in the near vicinity.

The bank will be capitalized at $50,000 and it is understood will occupy temporary quarters in a building on Main Street directly opposite the First National, to be remodeled and made suitable for carrying on a general banking business. Later on a new building is to be erected. The incorporators are Gunder Olson, state treasurer; J. L. Cashell, A. McConville, W. W.

Reyleck, J. O. Rindahl, E. W. Foogman, N. O. Erie, J. J. O'Brien and G. Midgarden. The new financial institution will be a state bank and will give Grafton a third bank, there being two national banks there now.

Northwest Notes

The Oak Park (Minn.) State soon will be ready for business with Ferdinand Peters as president and F. J. Pallanch of Cold Spring, cashier. It has a capital of $10,000; surplus $2,000.

The Farmers State, Rock Creek, Minn., has been incorporated. The incorporators include L. M. Sorenson, E. J. Anderson, J. M. Morrow, B. J. Johnson, Ben W. Cudd, Isreal Larson, Peter Christenson, John Glader, Charles Heineman, Aug. Shogren, S. M. Johnson, J. Rudquist of Rock Creek and four capitalists from Winthrop.

The contract for a $12,000 building to house the First State of Kelliher, Minn., has been let to George Kreatz of Bemidji. It is expected that the new building will be ready for occupancy January 1st. W. T. Barry is cashier.

Harry Lee, cashier of the First National, Browerville, Minn., was married on September 20th to Miss Helen Mellin.

Articles of incorporation of the Farmers Bank Wolf Point, Mont., have been filed. The bank is capitalized at $20,000 and the directors are George B. Kirk, Jr., Wolf Point; W. J. H. Montgomery, Wolf Point; David Kirk and Ernest Kirk, both of Niagara, N. D.

The State Bank of Malta, Mont., has purchased the city bond issue amounting to $37,000 at par.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the American State Bank at Beresford, S. D., with a capital of $15,000; incorporators, R. C. Tuntland, A. J. Stone, Beresford; John Tollefson, Ole T. Twedt, Hudson; Lars Asper, O. A. Abeel, Alcester.

The Missoula (Mont.) Trust and Savings Bank on Saturday of last week moved into its new home. The new bank is a place of beauty as well as convenience. The space has been enlarged by taking in the rooms formerly occupied by insurance firms. Italian and Vermont marbles are used for the interior finishing, mahogany is used throughout for desks and woodwork and the floors are tessellated. New safety vaults, fireproof and burglar-proof, have been built and added provisions made for customers' safety deposit boxes. The only pieces of old furniture to have a place in the remodeled bank will be the great safe, the largest one in Missoula, and the adding machine.

Grain shipments from Duluth and Superior during August and September amounted to 23,317,000 bushels, all grains, according to reports issued by the secretary of the Duluth Board of Trade. Practically all of this was shipped via water. During the corresponding period of 1912 19,035,000 bushels were shipped. Figures for the shipments of all grains since the opening of navigation, April 17th, show that 50,500,000 bushels have left the Duluth elevators. This is nearly double the amount shipped in a corresponding period of 1912, which was 27,466,000 bushels.

The city council of Des Moines is proposing to issue bonds and sell the same to the people in lots of $100 or so at 5 per cent. It is proposed to issue bonds for $12,500 to secure new police equipment and $99,500 to secure new fire equipment. The councilmen think that the people will gladly take up the bonds.

Des Moines, Oct. 2d.—Considerable business was taken up and disposed of at the quarterly meeting of the executive council of the I. B. A. at the office of Secretary P. W. Hall in Des Moines. Those in attendance were D. L. Heinsheimer, Glenwood, president of the I. B. A.; P. W. Hall, secretary; H. G. Moore, Wellman treasurer; Frank Epperson, Eddyville; D. E. Goodell, Tama; E. W. Townsend, Lake City; J. W. Reihmann, Grand Mound; H. E. Foskett, Shenandoah; F. B. Fry, Corydon; A. E. Hindorf, Newton; S. F. McConnell, Bloomfield; Charles Shade, Rock Rapids; F. E. Frisbie, Sheldon. The question of bank burglary insurance was one of the topics in which there was much interest. Secretary Hall reported that competing liability companies have been cutting rates to such an extent as to make it difficult sometimes for him to write insurance in the company which he represents. As his commission for this insurance goes into the protection fund of the association, Secretary Hall is anxious of course to meet his competitors on their own ground. A committee was named to investigate conditions and report later. The council will seek to have the state auditor issue his bank calls upon the same dates as the comptroller of the currency issues national bank calls. The last legislature enacted a measure calling for five bank calls a year instead of four, as had been the case formerly. It was thought that this solved the problem, but unfortunately for the bankers State Auditor Bleakly has failed to see it that way. The advantages of having the calls the same time will be pointed out to him later. It was determined that more publicity should be given attempts to defraud banks in order that members of the association might be put on their guard. Secretary Hall was appointed to see that news of this character is disseminated through the Associated Press and the newspapers of Iowa. Mr. Hall has a good "nose for news" and the executive council may rest assured that their instructions in this respect will not be disregarded.

Secretary Hall's first occasion to call the newspapers in his confidence came shortly after the meeting of the executive council. He was notified that a smooth wire tapper had tried to defraud the First National at Spirit Lake and a bank at Emmetsburg out of large amounts. At Spirit Lake a telegram was received in the usual way signed by the Morning Sun Savings and authorizing the payment of $2,500 to one Sam Bayard, a stock buyer. Later on a gentleman walked in, said his name was Sam Bayard and asked if a telegram had been received from a bank at Morning Sun concerning him. He was asked to show credentials, whereupon he flashed a letter of credit, showing that he was good for any amount up to $10,000 and signed by the bank at Morning Sun. However, the Spirit Lake bankers were suspicious. They wired Morning Star and were notified that the telegram and the letter of credit were forgeries. In the meantime Bayard had disappeared. He tried the same game at Emmetsburg and was equally unsuccessful. Secretary Hall believes that the fellow is the same who flimflammed the Union National at Ames, out of $105 three years ago under the name of L. Dean. His scheme is to tap a telegraph wire just outside the city and send a fake message.

Iowa Bankers Interested in Crop Funds

The Des Moines Clearing House Association is actively interested in the money which Secretary McAdoo is going to distribute among the Iowa banks which may want it and can qualify with the bonds necessary to get the coin. A committee was named to confer with M. J. Wade of the national democratic committee concerning the question as it affects Des Moines. The committee consists of Arthur Reynolds, Des Moines National; Simon Casady, Central State; J. G. Rounds, Citizens National; J. A. McKinney, Capital City State; Homer A. Miller, Iowa National.

Iowa Senators Discuss Currency Bill

United States Senator Kenyon, after the currency bill had passed the house of representatives, hied himself to Iowa to see what his constituents think about the measure. Senator Kenyon has been traveling around the state interviewing business men and bankers. He thinks that the measure is good in some respects but intimates that it is not entirely satisfactory. Senator Kenyon does not anticipate any currency legislation before the regular session of congress. Senator Cummins, who has been in Des Moines, also opines that the bill is a step in the right direction, but he fears that the present plan admits of too much chance of getting politics mixed up with banking affairs.

Policy Holders Large Borrowers

Interesting statements as to the demand for money from policy holders in the life insurance companies were made recently by H. S. Nollen, vice-president of the Equitable Life of Iowa. Mr. Nollen says that loans on policies in that company are already one-third more than they were at this time last year. Last year these loans for the year increased $150,000 over the loans for the preceding year. Already this year the loans have increased $130,000 over last year.

indicating a total of $200,000 increase by the end of the year. Mr. Nollen believes that much of this money is going into automobiles. Also, he thinks that some of the money is being loaned by the company at 6 per cent and being reloaned on real estate security at a higher rate of interest.

Chariton Bank Changes Hands

An important bank deal was consummated by the purchase of the controlling interest of Joseph A. Brown and G. W. Larimer in the State Savings at Chariton by J. D. Whisenand, Fred Risser and L. B. Bartholomew of Des Moines. Mr. Whisenand will be president of the institution and Mr. Risser vice-president and active manager. Mr. Whisenand is vice-president of the Central State of Des Moines, in which institution Mr. Risser resigned as cashier some months ago. Mr. Bartholomew is secretary of the Central Trust Co. of Des Moines. Messrs. Brown and Larimer remain directors in the Chariton bank. Dr. J. W. McElveen remains as one of the vice-presidents and directors.

Iowa Notes

It is announced that the bondholders will take over the defunct Fort Dodge, Des Moines and Southern railway, which runs from Fort Dodge to Des Moines. Judge McPherson ordered the line sold and fixed $2,500,000 as the price at which it must be sold. The Old Colony Trust Company of Boston has been interested in the project and Homer Loring of that concern has been acting as receiver for some months.

Glenn Gulliver must serve an indeterminate penitentiary sentence for assaulting a bank cashier near Osage some months ago. The Iowa supreme court affirmed the sentence at a meeting last week. Gulliver walked into a bank just as the cashier was putting the money away in the afternoon, assaulted the cashier and tried to grab the money. He was turned out but was later apprehended and convicted.

John Rink of Stillwater, Okla., fell into the hands of gamblers at Sioux City last week. After he had lost some money, one of his friends suggested that Rink give him a check for the amount he had lost. However, he pointed out that since the money was due in a gambling game, he had better not fill in the check except to sign his name. Rink gave a check, duly signed, to his new friends and they haven't been seen since. Rink is wondering, since he has thought it over, how much that check will be worth when it turns up.

Mrs. Harry Blackburn and son Mortimer returned from an extended trip in Europe. Mrs. Blackburn, cashier of the Iowa National at Des Moines, met his wife and son in the city and accompanied them to Des Moines. Mrs. Blackburn gave out an intensely interesting interview to the Des Moines Capital on her return.

John Sansome was arrested at Keosauqua on a charge that he raised a check for $5 to cash. It was drawn on the Mount Sterling Savings at Mount Sterling.

A Greek laborer, Silas Triffales, was killed at Waterloo. Investigation showed that he had been wrapped about one of his legs and tied with a rag. There were a number of blank checks on a bank in Oklahoma City in the wallet.

The Century Savings of Des Moines has made some neat announcements of its consolidation. The announcement is in the form of a card.

William H. Foulke has resigned his position as cashier of the Security National of Sioux City and E. Payton has resigned as cashier of the Bennett Loan and Trust of the same city. The two men have formed an insurance agency.

The Farmers State at Scranton is a new organization which has filed articles with the secretary of state at Des Moines. It has a capital stock of $25,000. C. W. Cressler, S. H. Arthurs, J. M. Henning, John Page and Norman Slaw are the incorporators.

M. A. Buchan, formerly of Grundy county and well known in Iowa, is now president of a bank at Palo Alto, Cal., according to word received by friends in Iowa.

The Cedar Rapids National has been made reserve agent for the Ravenswood National of Ravenswood, Ill.

Among out-of-the-city bankers seen in Des Moines recently were Cashier W. J. Cornell, Citizens National, Winterset; Cashier C. J. Irish, State at Kellogg; President Thomas Johns, Prairie City State, Prairie City; President D. O. Dufur, Citizens at Lorimor; Cashier N. S. Flagel, Fernald Savings; President S. M. Leach, Adel State, Adel; Vice-President C. E. Rice, Boone City Trust and Savings.

South Dakota Notes

John Hayes of Fort Pierre, president of the Citizens State of that town and of the bank at Capa, has been in bankruptcy court at Pierre. Claims for $54,000 have been put in against the Fort Pierre bank by the state banking department, while those against the Capa bank total $9,000.

Albert Hegnes has been elected president of the Lakeside State at Lake Andes.

The Silvins Investment Company with a capital stock of $10,000 is being organized at Sioux Falls.

Claire City is to have a new bank.

John S. Hight has sold his interests in the State at White River, of which he was formerly president, to E. A. Broadwell, who becomes president, and F. W. Woods, who becomes vice-president.

F. A. Gates has severed his connection with the Mitchell National at Mitchell and has bought the Farmers National at Kingsley, Iowa.

PRIVATE BANK LIQUIDATED

Approval has been given to the liquidation of the private bank at Fayette, Fulton county Ohio, which was closed by the state bank department recently. The order was taken by Judge Scott in the Fulton county courts. Through the work of State Bank Superintendent E. W. Lattanner, cash has been realized on all securities slightly in excess of the deposits. Depositors were paid in full and the business of the bank is practically wound up at a cost to the bank owners of only $370. More than $90,000 in securities were sold to pay off depositors.

CLOSE LOUISIANA BANK

Franklinton, La.—The Union Bank of Franklinton, recently organized through the consolidation of the Farmers and Merchants Bank and the Bank of Franklinton, and capitalized at $60,000, was closed by State Bank Examiner Young, because of what are alleged to be bad loans. The branch of the bank at Hackley, La., was also ordered closed. It is understood that the depositors will be paid in full and that the alleged bad paper will be realized on to an extent that will keep the stockholders from any material loss.

Bank Examiner Young some time ago is said to have instructed the officers of the bank to have certain loans, not considered good, settled.

H. B. Magee is president of the bank; I. S. Brock, active vice-president, and Robert Babington, cashier.

NEW YORK BANKER RETIRES

On October 1st Augustus W. Kelley retired as vice-president of the Union Trust of New York, continuing as a member of the board of trustees, to which he was elected January 2d, 1896, and on which he has served longer than any other member with the exception of W. Emlen Roosevelt, elected April 5, 1888.

Mr. Kelley entered the service of the Union Trust in 1867, three years after its organization. He has been an officer of the company for nearly twenty-seven years.

COUNTRY BANKERS TO DISCUSS CURRENCY BILL

Announcement has been made that a conference of country bankers will be held in Boston during the A. B. A. convention for the purpose of discussing the Glass-Owen currency bill. The conference will be restricted to banks with a capitalization of $250,000 or under.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Marking the beginning of diversified farming and stock raising in the Spokane country, and at the same time presaging the end of the single crop system, Spokane's alfalfa and corn campaign started this week and is now sweeping swiftly over the surrounding country. In this campaign business men and bankers have united with farmers and educators, all with the feeling that it is fundamentally important to the prosperity of Spokane and its tributary territory, called the Inland Empire. Bankers are supporting the campaign enthusiastically.

Until October 1st a five-coach special train, supplemented at each stop by automobiles, and bearing Professor Perry G. Holden and a corps of fifteen agriculturists, will journey to all parts of the surrounding country, carrying the message of alfalfa, corn and stock raising to the farmers. One hundred and forty stops will be made at railroad points and over 500 lectures will be given to the farmers.

To a large gathering of Spokane business men at the chamber of commerce Professor Holden said:

"There has been no place in which I have conducted a campaign where the movement was launched with such hearty support from all classes, and I confidently expect the greatest success here that I have ever achieved in any campaign. There is no question that the passing of the one-crop system, the passing of wheat, the coming of alfalfa, corn and stock, which must come, will be followed by fundamental and deep-seated effects on the very life of your people of the Inland Empire. In this movement you have touched upon the true principal of community building—build up the surrounding country and Spokane will take care of itself."

Problems confronting the fruit growers of the Pacific northwest will be threshed out by the growers themselves, aided by a number of men of national reputation in their lines, as a large feature of the conference side of the sixth National Apple Show and Fruit Products Congress to be held at Spokane, November 17th to 22d. The general conference plan considered by Chairman James S. Ramage and the board of trustees provides for having each subject opened by men recognized as authorities in that line, and thereafter to have the growers present discuss the subject informally and in detail. Among the subjects already outlined for the conference are the standardized pack; utilizing the lower grade fruits in by-products (with practical demonstrations); storing the fruit for market; financing the fruit crop, co-operative marketing and its vital necessity to the individual grower and to the future of the apple industry.

Plans that contemplate an increase in output in the next two or three years of $1,500,000 are being perfected by the Holt Manufacturing Company of Spokane. This is caused by the decision of the concern to concentrate its producing end in Spokane and the manufacture of combined harvesters will be withdrawn gradually from Stockton, Cal., and the greater part centralized in Spokane. "We have the greatest faith in Spokane," states Benjamin Holt, head of the company, "and we believe it is only a question of time when we shall see business at its top notch. We have found that greater efficiency and less cost in the producing end can be attained by concentrating the producing end in one place. We are working toward this end in gradually transferring the manufacture of the combined harvester to Spokane, so that we may increase the output of the caterpillar traction engine in Stockton. For that reason we have contracted with the Northwest Harvester Company in Spokane for building a very large part of our output during the coming season, and we shall gradually throw the major portion of our business to them, so far as the combined harvester is concerned."

Secretary Gordon C. Corbaley of the Chamber of Commerce, following a recent visit to North Carolina to make observations and inquiries as to the industry of distillation of stumps and waste wood, is conducting an investigation looking to the possible locating of such plants in and near Spokane.

"We are sending out letters of inquiry to various points in Michigan and Wisconsin regarding the industry in those states," says Mr. Corbaley. "I believe it can be introduced here as a valuable side line to the extensive lumber business in the Spokane country."

Spokane's twentieth annual interstate fair, which was held last week in ideal autumn weather, attracted many country bankers to the city, among them the following: R. W. Walker, cashier State Bank of Benge, Wash.; George H. Waterman, president State Bank of Kamiah, Ida., who motored to Spokane with a party of six friends; D. M. Eckman, cashier First National of Troy, Mont.; W. L. Cronk, cashier First National of Townsend, Mont.; Charles Adams, vice-president Colville Loan and Trust, Colville, Wash., and F. A. Shultis, cashier Farmers and Lumbermens State, Bonners Ferry, Ida.

For the third time within a few weeks Ernest J. Wienss, cashier of the Bank of St. Joe, Ida., was operated on at St. Luke's hospital this week and is reported to be in a serious condition. He was operated on for appendicitis during the summer, and an operation to remove an abscess was performed last week. Monday a second abscess was removed. Mr. Wienss is well known in Spokane through his connection with the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, and is the youngest bank cashier in the Spokane country, being but twenty-two years old.

Habits of thrift encouraged in Spokane school children have resulted in their saving nickels and pennies to the amount of $31,978.56, which is deposited in the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company.

Like the accounts of their elders, the deposits dwindled materially in summer vacation months, as is shown by the fact that at the close of school in June the children's deposits aggregated $64,046.91.

Of the 15,000 children in the Spokane public schools 21.69 per cent opened accounts. Deposits as small as one cent are received.

Each child is given an individual bank book. During the week they give their savings and bank books to the teachers. On Friday the teachers turn over the money and books to the principals, who deposit them at the bank. The books are returned Monday morning. "The school children's accounts were started in 1897," states R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company. "We do not look upon the school savings system as a profitable enterprise, since the cost of blanks and bookkeeping is very large, yet there is no branch of our business in which we take more pride."

By cutting the estimates the city commissioners have reduced the 1914 tax levy for municipal purposes to twelve mills, as against thirteen for the present year. The city budget now amounts to $1,051,137. The commissioners may make further reductions before final adoption, but the law prevents their making any increases. The budget appropriation will receive publication, as provided by the city charter, and on October 5th it will come up for final action. At that time protests may be presented by citizens against any appropriation.

Under auspices of the chamber of commerce, the extension department of Washington State College will conduct a week's demonstration school in Spokane, commencing December 8th. The school will have a general session of at least one hour each day at which prominent speakers will discuss topics dealing with country and town life improvements. After the general session each day, the school will divide into sectional meetings to study the following subjects: Dairying, poultry raising, home economics and horticulture.

A. F. McClaine, president of the Traders National, has left Spokane for an extended visit to the East, including Chicago, New York and other centers. He will attend as a delegate of the Spokane Clearing House Association, the annual convention of the American Bankers Association, in Boston October 6th.

The growing importance of Spokane as the financial center of the Inland Empire is indicated by the many letters local bankers are receiving from financial men inquiring as to the opportunities for establishing new banks in the country districts. W. L. Clark, assistant secretary of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, has received a large number of such letters in the last few weeks. Some of these parties are from the far East, although the majority are from western bankers.

As part of the farm educational work of the bankers of Washington, and especially of the effort being made in the Palouse country to encourage diversified farming, Spokane banks received from John P. Duke, cashier of the Security State of Palouse, information regarding cups that the bank is offering this fall at the Palouse harvest fair. Two solid silver cups, each twelve inches high, suitably engraved have been offered by the bank, one for the best exhibit of live stock and one for the best exhibit of farm products.

EDMONTON NEWS

Hon. Arthur L. Sifton, premier of Alberta, submitted to the provincial legislature the night of September 22d a solution of the Alberta and Great Waterways railway problem, which, he said, would be found satisfactory to the majority of the people of the province and profitable to Alberta as a whole. The solution is contained in a letter to the premier, who is also minister of railways and telephones, from J. D. McArthur of Winnipeg, president and builder of the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia railways as follows:

"On behalf of myself and associates I propose to take over the Alberta and Great Waterways railway (230 miles) on terms satisfactory to representatives of bondholders and the Royal Bank, and propose to construct the same between original terminals on route to be approved by the provincial railway department under contract entered into with the railway company for this purpose, the specifications, however, to be similar in terms to those fixed for the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia railway.

"In case the mileage between terminals does not exhaust the mileage provided in guarantee, the balance to be devoted to branches on similar terms, location to be hereafter chartered by legislature and approved by your department.

"The interest on the proceeds of bond issue earned up to the time the necessary legislation becomes effective, to be received by the government, the government to provide for the payment of the interest on the bonds (7,500,000) up to that time, and all the sums properly payable in respect of claims filed with the government will be settled by the company. The government will, of course, waive any default of the railway company to date, and will see that the entire proceeds of the bond issue and accrued interest is paid into a chartered bank or banks under the terms of the guarantee act.

"I would require an extension of time for two years from December 31st next for completion of work and would agree to commence actual work before that date."

Premier Sifton announces that the government has approved the foregoing proposal, which will be submitted to the legislature at once in the form of a bill. The bill will contain practically nothing that is not set forth in Mr. McArthur's letter, though it will contain provisions in regard to paying the money by arrangement with the banks.

CHICAGO BANK SEES COMFORTABLE CONDITION

National City Bank of Chicago in its October financial letter says:

"There has not been any unusual disturbance in the money market over the adjustment of the October 1st settlement, and it looks now as if there would be reasonably clear sailing for the balance of the year. This does not mean that money rates will not rule in or that occasional periods of high money will not be encountered. But because of the excellent work that was done earlier in the year in impressing upon all borrowers the need of conservation and of restricting new capital applications to take in only actual requirements the general banking position is very much better than people in touch with the situation of three months ago thought it would be at this time. For these reasons the banks have entered upon the last quarter of the year in excellent shape to meet the legitimate demands of an unusually active period.

"The country is each day becoming better acquainted with the financial bill, and the hope is that the senate will insist upon important amendments. The chances are that the bill will pass during the present session. Students of the question are gradually getting together, and it is hoped that the Washington leaders will give heed to what has been said in criticism of the vital features by those who believe that the present bill would be found actually workable in practice."

BANK CONSIDERS SMALLER CAPITAL

The directors of the Bank of Chico, Cal., have called a special meeting of stockholders, to be held October 13th, for the purpose of considering and acting upon the proposition of reducing the capital stock of the corporation from $150,000 to $100,000.

NEW YORK BANKS SHOW INCREASED SURPLUS

Albany, September 30.—Superintendent George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., of the state banking department in his tabulation just completed of the reports of the 196 state banks showing their condition as of the close of business September 9th, last, indicates that the aggregate resources of these institutions decreased $5,989,478 during the quarter. Similarly, the resources of the eighty trust companies, figures regarding which were given out last week, showed a decrease since June 4th, the aggregate loss there being upward of $48,000,000. Deposits of the state banks during the period showed a falling off of $7,988,743, and cash holdings diminished by $2,253,801. There was an increase in loans of $2,591,687 and a gratifying gain in aggregate surplus and undivided profits of $1,567,766.

TO CONSIDER SCHOOL FOR BANK CLERKS

At the recent convention of the Canadian Bankers Association held in Winnipeg a committee was appointed for the purpose of considering the establishment of extra manual classes at Queens University for the training of bank clerks.

Would Have Registration Bureau for Commercial Paper

Commercial paper is becoming increasingly popular as a short-term bank investment. It is estimated that during the past year over $1,700,000,000 in notes were sold by reputable brokers, representing obligations of 2,500 to 3,000 concerns. In one large eastern state over two-thirds of the state banks and trust companies invest a portion of their funds in this class of paper.

Broad-minded bankers for the past few years have felt that in order to protect purchasers against fraud and overextension of borrowers there should be some supervision or control exercised over the issuance of paper sold in the open market. The suggestions made include an annual audit of borrowing concerns, which idea has been fairly well received and generally adopted, and the registration of commercial paper, which suggestion has not received the attention it deserves.

Commercial Paper in Europe and America

In European countries a merchant agrees to receive a time draft in payment for goods sold. The purchaser arranges with a banking or accepting house to accept the draft so drawn. If a draft bears a first-class name as acceptor, there is no difficulty in selling it in the open market. Each draft is a bill of exchange and represents an actual business transaction. The acceptors lend their credit, receiving a commission for this service, but they become primarily liable upon the obligation and bear the risk of the transaction. The purchaser of the goods provides the acceptor with funds to meet the draft at maturity.

In this country a merchant grants a purchaser a credit in the form of an open account or receives a time note or bill receivable. The note, although negotiable, is usually held by the seller until maturity. The seller finances the purchaser and assumes entire risk until the account is settled or the note is paid.

To finance his business, instead of discounting customers' notes, the merchant will borrow on or sell his own notes. With the proceeds from the collection of the business paper he liquidates his own indebtedness.

Single-name notes based upon the borrower's statement of quick assets is the approved medium of borrowing in this country, in contrast to the European practice of discounting bills of exchange based upon actual business transactions. Often when bills receivable are offered for sale it is considered that the borrower is not strong enough to borrow on single name.

Loans are made and notes are sold primarily to enable a borrower to make prompt payment for materials purchased and thereby take advantage of trade discounts; secondly, to extend credit to customers. In a small town a business concern can usually receive the necessary accommodation at the local bank. With an increase in business it may open another bank account in the same or in a neighboring town, with the approval of both banks. Probably it might later be advisable to establish relations with one or more city banks. At each bank it will maintain a deposit account, probably pay a fairly high rate of interest; but the officers of each bank dealt with are familiar with the affairs of the borrowing concern, have confidence in the management and will renew loans and take reasonable care of the concern in case of necessity; but it may be that after having established good credit the concern wishes to take advantage of favorable discount rates and will sell some of its notes through brokers.

The Note Broker is a Middleman

A broker is a middleman; his business is to sell to banks willing to buy paper of concerns

Joseph A. Broderick of New York says there are dangers in present methods of accepting single-name paper which could be obviated by the establishment of such a bureau wishing to sell. The business is the outgrowth of the desire of bank officers to find short-term investments for surplus funds. Banks sought desirable houses to lend to; merchants offered paper direct to banks. In local districts this practice is not unusual even now. Sometimes refusals were embarrassing; now the broker finds a market for the paper to be sold. Several firms have been acting as note brokers for over thirty years.

Reliable brokers are men of character and of individual financial responsibility. They sell paper only to concerns with established credit. They require their customers to furnish detailed information regarding the business of the concern, the activities of controlling factors and of bank accounts. They make independent investigations and use every means to check the data received. They endeavor to have books of customers audited by competent accountants. When a note is sold to a bank the broker warrants the authenticity of the signature. A copy of the last detailed report of the maker of the note is furnished, if requested, as well as trade references and bank accounts. The purchaser usually has the option of returning the note to the broker within ten days, which gives opportunity for independent investigation.

Well selected paper purchased from reliable brokers gives the banks an excellent short-term investment, reasonably certain of payment at maturity. It is not subject to depreciation in case of money disturbance. It may be resold without indorsement, an ideal secondary reserve, always acceptable for rediscount, and the bank is under no obligation to renew.

Banks during the past few years, owing to heavy depreciation in securities, have gradually withdrawn from the bond market. Commercial paper has in part replaced bonds as a secondary reserve. The largely increased demand has caused keen competition among brokers for desirable paper to sell. Customary caution is often disregarded in a hunt for business. Paper is sought from concerns whose legitimate demands and needs can be met by local banks. But a supply is necessary to meet an increasing demand: notes are often met at maturity with proceeds of the sale of other notes. The ease with which money may be obtained encourages concerns to sell notes for use as fixed capital and then with a tightening in the money market comes a demand for a settlement, with its consequent difficulties.

Concerns are found selling their notes through a number of brokers. There is little excuse for this. Reputable houses have branches or representatives in all large cities. Banks justly object to this practice and discriminate against small concerns which sell through more than one broker. They object to larger concerns using more than two brokers. The practice enables borrowers to pay up borrowing lines at banks by selling paper through brokers and to practically renew this paper by selling through other brokers.

Irresponsible persons, with no personal means, are found operating as note brokers, selling third-rate, undesirable paper to small country institutions.

Consider also the notes in the hands of note brokers awaiting sale. The paper being sold is not commercial paper, but notes claimed to be based upon quick assets. A statement of condition is furnished. Audits are usually made by friendly accountants at a time most favorable to borrowers. There is no effective check upon items of bills payable. In a case in mind the auditor's report did not disclose a transfer of indebtedness a few days previous to date of examination, nor the large borrowing a few days later; nor did it show the large personal liabilities of firm members.

The elimination of these dangers would require concerted action and support. It could be accomplished by a system embracing proper audit and the registration of commercial paper.

In 1908 a committee of the 'American Bankers' Association, of which J. T. Talbert was chairman, as a result of an exhaustive study of the subject, recommended that there should be a supervision of issuance of open market paper. The report dwelt at length upon the necessity for co-operation between banks and note brokers and the desirability of a system of annual audits of all concerns selling paper and the establishment of a simple system of registering at clearing houses all notes sold by brokers.

Brokers do co-operate with banks. Annual audits are now generally required but they are not the kind contemplated by the committee. Recommendations to registration have not been acted upon through lack of co-operation among banks.

Registering Through a Trust Co.

In 1910 a large industrial concern, with a country-wide market, arranged with a prominent New York trust company to register all its promissory notes, notes indorsed and drafts accepted. Daily reports are made to the auditor of the corporation. This system has been adopted by a number of other concerns. In case of interior concerns the brokers present notes for registration upon payment for notes issued. The money is held by the trust company until it is needed by the borrower.

Clearing House Registration Possible

The clearing house is the effective medium of co-operation among banks. The larger cities now have clearing house examiners who are expert credit men, with knowledge of financial standing of all large borrowers in the district served. It would require but little trouble and expense to add the registration feature to the bureau of examination. At least one registration bureau should be established in each State. All concerns selling paper through brokers, whether the brokers be individuals, firms or banks, should be required to register their notes at the bureau nearest to the principal office of the borrower. It might be advisable also to register notes discounted at more than one local bank. The clearing house association or examiner should designate impartial qualified accountants to make audits in the interest of the banks. The establishment of bureaus of registration would be legitimate and effective extension of clearing house functions.

Government recognition of the importance of commercial paper is found in the Aldrich-Vreeland act, which defines the class of commercial paper which will be acceptable as part basis for the issue of emergency currency. This appears to bar single-name paper. The law has never been put to a test. Recent action of the treasury authorities in agreeing to accept commercial paper as collateral for deposits made by the government to bankers to finance the moving crops is another evidence of the trend of affairs.

MILWAUKEE BANK CLOSED

Milwaukee, October 2.—By order of State Banking Commissioner A. E. Kuolt, the Citizens Savings and Trust Company of Milwaukee was closed at noon to-day. The commissioner issued the following statement:

"The closing of the Citizens Savings and Trust Company of Milwaukee has been determined upon by me after mature deliberation. In closing its doors my intent as commissioner of banking is to conserve the interests of depositors and protect them from loss if possible. The assets of the trust company are, under the law, primarily liable, and will be used for the payment of depositors.

"The trust funds are secured by a deposit of $101,000 in approved securities with the state treasurer. This sum will more than cover all the obligations of the company as a trustee. The holders of participating certificates will have to look to specific investments in which such certificates participate for their redemption.

"Trust companies of this state were properly placed under the supervision of the state banking commissioner by the law of 1909. Examinations of the Citizens Savings and Trust Company early revealed unbusinesslike practices and a condition far from satisfactory. Soon after I assumed the duties of commissioner of banking I had Mr. A. B. Geilfuss, veteran banker and at that time bank examiner, elected to the office of vice-president of the company. He was my representative in full charge of the company's affairs. It was during this incumbency that old deals cropped up, revealing false entries, diversion of funds, etc., committed by former officials of this company. In the year and a half that Mr. Geilfuss has been in charge we have segregated $428,000 of securities for the protection of $350,000 deposits, deeming it my duty to protect first of all the small savings depositors. However, in liquidating, there may be some shrinkage, but at present it appears that depositors will be paid in full if they will exercise patience.

"About $250,000 of valuable assets were recovered for their benefit, and the amount of participating certificates has been reduced about one-third, yet so many proofs of manipulated entries kept coming to light that I deemed it safest to all concerned to close up the Citizens Savings and Trust Company under the provisions of the statutes. The business of the company will be wound up under my direction and I have placed A. B. Geilfuss in charge of its affairs as special deputy commissioner of banking."

The Citizens Savings and Trust Company was organized some ten years ago by the law firm of Nathan Pereles & Son, and from the start enjoyed extensive business. The present officers are, vice-president, A. B. Geilfuss; second vice-president, Fred J. Schroeder; secretary, August Prinz; assistant secretary, H. C. Reunzel; treasurer, Nathan Pereles, Jr. The office of president has been vacant since the death of T. J. Pereles a year ago, the nominal head of the institution since then being Mr. Geilfuss.

DECORAH (IOWA) BANKS PROSPEROUS

The four banks of Decorah, Iowa, are in a flourishing condition, as is reflected by the statements recently published. Total deposits are $2,231,250, which amounts to about $100 for each man, woman and child in the county. Two years ago deposits in these same banks amounted to $1,846,038. Thus it will be seen that the increase since that time is $435,252, over twenty per cent.

BANKS SUBSCRIBE TO CROP FAILURE FUND

The banks of Kansas City have subscribed $10,000 to a fund to purchase seed wheat for farmers in the ten western counties of Kansas that suffered a total crop failure. The banks of Atchison have subscribed $1,000 to the fund.

All distribution of wheat to the farmers in drought stricken sections will be through the county commissioners. This announcement was sent out in a letter from the office of Commissioner Sawyer to the commercial clubs of the state. The trustees of the seed wheat club can not handle the individual cases, and have ruled that all the business of distribution must be handled through the county commissioners. "Briefly, the plan is to receive loans from all who will assist in this laudable enterprise, bulk the money and purchase seed wheat," reads the letter. "This seed wheat will be shipped in carload lots to the county commissioners in each county where needed, who will sell it to the farmers having ground properly prepared, taking their notes at 8 per cent, payable August 1, 1914. At the time of harvest these notes will be placed in the banks with the assistance of the bank commissioner's office in the localities where the seed was furnished, for collection. Settlement will then be made with those who furnished the funds.

KANSAS GROUP MEETINGS

The following dates have been arranged for the 1913 group meetings of the Kansas Bankers Association; Group Three, Coffeyville, November 18th; Group Two, Burlington, November 19th; Group Six, Liberal, November 20th; Group Five, Larned, November 21st; Group Four, Concordia, November 25th; Group One, Seneca, November 26th.

"The Backbone of the Transit System"

84-2 (First National Bank of Shreveport, La.) purchased a Burroughs Transit Machine nearly two years ago. This is what they say about the Numerical System and the Burroughs:

"We could not devise a plan whereby our remittance forms would be improved in neatness or the work more accurate.

"We feel safe in saying that our operating expenses are cut in half.

"The system as a whole is the height of our ambition and the Burroughs Transit Machine is the Backbone of that system."

The American Bankers' Association has approved the numerical way as the best way. And individual bankers find it best and cheapest.

Depressing six keys on a Burroughs Transit Machine writes the longest numerical bank name and address in the United States.

On a Burroughs Transit Machine only 12 strokes were required to write a certain transit item in full; on a typewriter the same item, abbreviated to the bone and with punctuation left out, required 44 strokes.

On a typewriter you have to write ciphers and spaces—on a Burroughs both are automatic.

Time costs money and the Burroughs Transit Machine will cut in half the time spent in handling Transit work in your bank.

And the same machine will handle 44 other kinds of bank figure work—it's a regular Burroughs plus a Transit machine.

Just figure up one day's cost of handling Transit work in your bank; then multiply half the cost of that time by three hundred banking days; you will know, then, how much a Burroughs Transit Machine would save you in a year.

You know what your present Burroughs will do—let us send a man to show you what this Burroughs will do—without cost or risk or obligation.

INVESTMENT BANKERS CONVENTION

Plans are rapidly going forward for the second annual convention of the Investment Bankers Association of America to be held at the Blackstone hotel, Chicago, on October 28th, 29th and 30th. Among the speakers who will have prominent places on the program are James J. Hill of St. Paul, Minn., former president of the Great Northern railroad, who will speak on "Railroad Financing of the Future;" Samuel Insull, president of the Commonwealth Edison Company of Chicago, who will speak on "Electrical Financing;" Edmund D. Fisher, deputy comptroller of the city of New York, who will give an address on municipal financing; Prof. Wm. A. Scott, director of the School of Commerce, University of Wisconsin, on "Investment versus Commercial Banking;" George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago; J. Laurence Laughlin, of the University of Chicago; a representative of the United States postoffice department, and others soon to be announced.

The general committee in charge of the convention, chairman of which is H. L. Stuart, is leaving nothing undone to provide for a successful reception of the five hundred delegates and guests who will attend from all parts of the United States and Canada.

Vice-President L. B. Franklin of the association is chairman of the eastern committee, which is making elaborate plans for two special trains to carry the eastern contingents to the Chicago gathering. Herbert Witherspoon, member of the board of governors from Spokane, is directing a special train which will carry the delegates from the Pacific Northwest.

J. E. Blunt, Jr., of Chicago, chairman of hotel arrangements, reports a large advance demand for hotel reservations.

The social features of the convention, announced by James L. Martin, chairman of entertainment, include an automobile ride on Tuesday afternoon, October 28th, for visiting delegates and guests. A smoker and vaudeville will take place at the Blackstone hotel, headquarters of the convention, in the evening of the same day.

Wednesday afternoon, October 29th, will include visits to local points of interest within the scene of the convention. The social feature of the evening will be a theater party for all in attendance at the convention.

The second annual banquet, arranged by Chairman John J. Abbott and the banquet committee, will be held at the Congress hotel on Thursday evening, October 30th, and will conclude the convention. Preparations are being made for an attendance of over one thousand.

President Geo. B. Caldwell of the association, speaking of the forthcoming event, states: "Our meeting is attracting widespread interest inasmuch as the association begins the second year of its brief existence. Our activities as an organization of investment bankers, devoted to the main purpose of protecting the public and safeguarding the moral responsibility of our profession, have gained for the Investment Bankers Association a significant identity.

"The business of the approaching convention will commence Tuesday with committee and board of governors' meetings. The body of our organization will convene for the morning sessions that follow. The reports, addresses, and discussions, in light of the past year's endeavors, are certain to launch the association into a year of increased service."

The First National at Mason City recently purchased school bonds of $12,500. The bonds were purchased at par.

SECOND NATIONAL CONFERENCE ON CURRENCY REFORM

There will be held in New York City October 14th and 15th, the Second National Conference on Currency Reform, the general topic being reform of the American banking system. A. Barton Hepburn, chairman of the A. B. A. Currency Commission, is a member of the executive committee.

At three o'clock the centralization of banking and mobilization of reserves will be taken up, and Wednesday morning at Earl Hall, Columbia University, "The Elasticity of Credit" will be the topic.

Wednesday evening at seven o'clock a banquet will be held at the Hotel Astor. Senator Owen has been secured to discuss the federal reserve act. Carter Glass was down on the program but was obliged to cancel. H. Parker Willis of the Journal of Commerce, A. Barton Hepburn of the Chase National, New York, and O. M. W. Sprague of Harvard University, are down for addresses on the scope and organization of the proposed regional reserve banks. Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines has been secured to speak on the mobilization of reserves, after which there will be a general discussion led by A. Piatt Andrew of Gloucester, Mass.

The speakers for the first subject will be announced later; those for the latter topic are Joseph French Johnson, New York University; E. W. Kemmerer, Princeton University. Discussion will be led by Edward B. Howe and Irving T. Bush, New York City.

At the fourth session "Foreign and Domestic Exchange Functions of the Regional Banks" will be the theme and problems affecting foreign and domestic exchange will be taken up. Those who will talk are Alexander D. Noyes, John E. Gardin, J. A. Nelson, W. M. Van Deusen, Benjamin Strong, Jr., and Joseph T. Talbert.

At the banquet at the Hotel Astor the Hon. Nelson W. Aldrich will deliver an address.

LONDON PAPER ON WORLD'S MONETARY SITUATION

Regarding the money market, the London Statist of September 20th, says: "If in addition to the demand for gold for Egypt already being experienced, the prospective demand for India, the probable demand for Brazil, and the usual demand for cash for our own country, always large in the last five months, there is any considerable demand for gold either for the Continent or for the United States, it is obvious that the supplies available will be none too large, and that the comparatively easy condition of the market recently looked forward to will not be witnessed. It should be specially noted that Germany has been most careful to refrain from causing any disturbance to the money markets when purchasing gold in the current year, and that American bankers are always anxious to act considerately. Nevertheless, it is obvious that the new situation which has arisen in consequence of the rise in the price of cotton and of jute, and the maintenance of the prices of foodstuffs, requires to be carefully handled, notwithstanding the strong position of the Bank of England and the large amounts of gold which will come to hand week by week from South Africa.

"Although in well-informed quarters it is now thought possible we may not get through without a 5 per cent bank rate, we do not look for anything like severe monetary stringency. Everyone is anxious to avoid disturbing the international money markets to cause any needless pressure for money."

NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL LETTER

Northwestern National of Minneapolis in its financial letter, in speaking of the business situation, says:

"Merchants in our territory, both wholesale and retail, report a continued increase in their business. Collections, too, as a whole are showing signs of greater briskness and general indications point to a satisfactory fall business in all lines.

"Interest rates continue firm at six per cent although there have been some reports of offerings from the eastern states at a slightly shaded rate. These reports are offset, however, by brokers' offerings at six per cent, which means that the borrower is paying six per cent and commission. No material change in interest rates can be predicted on the present market.

"The tariff bill has been passed by the senate and will probably spend some little time in the hands of a conference committee. It is, of course, fully expected that as soon as an agreement between the two houses of congress can be reached, the president will affix his signature and the measure will become a law.

"The probable effects of this bill on various industries have been to a large extent discounted by manufacturers, who have for some time been avoiding commitments which would entail loss in case of a change in the tariff.

"There is every reason to suppose that as soon as the new law becomes effective the manufacturers who have been running on close schedule will resume former activities, making whatever readjustments in their methods and prices as are found to be necessary under the new tariff bill."

PITY FOR OTHERS CAUSES DOWNFALL

Christopher J. McHugh's self-abnegation and sympathy for others in financial straits resulted in his own downfall and disgrace, according to friends who have known him for years. As cashier of the Cadillac (Mich.) State Bank, he had easy access to the funds, and it is said on every hand that his speculations were not for selfish purposes, but always to help out others. During the fifteen years he has been dipping into the bank's treasury he has been a plain and ever careful liver. Although a number of persons interested in the bank have lost heavily through the deposed cashier's dishonesty no word of bitterness is heard against him. McHugh was arrested last week on a charge of embezzling the bank's funds. Henry Knowlton, vice-president of the bank, has been elected to succeed McHugh as cashier.

GRAND RAPIDS BANK INSTALLS DINING ROOM

The Grand Rapids (Mich.) National City Bank has installed a dining room in the bank basement where employees of that bank, the City Trust and Savings Bank and the branch of the City Trust and Savings Bank in the Porter block may obtain lunch, this replacing the custom of providing the employees with lunch money. The new dining room has a kitchen in addition with a large range and refrigerators.

CONANT TESTIFIES BEFORE SENATE COMMITTEE

Charles A. Conant of New York in his testimony before the senate banking and currency committee this week said that whether the banks or the government should issue money was merely an academic question. Personally from an economic standpoint, he said that he would prefer to have bank notes, but it makes not much practice difference. He said that the government should limit itself to regulating the parity, uniformity and stability of money, but that it should not regulate the volume of currency. The volume of money should be regulated through the banks by business needs. Speaking more specifically concerning the bill, Mr. Conant said that mortgages are almost the worst security for commercial loans, because they are not readily convertible. Nor is it wise, he continued, to base issue of currency on negotiable industrial securities. Every country has tried this and failed, he said. The difficulty is that the only elasticity to such currency is due to falling markets. In answer to a question of Senator Bristow, the witness said that he favored in general the plan proposed in the Glass bill for protecting the reserves in the United States. Senator Bristow thought that the government could accomplish the same thing by the sale of short-term notes, or the purchase of gold in the open market. Mr. Conant said that theoretically the government could do this, but it would be too cumbersome an operation. Mr. Conant acknowledged that theoretically a central bank system would be the best, but was of the opinion that the same end was accomplished through the regional system with a central board of control. He denied that the United States was too large in territory for a central bank, referring to the new bank of India. In answer to Senator Bristow as to what were the objections to a central bank, Mr. Conant said that he had none. He added:

"In New York you must establish a reserve institution large enough to cope with the strong financial district there, whether central or regional, or you are going to cut your own throat."

The witness said that the federal reserve board was the one feature that would hold the proposed system together. He said that he approved it in the main, and further that he would not assert that political control would be for ulterior motives. However, he said, that he would fear in the beginning that political appointees to the board would not be in touch with the situation and that the system would not be safe until the board had gotten in touch with the facts.

At this point the witness was drawn into a discussion of farm mortgages with Senator Bristow. Mr. Conant asserted that the demand for bonds or mortgages did not correspond with the demand for currency, but short-time paper was a better guide to the need of immediate issue of more currency.

Senator Bristow said that unless a bank was permitted to discount farm mortgages just as it would be permitted to discount prime commercial paper under the proposed system, it would be legislating in favor of the merchant and discriminating against the farmer. Mr. Conant asserted that such legislation would be discriminating against no one, but that farm mortgages must be dealt with differently because it is a different class of security from a commercial loan. He said that President Wilson has promised to ask for legislation later on the rural credits idea.

Senator Hitchcock, one of the democratic members who has been opposing the pending measure, interrupted. "The question has become very large with me," he said, "whether there should be a board with arbitrary powers to expand or contract credits."

Mr. Conant said that the bill did not grant arbitrary powers to the board, because the exercise of such powers depended upon other restriction named in the bill. Mr. Hitchcock argued that the gold reserve had nothing to do with the need of money and that, therefore, the federal reserve board should not be given power to fix the discount rate. Mr. Conant asserted that the importation and exportation of gold is an indication of the commercial needs. In this assertion he was supported by Senator Weeks.

CHESTER (ILL.) BANK MAKES IMPROVEMENTS

The First State Bank of Chester, Ill., has completed improvements which give it one of the handsomest banking rooms in southern Illinois. The bank is up-to-date in every way and the citizens of the thriving town of Chester are to be congratulated upon possessing so excellent a bank with which to transact their business.

NORTH DAKOTA BANKS GAIN

State banks of North Dakota have increased their resources by $490,185.65 during the last year, according to calculations based on the statements issued August 9, 1913, and September 4, 1912. The total resources of such banks at present amount to $62,466,112.05, against $61,965,926.40.

Hall of Iowa, secretary-treasurer. On the board of control will be Robert E. Wait of Arkansas, W. C. McFadden of North Dakota and C. S. Webster of Vermont.

The following are the new officers of the clearing house section: President, J. K. Ottley, Atlanta; vice-president, A. O. Wilson, St. Louis. John McHugh of Sioux City was elected a member of the executive committee and Stoddard Jess of Los Angeles added.

New officers of the savings bank section are J. F. Sartori, Los Angeles, president; William E. Knox, New York, vice-president.

F. H. Goff of Cleveland was elected president of the Trust Company section; Ralph W. Cutler of Hartford, Conn., vice-president, and John H. Mason of Philadelphia, chairman of the executive committee.

"RANDOM NOTES OF BOSTON"

Every delegate to the A. B. A. convention in Boston this week was presented with a copy of "Random Notes of Boston," a book published by the H. B. Humphrey Co., and written by H. P. Dowst. The book strives to present in a true Boston atmosphere what its title indicates.

COUNTY BANKERS CRITICISE CURRENCY BILL

Country bankers registered their opposition to the proposed currency bill at a meeting in Boston on Monday. W. J. Bailey of Atchison, Kan., their chairman, selected McLane Tilton, Jr., of Pell City, Ala., George W. Rogers of Little Rock, and W. B. Harrison of Enid, Okla., as a committee to go to Washington and lay the views of the bankers before congress.

FENTON SEES BRIGHT OUTLOOK

W. T. Fenton, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic, Chicago, said this week at Boston:

"My own observations have led to the conclusion that 1913 will go down in history as a banner year, even exceeding the 1912 record, which far surpassed all totals in business. The agricultural districts have been prosperous as a result of good demand for farm products at high prices.

"Owing to tariff uncertainty merchants have been running with low supplies, their shelves being practically empty, as they have been replenishing only on the hand-to-mouth basis. Now that the tariff bill has become law, I look for a big bulge in general business conditions. "There was a very rapid movement of grain this year to the seaboard, which has made crop financing a simple proposition owing to the rapidity with which our exports could be turned into exchange."

Bankers Honored at Boston

ARTHUR REYNOLDS
DES MOINES, IA.

J. F. SARTORI
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

At Boston this week the American Bankers Association elected as its president Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National, and the Savings Bank Section selected J. F. Sartori, president of the Security Trust and Savings of Los Angeles, as its head.

Both of these gentlemen have been associated with the affairs of the A. B. A. for a long time and have served this powerful organization with marked distinction and credit. The election of Mr. Reynolds is but a slight indication of the regard in which he is held by the American bankers. No better equipped man could possibly have been selected to head the national body.

Mr. Sartori is one of the best known financiers in the country. The Savings Bank Section is fortunate in having chosen so competent a leader.

COUNTRY BANKERS TO BE HEARD

Senator Owen has sent word that his committee will give the country bankers a hearing next Monday on the currency bill. The original committee of three will be enlarged to include one representative from each state.

ILLINOIS BANKERS TO APPEAR AT WASHINGTON

A delegation of Illinois bankers will appear before the senate banking and currency committee to-day, including S. B. Montgomery of Quincy, J. S. Aisthorpe of Cairo, George Woodruff of Joliet, B. F. Harris of Champaign, Asher R. Cox of Xenia, H. D. Seaton of East St. Louis and J. M. Krebs of Carmi.

SIoux CITY BANKER RESIGNS

John L. Mitchell has resigned his position as vice-president and a director of the Live Stock National of Sioux City, Iowa. He has not as yet decided definitely upon his future but expects to remain in that territory and to engage in the banking business, with which he has been identified in northwestern Iowa for nineteen years.

YOUNGEST DELEGATE AT THE CON- VENTION

The youngest delegate to the A. B. A. convention was John Carmody, Jr., son of John Carmody, cashier of the Perry Savings, Brunswick, Iowa. His parents declare that he stood the long trip admirably and that he is "some" traveler. The youngster proudly sported a delegate's badge on his little coat bearing the word "Iowa."

FIFTY YEARS WITH BANK

Herman Hunicke, cashier of the German Savings Association, St. Louis, on Saturday of last week celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his connection with the bank. Mr. Hunicke became cashier in 1904. He started with the institution a half century ago as clerk and messenger boy and has risen through all the positions to his present one.

State Auditor Brady has issued a permit to Paul A. Hazard, James W. Eastland and Geo. P. Vosbrink for the incorporation of the Broadway State Bank of Chicago with capital stock of $200,000.

THE big Chicago-Boston Special—23 cars in all—was the best ever. On time to the minute at every stop, and the last word in equipment throughout.

TOTAL number of passengers, one-third being ladies, was 345. Assistant General Passenger Agent Clare Hartigan, New York Central Lines, chaperoned one of the sections and George K. Thompson of "Century" fame looked after the other.

BOTH made many friends for themselves and for the system.

GENERAL MANAGER FOGG of the great Copley-Plaza, Boston, in response to special request from Manager Stevens of the LaSalle hotel, Chicago, fixed up the western bankers promptly and comfortably.

THE Copley-Plaza is a masterpiece, and hereafter will be a rival of the LaSalle in the esteem of the financial wayfarer.

THE far-outstanding social event of the week in Boston was the exclusive banquet of the Council Club, a haven for those who have served the association on the Big Council.

COLONEL SULLIVAN as president was the toastmaster, in which capacity he is unrivalled. For flowery figures of speech and tasteful, tactful introductions of speakers he is a genius of the first order.

THE speaking part of the banquet started off in a most unusual way.

MAYOR FITZGERALD began his speech of welcome by singing a song with full band accompaniment and in "grand" style.

W. R. CREER of Cleveland, a "basso-bijingo," was at the speakers' table and springing up threw his arm about the mayor's shoulders and joined in the song.

BUT that wasn't all. Festus J. Wade, who spoke to the toast "The Middle West," was surprised that Mayor Fitzgerald sang in English.

MR. WADE sang one in pure Gaelic, which brought down the house. Neither did he finish the banker-singing novelty, for Mr. Creer offered his toast speaking with a Gaelic song.

It was a great night for the Irish. Even George M. Reynolds threatened to sing, but happily that part of his toast was averted.

HE talked on one of his pet hobbies, "The American Bankers Association," and reached a high plane of eloquence, which, with him, is proof of his deep interest in a subject.

CHAMBERLAIN of Texas is the new president of the club, and Lucius Teter of Chicago, who has the habit, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

OGAN C. MURRAY made a fine appeal for courage in meeting the exigencies of the Washington problem in legislation.

Formerly National Bank Examiner

Commercial Paper and Investments

Established 1904 60 Wall St., New York Member A. B. A.

MRS. CASHIER WILLARD of the First National, Fulton, N. Y., "toasted" the gentlemen in a poem which was read in a voice as low and sweet as any "taffy" that men ever get.

IT was a great evening and set a new high-water mark in such events.

WORLD-CHAMPION OUIMET was laying for a game with S. H. Burnham of Lincoln. Burnham's fame had preceded him as a man who had given "Chick" Evans a stroke on the long holes.

SO he did, and it is said it cost another banker in Lincoln a couple of hundred to get his "nephew" to come on and play the match.

THE negotiations were somewhat long and difficult as Mr. Burnham is conservative at "a ball a hole."

FINALLY he did give Mr. Haskell's nephew a stroke on the long holes. Mr. Burnham was a little surprised to find so many of his former victims on the links that day.

AT the end of three holes he began to wonder. At the drive on the tenth he inquired very acidly, "Young man, where do you teach?"

THEN the gallery let loose. Mr. Burnham is consoled by the fact that they had to go pretty high to get a man who could trim him.

L. E. PIERSON and F. O. Watts spent a week touring from New York over to Boston and about two days locating the Copley-Plaza and keeping out of the never ending excavations for the subway.

MRS. WATTS and Mrs. Pierson were of the party and enjoyed the outing and its association hugely.

YOU remember we told you of E. J. Bowman coming early to Chicago lest something should "get by" him.

WELL, nothing did, and the bicycle cop was like minded. Bowman will see Judge Fry on his way back to Anaconda. That new 1914 Winton Six "does it so easily," says Bowman, that he didn't "hear" the fracture of the speed limit when it occurred.

PRESIDENT W. G. EDENS of good roads movement fame has interceded for his erring brother.

THE committee on agriculture, which would have been a matter of routine as a committee of none but council members, is to be a commission with the co-ordinate powers of self preservation with the currency commission.

THE "great fight" against the new constitution was averted by agreeing that sections may have one additional officer as an ex officio member of council for the first 1,000 members.

REALLY the chapter boys will score first and perhaps the trust companies never.

WE should worry! The A. I. B. youngsters are the best ever, and their Prime Minister George E. Allen, can get about when things are being done without a guide book.

J. H. PUELICHER (go-as-you-please when you pronounce it if you are not German) was very proud to escort President Dreher LIKEWISE he kept his camera busy getting views of the famous places.

"WELCOME, my Brother Moses," said Joe Hirsh. "Thou art no Gentile." Hirsh easily is the wit of the A. B. A.

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich., has invited Mr. Edens to come over for an address. It was just outside of Traverse City that W. G. struck in life as a farm hand. It will be a pleasure to go back as a banquet speaker of note.

W. B. HARRISON, Oklahoma, McLane W. Tilton, Pell City, Ala., and George W. Rogers of Little Rock, acted for Chairman W. J. Bailey in choosing the Washington committee for the country bankers' conference, held here in a crowded hall.

GEORGE ROGERS was the "bomb thrower" who saved the day with his substitute resolutions. The whole thing was tactfully handled.

EX-GOVERNOR BAILEY is a master hand at the presiding officer's job and Rogers has no superior as a convincing public speaker. He is fearless, independent and resourceful and just as alert as they come.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS spent a few days on a famous 14,000 acre farm up on Lake Champlain and came to Boston a full-fledged farming "bug."

THE Boston Convention indorsed in full, after a very lively session, the full report of the Chicago Currency Commission.

ALL extraneous talk was removed from the minutes and a clear record resulted.

THE new R. E. James Constitution was adopted with allowing an additional member of council to sections with 1,000 members.

ALSO in changing "Shall" to "May" in an important clause relating to councilmanic control of section funds.

PRESIDENT ROLLIN P. GRANT of the big Irving National, New York, had his car at Boston and kept it busy giving flying special trips to bankers.

HE had a chauffeur new to Boston, but steering partly by scent and partly by compass he could find any place demanded.

HE said the shortest block he had found was two feet less in length than his seven passenger car. The crookedest street was tied in a knot.

SECRETARY W. W. BOWMAN, of Kansas, was re-elected vice-president of the secretaries section so that the big chair might be held in the East for a year. W. J. Henry of New York got the job.

SECRETARY HALL, of Iowa, will be secretary-treasurer this year. He likely will carry on the bulletin for which Secretary Harrison set a high mark.

BIG men from the coast! Where can you match the California delegation headed by J. F. Sartori, Stoddard Jess and James K. Lynch. Big trees are not the only product.

MR. SARTORI is head of the savings bank section and one of the ablest and most successful savings bankers in the whole country.

TWO of the West's strongest types are Frank Knox of Salt Lake, and Harry M. Rubey of Colorado.

THE Boston committee on arrangements was the best ever. Really there hasn't been anything approaching it, the nearest being Los Angeles.

THERE wasn't a moment's delay about any request covering auto rides, railway reservations and tickets, hotel rooms, souvenirs, reserved seats, etc.

YOU couldn't conjure up a request that would cause a moment's delay. If you had, "Tom," Beale, Jr., would solve the riddle while you were stating it.

REMARKABLE people are the Beals, both father and son. Beal, Sr., was head of all as president of the entertaining clearing house banks, and Beal, Jr., was general field officer, floor manager, or any other synonym for such titles.

THE NATIONAL SHAWMUT, "The Largest Bank in New England," was the Mecca for the tourists. By clever advance publicity it assumed and held the center of the stage, spot light and all.

THE FIRST NATIONAL ran a buffet luncheon (for men) and a tea (for the ladies) the entire week. They made you welcome and very happy by doing it artistically.

THE hospitality of the whole Boston Convention Week was of the generous, unshrinking kind. Nothing was offered effusively, but the system was so carefully worked out that one didn't feel the attention nor were his wishes ever questioned.

NEITHER were the six-day iron-clad hotel reservations enforced. Probably it was intended to restrain over-reservation by those not too certain of their intentions to attend.

THERE was no boosting up of rates either, and the service was always commended by those who "know."

JOSEPH CHAPMAN broke everybody's heart by refusing the vice-presidency of the old A. B. A.

MEN cried over it and Vice-President Arthur Reynolds made an offer to try "to keep Chapman in the work," the human immensity of which long will be remembered.

MR. CHAPMAN could not fail to heed the request of his aged superior—Chairman of the Board Dunwoody—to pull out of outside things so that he (Dunwoody) might go away in an effort to get over a sudden malady.

MR. CHAPMAN promptly quit the council, the agricultural committee and all other entangling alliances to "settle down."

RUN ON KENTUCKY BANK

Louisville—A heavy run of depositors on the Kentucky Title Savings Bank and Trust Company started Tuesday, which was said to be due to a rumor that the bank had suspended payment. First run was by laborers, but has extended to general population, including hundreds of women of the better class. At the end of the banking hours Tuesday a notice was posted stating the bank would remain open until depositors are paid and payment was continued. The bank was examined by the Kentucky banking department very recently, and officials say there is absolutely nothing wrong with finances.

PITTSBURGH REORGANIZATION PLAN

C. Murray, receiver of the First-Second National Bank of Pittsburgh, has presented to Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane the plan evolved by a committee for the reorganization of the bank. This contemplated re-opening the institution under entirely new management with a capital and surplus of $5,000,000. The depositors, it is said, will be paid in full, either in cash or under resumption agreement not to draw out their money except after stated periods.

LINCOLN TRUST AND SAVINGS OPENS

On Monday of this week Lincoln Trust and Savings opened for business at 3936 Lincoln Avenue, Chicago. The bank is capitalized at $200,000 and possesses surplus of $20,000. It is organized under state laws, being formerly known as the Lincoln Savings Bank.

O. B. Conklin is president; Theo. G. Behrens, vice-president and cashier, and H. O. Anderson, assistant cashier. The following are the directors: Henry Severin, real estate; Fred O. Schmidt, druggist; Peter Reinberg, wholesale florist; Otto H. Pann, Dairy Farm Products Co.; George Kersten, judge criminal court; Wm. J. Michel, Tarrant Foundry Co.; August Torpe, Jr., insurance; Oscar B. Conklin and Theo. G. Behrens.

DAVENPORT BANKER ATTRACTING ATTENTION

Foremost among Iowa's live bankers is F. B. Yetter, cashier of the Iowa National of Davenport. Much of the remarkable growth of the bank is attributed to the able management of Mr. Yetter. Mr. Yetter has a wide acquaintance and is active in Davenport's affairs. He has been connected with the bank almost six years, entering its employ as a teller. After two years with the institution he was elected cashier and a director. Last year he was vice-president of the Iowa Bankers Association.

DETROIT CLEARINGS

Detroit's bank clearings for the month of September aggregated $106,314,821.54, against $87,870,671.18 in September last year, and $76,512,763 in September, 1911. The increase over the similar month of 1912 is $18,444,150.36, or nearly 20.1 per cent, while the gain over 1911 is $29,742,058.

Bankers of Nation Hold Convention at Boston

Bankers by the thousands poured into Boston the latter part of last week and the fore part of this week to attend the thirty-ninth annual convention of the American Bankers Association, one of the most important in the history of the organization. Probably the topic which came in for the greater portion of the attention of the financiers was the proposed currency law, although matters pertaining to improved agriculture and vocational education were not slighted by any means.

Holding the convention in the Hub met with universal favor on account of the numer-the past year and the committee on constitutional revision submitted its draft for a revised constitution.

The bankers were welcomed by Thomas P. Beal, president of the Boston Clearing House. Arthur Reynolds combined the response with his annual address and there was read a memorial to the late Charles H. Huttig, prepared by E. F. Swinney of Kansas City.

Thursday morning was the agricultural session. Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis, chairman of the committee on agricultural and financial development and education, told of the activities of the committee since the Detroit convention.

It would be difficult to find better speakers than those secured for the Thursday morning session. A combination like James J. Hill, Dr. George E. Vincent, president of the University of Minnesota, and Sam Jordan, county agent, Pettis county, Mo., would be hard to beat.

The Wednesday and Thursday sessions of the convention were held in Symphony hall.

Trust Company Meeting

The trust company meeting was called to order in the grand ball room of the Copley-Plaza hotel by President William C. Poillon, vice-president of the Bankers Trust, New York. Addresses were delivered by the Hon. Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts on the relation of the government to the trust company, and Roberts Walker, a New York attorney, on "Additional Legislative Regulation of Corporate Reorganizations."

There was a general discussion by the members present on advantages of co-operative publicity of trust company functions, annuities and pension funds for employees and a model trust company law.

Officers of the section during the past year, in addition to President Poillon, were: vice-president, F. H. Goff, president Cleveland Trust; chairman executive committee, Ralph W. Cutler, president Hartford (Conn.) Trust; secretary, Philip S. Babcock, 5 Nassau Street, New York.

Savings Bank Section

The meeting of the savings bank section of the association was presided over by President Rome C. Stephenson, vice-president of the St. Joseph County Savings, South Bend, Ind. At the morning session Edmund D. Fisher, deputy comptroller of New York City, talked on the relation between fixed and fluid credit, and in the afternoon there was an address on the postal savings bank system by Carter B. Keene, director of the postal savings system, Washington, D. C.

Officers of the savings bank section during the past year, besides President Stephenson, were: vice-president, J. F. Sartori, president of the Security Trust and Savings, Los Angeles; chairman executive committee, William E. Knox, comptroller Bowery Savings, New York; secretary, E. G. McWilliam, New York.

Clearing House and Secretaries' Sections

At the clearing house meeting Raymond B. Cox, assistant cashier of the Fourth National, New York, told of needed reforms in check collection laws and methods, and Carl Meyer, a Chicago lawyer, explained the legal status of the clearing house. At the meeting of ous historical points of interest in and near the city, not to mention the excellent hotel facilities.

As usual, Monday, the first day, was given to committee meetings and a session of the executive council and Tuesday the various sections of the association held their meetings.

Convention Proper Meets on Wednesday

The first session of the convention proper occurred Wednesday, being called to order by Acting President Reynolds of Des Moines, at which time reports were received from the general secretary, Fred E. Farnsworth of New York, Treasurer J. Fletcher Farrell of Chicago, Thomas B. Paton, general counsel, New York, and T. J. Davis of Cincinnati, chairman of the executive council. There also was a report from the standing protective committee and the currency commission. In the afternoon the sections told of the work accomplished during the secretaries' section Andrew Smith of Indiana discussed the limits of the secretary's field. George H. Richards of Minnesota told his brother secretaries of "The Secretary's Part in the Better Farming Movement."

Officers of the clearing house section the past year were, president, Ralph Van Vechten, vice-president Continental and Commercial National, Chicago; vice-president, John K. Ottley, vice-president Fourth National, Atlanta, Ga.; chairman executive committee, A. O. Wilson, vice-president State National, St. Louis; secretary, O. Howard Wolfe, New York.

Officers of the secretaries' section were, president, W. C. McFadden, North Dakota; first vice-president, W. W. Bowman, Kansas; second vice-president, P. W. Hall, Iowa; secretary-treasurer, W. B. Harrison, Oklahoma.

bankers in Boston pleasant was overlooked by the local bankers. One hundred automobiles were at the call of the delegates and their families for three-hour sight seeing excursions from Monday morning until Thursday evening. Signs were erected all about the historical section of the city to describe the stirring events which took place there in revolutionary days and guides were provided to conduct groups about for visits in old Boston, Cambridge and in near-by cities famous for their big industrial institutions.

Tuesday evening a ball was held in Symphony hall, and there was a buffet supper in Horticultural hall. Wednesday evening meetings were held in the oldest churches and in Faneuil hall. These meetings were historical in character. Ex-Lieutenant Governor Luce delivered an address on the historic value of the "Cradle of Liberty."

There also were meetings in the Old South meeting house, Christ church and Kings chapel. Thursday evening there was a concert by the Symphony orchestra in Symphony hall and Friday morning three large excursion steamers took the convention visitors on a tour of Boston harbor. In the afternoon there was a New England clambake in Paragon park.

Address of Acting President Reynolds

Mr. Reynolds devoted the major portion of his remarks to a synopsis of the activities of the association during the past year, winding up with a discussion of the importance of the pending financial legislation.

Speaking of general conditions, Mr. Reynolds said:

"This has been a year of apprehension on the part of financial institutions. A change in the government administration has introduced new policies and new legislation, which in themselves have been disturbing factors, and, coupled with an unsatisfactory foreign situation created unrest and uncertainty in the earlier part of the year, but the conservative management of our financial institutions, and the wise co-operation of the secretary of the treasury, together with reasonably favorable crop conditions in most parts of the country, and such liquidations as must come from time to time to prevent undue inflation, have restored confidence, which has produced a more stable condition in business."

After strongly criticising the Glass-Owen bill, Mr. Reynolds closed his address by saying:

"I look with entire confidence upon the future of the association. With a large increase in membership each year and a more economical handling of our affairs, as indicated by our strong financial position; with one of the most intelligent bodies of men in the world willing at all times to give their time and labor for the upbuilding of the association; with a cause reflecting the highest ideals and noblest sentiments worthy the co-operation of every member, the future of our association should be all we desire.

"In my opinion, the smaller working bodies of our association are in splendid condition and doing good work.

"If there is a question of our future or a just criticism, it lies in the fact that while our members attend the annual conventions in increasing numbers each year, yet they are inclined to leave the business of the association to the more enthusiastic who attend the meetings and carry on the work. While we realize that they are heartily in accord with what is done, yet the results would have greater weight and wield a wider influence if a large majority of the members of the association would attend the business meetings and would take a more active part in the deliberations.

"I believe, then, the most important work of the association is to provide a program for our annual meetings which will encourage attendance and co-operation and discourage all conflicting entertainment."

A New Book for Banks

Well secured short term bonds, issued to mature in from one to five years, are attractive investments for the reserve funds of banks. Such securities, particularly of the larger issues, are apt to have a closer and quicker market owing to the relatively early maturity, and are not subject to extreme fluctuation in price.

We have compiled a book which describes the essential features of the current issues of short term securities. A copy will be sent to any bank or banker on request.

membership of 14,100 at the end of the fiscal year, August 31st, a gain of 777. Illinois has a total of 881 A. B. A. members and is second only to New York. Pennsylvania is a close third with 875.

Secretary Farnsworth called attention to the fact that 1913 is the second year the A. B. A. met in the Hub.

At that time Lyman J. Gage, president of the association, presided. The total membership was 1,466 and the time of the convention was largely given up to a discussion of banking and currency legislation. A Boston banker, the Hon. Charles B. Hall, then cashier of the Boston National, was chosen president of the association at the first convention of the A. B. A. held at Saratoga Springs in 1875.

Treasurer's Report

J. Fletcher Farrell of Chicago, in his second report as treasurer of the association, showed a cash balance on September 1st of this year amounting to $5,479.29. The surplus funds of the association are invested in stocks and bonds, which are deposited with the Bankers Trust Company of New York City under the control of the executive committee. The trust company collects the interest on these securities and remits to the treasurer for the credit of the association account.

The financial condition of the association, said the report, is better than it has been for four years.

Report of the Law Committee

The law committee of the association, by Pierre Jay, its chairman, reported the enactment during the past year of the uniform negotiable instruments act in Arkansas, Indiana, Minnesota, South Dakota and Vermont; the uniform warehouse receipts act in Minnesota, Nevada, Oregon, South Dakota, Vermont and Washington; the uniform bills of lading act in New Jersey; the act to punish false statements for credit in Delaware, Indiana, Maine, Massachusetts (changed from association draft), Utah and Vermont; the act to punish derogatory statements affecting banks in Connecticut, Ohio (act of 1910 amended), Oregon and Washington; the act to punish the giving of checks or drafts without funds in Arkansas (changed from association draft), Indiana (supplementary law), Maine (changed from association draft), Missouri (changed from association draft), Oklahoma (different from the association draft), Texas (different from association draft) and Utah; the act punishing burglary with explosives in South Dakota; the act fixing the liability of banks for payment of forged or raised checks in Vermont;

the act authorizing payment of deposits in two names in Kansas, Utah and Washington; the act providing competency of bank notaries in New York and Washington.

The committee recommended that the association approve a draft of an act to make uniform the law of transfer of shares of stock of corporations technically known as the uniform stock transfer act.

Constitutional Committee Reports

The committee on constitutional revision, of which Col. Robert E. James of Easton, Pa., was the chairman, said in the beginning of its report that, with the exception of the declaration and article I, it would recommend changes in the entire instrument.

Some of the prominent changes recommended by the committee are as follows: That state vice-presidents elected by the members of the A. B. A. in the various states be not merely nominated by such associations as heretofore, the same to be true also of members of the executive council; modification of sectional representation on the council; that the executive council shall control disbursement of section

The institute now comprises sixty-four chapters containing a membership of 13,587, of whom 713 are members of the correspondence chapter. Correspondence instruction has become recognized as co-ordinate with chapter class work in practical education. The success of both class and correspondence instruction, however, depends upon recognition of the institute study course as the foundation of all institute work. Such failures as have been experienced in the past have been largely if not solely due to attempts to construct fantastic educational edifices upon the sands of aimless instead of upon the rock of systematic instruction. The institute study course contains the fundamental knowledge of banking and banking law that every banker must possess to achieve or merit any sort of success in the banking business. Such knowledge may be obtained from other sources than the institute. Thousands of bankers have acquired it through experience. The institute merely provides the easiest and most direct way. Nothing, however, can be successfully substituted for such knowledge, and the institute men who want to substitute something else for the institute study course are animated often, if not always, not so much by a desire to do other work as by a desire—perhaps sub-conscious—to do little or no work. Institute graduation is the only tangible result of institute work—the only work that can be analyzed and inventoried—and the number and character of institute graduates is the crucial test of institute achievements. Institute graduates now number 810, but institute graduation should be regarded as the beginning and not the end of institute education. In recognition of this fact the institute

Thursday's Speakers

S. M. Jordan of Pettis county, Mo., in his speech on "The County Agent," told of the work done in Pettis county towards the betterment of agriculture. "The county agent commonly is known as the manager of the farm bureau, which has become a sort of clearing house for the dissemination of those methods and plans that will best accomplish the results for each particular territory," said Mr. Jordan. He said that probably the most important event that had taken place in Pettis county was the establishment, by the United States department of agriculture, in an endeavor to clean up hog cholera from the county, of a station at Sedalia, and that a complete survey of the loss for the past two years in Pettis county alone approximated $750,000.

Many other things are called for from day to day in the way of visiting farms, planning crop rotations, selecting breeding animals, securing markets for seed grains and crops, building silos, diagnosing sick soils, identifying insect pests, settling disputes between landlord and tenant, securing places for farm hands and help for farmers, looking after the boys' corn contest work of the county, visiting the schools in co-operation with the county superintendent, and aiding teachers in introducing agriculture and domestic science into the schools, assisting in the planning of a system of waterworks or lights or other conveniences in the farm house, and preparing and giving lectures on all sorts of occasions. "One of the very important pieces of work that we have carried on is what we call 'Out on the Farm Meetings,' said Mr. Jordan. "Some good farm is selected where the farmer is making a success of especially some of his work, and in the forenoon the farm is looked over and methods talked about until the noon hour, then a dinner is spread on the lawn or in a grove, and as soon as dinner is cleared away the lecture and talks begin."

THE BOSTON CONVENTION

This week witnessed the thirty-ninth annual convention of the American Bankers Association. No more ideal city could have been selected for holding this great meeting and those who went to the Hub felt amply repaid, enjoying themselves every moment of the time.

The bankers felt keenly the loss of their beloved president, the late Charles H. Huttig of St. Louis. Mr. Huttig was a force in everything in which he was engaged, and his extraordinary ability spelled success for everything that touched his hands. His genial manner and unselfishness endeared him to the thousands who were fortunate enough to know him.

It is gratifying to note the substantial increase in the association's membership, which, at the end of the fiscal year, September 1st, was 14,100, a gain of 777; also the splendid financial condition as shown by Treasurer Farrell's report. During the past four years the books have exhibited a deficit on account of the large expenditures for the protective department in 1909 before the contract was made with the Burns Detective Agency. On September 1st of this year, however, there was a cash balance of $5,479.29 after paying all bills.

The various sections comprising the association have been active since the last year and the committees appointed are entitled to the fullest praise for what they have done and for devoting their time and energy in the interest of the association.

Year by year the American Bankers Association continues to grow in prestige and usefulness. The innumerable benefits which membership in the association offers are worth many times the annual dues.

The meeting at Boston was without doubt one of the most successful as well as important held in the history of the association. The entertainment features provided by the local bankers were of a highly enjoyable character and the efficient committees which had charge of the arrangements certainly are to be congratulated for their efforts.

The convention program was replete with interesting and instructive features, the speakers provided all being high class men. Secretary Fred E. Farnsworth was on the job early and late and the successful manner in which he looked after the convention details stamps him as a Class A secretary.

The revised constitution as recommended by the able committee of which Col. R. E. James of Easton, Pa., was chairman, was adopted and representation on the council provided for sections having 1,000 members, in addition to that first recommended by the committee.

The thirty-ninth annual meeting of the American Bankers Association long will be remembered by those present as one of the best they ever attended.

LARGER PAID CIRCULATION IN THE MIDDLE WEST THAN ANY THREE OF ITS COMPETITORS COMBINED

UNSUPERVISED BANKING

A system which permits indiscriminate use of the word "bank" and the operation of banking institutions without some sort of governmental supervision and inspection is a system which ought not to exist in any well regulated community. The business of banking is one of so technical a nature and one in whose successful conduct the public is so essentially interested that no one man or group of men should be allowed to engage in it without some sort of regulation and inspection. Assuming that the private banker is honest, the possibility of incompetence and inexperience, coupled with mistaken judgment at times, is sufficient to render adequate supervision highly desirable as well as imperative.

Fortunately this axiomatic principle has been recognized and its importance appreciated by a majority of the states in the Union. On the other hand there are some less progressive which have failed to heed the popular demand and have not enacted legislation along these lines, either through indifference of their legislatures or because any attempt in such a direction has met with organized opposition from those who have allowed themselves to be dominated by selfish considerations.

The press of the country is in favor of such a reform and the people want it. It would seem, therefore, that its accomplishment ought to be an easy matter. If the politicians made good in their campaign slogan of "Let the People Rule," we would have it and much of the suspicion with which banks are regarded would cease to exist.

It is difficult to imagine any logical argument against supervision. The majority of private bankers are honest and capable and ought to welcome an opportunity to take the public into their confidence and show it that their banks are being run properly. Such a plan would increase the business of the banks, because if a depositor knew that an institution in which he contemplated depositing his money was solvent and its methods of doing business subject to the criticism of disinterested parties he would feel like patronizing the bank.

Why can't Illinois wake up and join the ranks of the progressives?

Every attempt to regulate private banking in this state has met with failure and almost daily we see in the papers the pernicious results of this.

Those who are conducting their business as they should have nothing to fear; those who are not ought to be put out of business.

THE NECESSITY FOR BILLS OF LADING LEGISLATION

Among the chief legislative activities of the American Bankers Association have been its efforts to secure the enactment of a federal statute relating to bills of lading and the passage of uniform state laws governing the subject. In this respect Clay H. Hollister of Grand Rapids, Mich., chairman of the association's committee, has rendered valuable service, for which the A. B. A. is deeply grateful.

The work at Washington has not as yet been crowned with success. The Pomerene bill advocated by the bankers was referred to the senate committee on interstate commerce after having been reintroduced at the present session by Senator Pomerene. New Jersey is the only state in which a uniform bill of lading act was passed during the past year and there are ten other states which have such a statute on their books.

Probably there is no subject which affects the banking interests more than the uncertain legal status of a bill of lading. One of the principal objectionable features of which the bankers complain is the doctrine which prevails in all of the federal courts and in a number of the state courts that, although a bill of lading acknowledging the receipt of described goods is issued by the authorized agent of the carrier, and passes to a "bona fide" holder for value, who takes it relying upon the truth of the statements which it contains, the carrier is at liberty to show the fact, whenever it is a fact, that the agent never received the goods, but issued the bill through mistake or fraud, or as an accommodation to the shipper, and upon such showing free himself from responsibility on the ground that the agent had no authority to issue the bill of lading before the goods were received. The purpose of the bankers is to have enacted a uniform bills of lading act which will be in the nature of a code of the rules of law relating to the issue, transfer and redemption of bills of lading.

Bills of lading frequently are put up as collateral and there is an urgent need for legislation which would tend to make the bill uniformly more truly negotiable. The vagueness of their legal status, the indefinite degree of negotiability and the uncertainty of the rights and obligations of the parties have prevented these instruments from being considered by bankers as high-class bankable documents.

It is to be hoped that congress and the state legislatures will appreciate the importance of the situation and pass suitable laws.

NORTHWESTERN BANKERS—

YOUR GRAIN DRAFTS are drawn chiefly on Minneapolis. The utmost promptness in presenting them to the drawees is very important. The Northwestern is equipped to handle such drafts with the greatest despatch. Its morning mail sometimes brings in as much as $1,000,000 in this kind of paper alone. The drafts are presented for payment immediately after receipt and the proceeds passed through the same day's clearings. A prompt, definite settlement is thus secured. Each item receives careful, individual consideration. You are notified by wire at once if any difficulty arises. The completeness of the system of collecting as developed by The Northwestern is the result of its forty-one years' experience gained directly at the grain terminal. The total resources backing the bank's efforts are over $35,000,000.

to help this movement were dwelt upon briefly. In conclusion Mr. Jordan said:

"It is a fundamental principle that people borrow money to the greatest extent when times are prosperous. Under such conditions also the bank gets its very best security. When times are adverse people borrow just as little as they can get along with, and the security is often unsatisfactory when interest rates must be high. These things being true, it would become profitable for the banker to so arrange matters that the farmer can secure longer time on his loans, at a lower rate of interest, with an easier method of payment.

"Only a few years ago farmers secured the virgin soil at a low price, but to-day they are buying a depleted soil at a high price. It takes practically from four to six times as much to equip a farm for successful operation at the present time as it did forty years ago. There is not one farm in fifty that has sufficient working capital to make it as profitable as it should be and conserve the fertility of the soil at the same time. If the bankers, by bringing about the conditions referred to, could make the farmer more prosperous and his land more productive, the business of the town would prosper in the same ratio, and while the rates on land might be lower, more money would be used in that way as well as a very much greater amount in commercial loans. Certainly this very condition instituted would have one of the greatest possible tendencies to increase all conditions on the farm, because it would result in ownership. The condition in this country at the present time is that mortgage indebtedness on the farms is on the increase; under the plans by which these loans are arranged the payments never will be met by the returns from the land. Production per capita is on the decrease, land tenancy is on the increase. In Denmark 89 farmers out of every 100 own the land they till, but in this country only 60 out of every 100 are owners of their farms, and in this country our land was almost given to us only a few years ago. These are conditions that can be remedied through the training and the educating of the people, and it can be accomplished to a very great degree indeed by the bankers of the nation assisting and co-operating with the county agent."

James J. Hill of St. Paul denounced the currency bill strongly at the Thursday session and Dr. George E. Vincent said there are too few farmers. B. F. Harris of Champaign, Ill., gave an agricultural talk. Joseph Chapman also made a talk.

SAVINGS BANK SECTION

President Rome C. Stephenson of South Bend, Ind., in his annual address gave a brief history of the organization of the savings bank section at New Orleans, and said that to-day it enjoys the largest membership of any section in the parent association.

He outlined briefly some of the things which have been done by the section, such as providing its members with a book of savings bank forms; touched upon the segregation of savings deposits, postal savings banks and their effect upon the business of the banks, the finger print method of identification and currency matters.

Address on Postal Savings System

C. B. Keene, director of the postal savings system, explained its operation to the bankers and told of some of the advantages which it affords. "It places savings facilities at the very doors of those living in the remote sections," said the speaker, "and it also affords opportunity for safeguarding the savings of thousands who have absolute confidence in the government and will trust no other institution."

Mr. Keene said that no private enterprise has been affected injuriously by the postal savings system. Experience has proved to a mathematical certainty, he said, that the service has been a positive advantage to the banks. A systematic canvass made by the department developed the fact that no depositor had transferred his account under normal conditions from a bank to the postoffice; in fact, the tendency is to transfer accounts from the postoffice to the local banks.

Mr. Keene referred to the distrust which immigrants have for the banks and of their willingness to place their money only in the hands of the government. He attributed this to the educated countrymen of these immigrants who fleece their victims through "wildcat" banks. The speaker bitterly arraigned the custom which permits the existence of bogus private banks.

Address of Edmund D. Fisher

Edmund D. Fisher, deputy comptroller of New York City, delivered a very able address before the savings bank section on Tuesday. His subject was "The Relation Between Fixed and Fluid Credit." Mr. Fisher said that, in the last analysis, the savings banks in the United States had to stand behind the payment of fluid credit and consequently were vitally interested in the stability which comes from sound banking; that the lack of scientific relations between fixed and fluid credit in banking practice brings recurring periods of extreme inflation or deflation, with disastrous effects upon all forms of business enterprise. The question of agricultural credit was touched upon, Mr. Fisher saying that the difficulties of its solution are those of the non-fluid credit and that a broad development of such credits must await the establishment of an open money market, which will be accomplished through the acceptance principle of the federal reserve bank plan under the Glass-Owen bill. He said the farmers needed loans of both a semi-liquid and a fixed credit nature.

"From the standpoint of our present problem in the United States," said Mr. Fisher, "the farmer needs the same help as the merchant and manufacturer, in that his credits, of a strictly liquid type, may be freely taken by the banks of the country and he may have the added credit and currency which the volume of his business and his responsibilities warrant. The proper expansion and contraction of the credits for all this business, necessarily, can only be made possible by the development of the principle of central reserves. From the mortgage standpoint, present help to the farmer comes only from the occasional investor who is willing to take a conservative mortgage, as well as from the mortgage companies, but at high rates of interest. The farmer is entitled to legislative consideration of his long-time credit problem."

"The most recent attempt for credit control is embodied in the Glass-Owen bill," continued

Mr. Fisher in part. "Rediscounts are to be made only upon fluid credits."

"The new banking measure further plans for the regulation of credit by the control of discount rates through the medium of the federal reserve banks. The plan of control is generally sound and as it includes a new policy in relation to collateral loans will probably bring the following results: a healthy restriction of the present tendency to expand security prices through excessive collateral loans; a weekly, or bi-monthly, instead of a daily, settlement of stock exchange transactions, curtailing the operations of the 'call money' market; the establishment of an 'open money market' for commercial bills which will prepare the way for a separate investment market for long time mortgage credits.

"All of these will tend to the establishment of proper scientific relations between fixed and fluid credit. There will then be, first, an open market for acceptances which are strictly fluid credit; second, a market for securities restricting speculation and supported by a legitimate investment demand, and, third, a market for mortgage bonds (to be developed by a bill not yet before congress), including agricultural credits, probably less active than the security market, but again supported by the investment demand. As the only open market to-day is virtually that for securities supported by loans on call, there is too frequently a distinct invitation to inflation of security values with its inevitable reflex, through bank deposits, on commodity prices. The worst result of this practice is that, in crisis periods, it approximates a definite discrimination against legitimate commercial loans. The banker is too apt to consider his business from the standpoint of the individual security. He knows that certain stocks and bonds are gilt edge and that the loan which he makes on them is safe, overlooking the broad significance of the fact that the large volume of such loans throughout the country will ultimately disturb the very business community that he is endeavoring to serve. The value of the regional federal reserve bank control, from the standpoint of credit regulation, is probably greater than if one central banking organization was established. The statements of the individual banks will be better for the country. Inflation can be easily detected in its initiation in the section of the country where it develops. The broad aspects of the credit problem will be made definite in

CLEARING HOUSE SECTION

Ralph Van Vechten of Chicago, in his annual address as president of the clearing house section, reviewed briefly conditions which have prevailed the last year. He said in part:

"The events of the past twelve months led up to a stringency in the money market that exposed and emphasized weaknesses in the operation of our credit machinery. Since the meeting of your section last year, a change in the administration has occurred in Washington. During the summer the new tariff and banking bills have been under discussion in congress. Prior to that the Pujo committee brought in its report, and, while this was not taken seriously, it foreshadowed the active discussion of the banking and currency question which has occurred during the past few months. Despite dire prophecies of financial disturbance during this period of proposed legislation directly affecting banking, commercial and manufacturing interests, it may be said that the country has kept its poise to an unexpected degree. However, from one cause or another, financial conditions have been very close during the entire year. This stringency resulted largely from the expanded business of the previous two years, during which there was a plethora of promotions in various lines of enterprise, many of which, judging by results, were entirely unwarranted, and from personal and corporate extravagance, preceding a time when some of the nations of southern Europe were engaged in a bitter warfare. The destruction and expense entailed by these wars, resulting in the sale of American securities by continental holders, and the hoarding of gold abroad, necessitated a strengthening of reserves on the part of the large European banks. Naturally, our own reserves were contracted by the demands of Europe for our gold, New York then being practically the only free international gold market. This strain in Europe and in the eastern part of our country came at a time when the farmers of the West were holding back the bulk of the enormous crop of the previous year for higher prices. In certain sections of the country real estate speculation had been running riot for several years and was forcibly checked. Bank reserves fell below the danger line of twenty-one per cent and country institutions became heavy borrowers from their city correspondents at a season of the year when both should, under ordinary conditions, have been in the market for commercial paper. Consequently, the continuous liquidation in Wall Street was accompanied by a liquidation of commercial paper almost as drastic. Theoretically this liquidation in commercial paper could have occurred without discomfort to borrowers through the conversion of book accounts and merchandise, but actually business was keeping up a pace not justified by financial conditions, and the needs of borrowers were therefore greater than ever. The system of handling credits through note brokers was put to the severest test it has sustained, due to the protracted period of tight money. That it stood the test so well was due largely to the efforts of the banks, many of which took on lines of credit from their customers out of all proportion to previous engagements and thereby prevented what might have been a frightful business mortality. As it was, there were many failures of houses which found themselves in an overextended position, without being properly fortified by open lines of bank credit."

Raymond B. Cox Urges Legal Reforms

Raymond B. Cox complained against "pyramided" bank balances resulting from a perversion of the original purpose for which checks were created, viz., for satisfying a debt. "Chief among the things contributing to this unsatisfactory situation," said Mr. Cox, "is what is known as the collection exchange charge—the custom of a bank charging more than expenses for payment of its own checks presented through the mails. To avoid this charge checks are sent here, there and everywhere, irrespective of their place of payment, and thus the checks are used for purposes not contemplated by the makers." Mr. Cox said that the proposed currency law contains a provision which will eliminate this unsatisfactory practice from American banking.

Mr. Cox is of the opinion that there should be a revision and unification of check collecting laws and that there should be provided, (1), a separate code covering bank checks; (2), the relationship between the depositor and the bank must be definitely fixed as regards the deposit of checks for collection when credit is given at the time the deposit of checks is made; (3), the relation between banks handling such items for collection must be established.

"In adjusting these problems," said the speaker, "several important details are involved, such as the intent of endorsement stamps, fixing of the time between the date of delivery of a check and the date of presentation, the liability of banks in choosing proper agents and the right of both the banks and depositors when checks are unpaid.

"These reforms cannot be accomplished without considerable study and much discussion. It is apparent, however, that they must be provided for if we really wish to adjust our banking system to the best interest of the nation's commerce and industry. Now that banking reform is at such a critical stage it would be well for the American bankers to begin at once a serious and active consideration of our check collecting laws and methods."

Legal Status of Clearing House Associations

Carl Meyer, a Chicago lawyer, discussed the legal status of clearing house associations. Mr. Meyer said that in determining the legal status of the modern clearing house it is necessary to look to the charter or articles of association for the purpose of ascertaining the objects for which the association was formed, and to determine whether it is organized for a lawful purpose, and then decide whether the particular function is the exercise of a power conferred upon the association by such charter or articles of association.

The speaker said that as the law now stands there can be no doubt of the right of clearing house associations to make for themselves rules and regulations for the examination of the affairs and business of their respective members.

TRUST COMPANY SECTION

President William C. Poillon opposed the proposed amendment to the A. B. A. constitution which reduced representation of the sections on the executive council from three to one member, and the provision that the executive council shall control the disbursement of the funds provided by them for the use of the several sections, and also the proposed by-law which provides that the secretaries and employees of the several sections shall be directly subject to the supervision of the general secretary and the executive council.

President Poillon told of the initiation by the section during the past year of a publicity campaign of education in the daily press on behalf of the advantages offered by trust companies in their particular field. This campaign consisted of a series of well prepared articles explaining the special functions of the trust company, written by experts and published in the newspapers of about 100 cities.

The hope was expressed that there will be further organization of state trust company associations at the present time; although there are more than 2,000 trust companies in the United States, only three states have such organizations, viz., New York, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

SECRETARIES SECTION

Andrew Smith of Indianapolis, secretary of the Indiana Bankers Association, discussed "The Limits of the Secretary's Field" before the state secretaries' section. He said in part:

"There is hardly any limit to the field of the usefulness of the wide awake, up-to-date secretary. Upon him rests the responsibility of building up a strong and influential association. His first and probably most important duty is to convince every bank in his state that it is to their interest to affiliate with and lend their hearty support to whatever movement may be under way for the betterment of banking conditions in his state. If the legislature is in session there are some good bills that it is desirable to have enacted into law; there will most likely be many bad bills introduced that will require the closest attention and often the most strenuous work to defeat.

"Your secretary must plan the convention program, secure prominent and eloquent speakers, make all hotel arrangements, keep an eye on the entertainment committee, see that every little detail is looked after that will make your convention a success, give the glad hand

HAMILTON NATIONAL BANK
Chattanooga, Tennessee

The E. Jackson Casse Company, bank engineers, Monadnock Block, Chicago, had complete charge of remodeling the building to be occupied by the new bank at State and Lake streets. A remarkable feature of the work, consisting of labor on the building, interior equipment and vault system, is that it was accomplished in forty-five days. The vault system of the new bank is as modern and up-to-date as any in the loop.

OLD NATIONAL OF SPOKANE

vice-president; W. D. Vincent, cashier; W. J.

member of its executive council.

Most leading banks specify the use of Brown's Linen Ledger Paper for their record books, ledgers and loose leaf systems. Never discolors or weakens from age. Its strong texture stands hardest usage and won't tear out of loose leaf systems. Its perfect writing and erasing surface is an aid to neat work.

Brown's Linen Ledger Paper

It is made of pure white rags—not of colored rags as are ordinary ledger papers.
That's why Brown's is superior. No strong chemicals in it which weaken the fibre, make the paper grow dingy, turn yellow at the edges and pull away from the book bindings. Made with or without our invisible hinge.

"All these duties will keep the secretary rather busy, to say nothing of getting up the group programs, having same printed and mailed from your office, and then attending each meeting and make them a talk on association work and see that everything goes off well. The importance of the duties that rest on the shoulders of the secretary in building up a strong association and keeping it at the greatest possible maximum strength cannot be too strongly emphasized. His work as an organizer is not even at an end, if he has persuaded every eligible institution in the state to become a member of the association. That in itself would be an herculean effort. After the membership is once obtained, it falls to the lot of the secretary to keep the membership active. In addition to being ever ready to co-operate on an instant's notice with any member of his association, the secretary must constantly call forth and foster the spirit of co-operation on the part of the membership."

"Efficient Service" is that kind which gives the greatest measure of results for the least expenditure of time, effort and money.

THE WALES Visible Adding and Listing Machine

excels all other adding machines in net results. We earnestly invite your careful attention to the following reasons why:

First—We have indisputable records of hundreds of Wales machines in use 5, 6, 7 and 8 years without one cent expended by their owners for repair charges. Constant expenditure for constant inspection is unknown to Wales users.

Second—In less than two years the number of banks in the United States using Wales machines has increased from 1000 to nearly 2500, and over forty banks use five and more. This record is unparalleled in adding machine history.

Third—Banks and business houses which began by installing one or two Wales Visible keep on buying them. The National City Bank of New York bought two Wales machines several years ago. They now own 48. Sears, Roebuck & Co. have added Wales machines to the equipment of their offices from time to time until they now own and use 130. The International Harvester Company buys Wales machines at frequent intervals, now using 120. The list could be continued to great length.

Fourth—Without the necessity of making a special machine for every user, the Wales Standard Models continue to meet the demands for all lines of business, saving users the excessive outlay for special machines. Our comprehensive line of different models—all containing the superior Wales features of perfect visibility, speed and ease of operation—efficiently covers all needs.

Fifth—The Wales is still the only adding and listing machine guaranteed for 5 years. Guaranteed 5 times longer, it must, therefore, be 5 times better.

What Is Your Best Time On These Problems?

Example 1 Note for \$950 dated today, due in 98 days, bearing $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent interest The Meilicke gives maturity date and interest, in two seconds.

Example 2. John Roberts agrees to pay \$285 at 5 per cent November 1st, note dated January 8th; you discount it today at $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent — Meilicke time, 28 seconds

Four Machines in One

The Meilicke is a composite of four devices. A time Computer, Holiday Detector, Maturity Finder and Interest Calculator.

Yet it operates as one machine—not four. Four distinct problems in one automatic movement.

"A problem once solved correctly should not need to be solved again."

NEW A. B. A. COMMITTEES

The final business session of the executive council of the American Bankers Association was held at the Copley-Plaza Friday morning last week, there having been one previously at the same place the evening before. At these sessions the final details of the council's business were disposed of, winding up the convention of 1913.

A part of the business was the election of one of the officers and the appointment of committees. These were as follows:

Officers: General secretary, Col. Fred E. Farnsworth; assistant secretary, William G. Wilson; treasurer, J. W. Hoopes of Galveston, Tex.

Committees: Currency commission—A. B. Spurn, James B. Forgan, Myron T. Herrick, Jos. J. Wade. Joseph T. Talbert, Sol Wexler, Robert Wardrop, E. F. Swinney, J. F. Sar- gi, E. L. Howe, and Fred E. Farnsworth as secretary.

Law committee—R. E. James, F. W. Foote, E. Crabtree, Dudley E. Waters, E. W. Stettin, C. A. Pugsley.

Federal legislative committee—P. W. Goebel, Elwood Cox, E. M. Wing, W. H. Bucholz, J. McHugh, C. A. Hinsch.

Membership committee—W. J. Flater, E. S. Ward, W. H. Griffing.

Administrative committee—Joseph Wayne Philadelphia, Walter H. Bennett of New York, and the president of the association ex officio.

Finance committee—C. G. Hutcheson, J. K. Arch, N. E. Franklin, D. D. Muir, W. F. Mc- eeb, Frank Knox, Earl S. Gwin, George E. yson, Nelson N. Lampert, and the first vice- president and the treasurer of the association ex officio.

POSITION FOR ALBERT E. COEN

Albert E. Coen, for years identified with Western Trust & Savings Bank prior to its absorption by the Central Trust, and more recently with the Colonial Trust, has been elected vice-president and cashier of the Aetna Bank, which will open at Lincoln Ave. and Halsted Street on December 1st with capital of $200,000 and surplus of $20,000. S. Maltman is president of the new institution.

CHICAGO NATIONAL BANK

It is announced that stockholders of the Chicago National Bank are shortly to receive a dividend of at least 20 per cent out of the proceeds of the sale of the bank's real estate assets. It is expected the dividend will be declared some time this month. Meanwhile the stock has had an eight point rise to 20.

BANKS AND INCOME TAX LAW

The banks of Chicago have a committee at work to determine how that part of the income tax collection put upon them shall be handled. On coupons it is not known whether "source" bank is the paying depository or the collecting bank. For a time after September 1st, the date the bill becomes operative there will be a burdensome task on the part of the banks.

Effective Committee Workers

ROBERT E. JAMES
EASTON, PA.

CLAY H. HOLLISTER
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Two A. B. A. committee chairmen who have rendered distinguished service to the bankers of the country are Robert E. James, who was chairman of the committee on constitutional revision, and Clay H. Hollister, long time chairman of the bills of lading committee.

The American Bankers Association long had felt the need of a revised constitution. Rare judgment was shown in the selection of the committee headed by Mr. James, and these gentlemen are entitled to a great deal of credit for their work. Mr. James is head of the newly appointed law committee.

Mr. Hollister and his associates have labored diligently to bring legislative order out of the present chaotic state of affairs relating to bills of lading. They are endeavoring to have enacted a federal law fixing the legal status of bills of lading and determining the rights and obligations of the parties thereto. Efforts also are being made to induce all states of the Union to pass similar statutes.

PENITENTIARY FOR PRIVATE BANKER

Belleville, Ill., Oct. 16.—Henry J. Fink, the former private banker whose disappearance a few weeks ago resulted in an investigation of his affairs, to-day pleaded guilty to embezzlement and was sentenced to an indeterminate term of one to four years in the penitentiary at Chester, Ill.

Fink was arraigned in Judge Hanley's court on a charge of embezzling $1,000 from Walter J. Cole, a druggist. The money, it is charged, was collected by Fink on a mortgage, but was not turned over to Cole.

Several other embezzlement charges are pending against Fink, but probably they will not be prosecuted.

CHICAGO BANKS OBSERVE HOLIDAY

Chicago banks were closed on Monday of this week in honor of Columbus day. The holiday, falling on Sunday, was observed the following day.

YIELD TO STATE BANK'S PLEA

E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, received Thursday from Chairman Owen of the senate committee on banking and currency a communication announcing that the changes in the currency bill requested by the state banks of Chicago would be made.

LIVINGSTONE GIVEN ALBUM

William Livingstone, president of the Dime Savings of Detroit, was presented with a handsome album containing the photographs of members of the executive council of the American Bankers Association at the convention in Boston last week. Mr. Livingstone on retiring from the presidency last year was presented with a chest of silverware.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

THE Guaranty Trust Company of New York has published a digest of the new currency bill known as the Federal Reserve Act. This digest places before the busy man in compact form all of the essential features of the bill. Copies may be obtained by application to the company.

THE special committee of the Illinois Bankers Association members headed by President S. B. Montgomery went from Boston to Washington to keep an appointment with the senate committee on finance on Saturday morning.

SOME of the senators were amazed to learn that the great Boston meeting was the regular annual session and not called to influence the passage of the currency bill. Such is fame!

DELAWARE is to be in the swim. She has reorganized her state bankers' association. Probably she heard the noise the Hawaiian delegation made at Boston.

JOHN WILLIAMS, Broadway Trust, was a busy man at Boston seeing all his former western banker friends.

PRIVATE banks in New York are to be transferred from the formal supervision of the state comptroller to the tender mercies of the state banking department.

ABOUT all the supervision they have had consisted in seeing that a bond was filed. The state commission says that "the safety of the depositor demands that the supervision of private banks be placed with the superintendent of banks."

ACTING GOVERNOR GLYNN, an able newspaper editor, agrees with the commission, and there you are. Illinois is getting gradually further down the line from the leaders.

RALPH VAN VECHTEN and F. O. Watts spoke at the banquet of the National Bank Shriers at Boston.

ONCE more negligent bank directors have been held liable for the acts of the bank officers. A director who does not direct is out of date with the courts.

RESIDENT BYRON L. SMITH of the Northern Trust has jumped into the currency arena. He assembled the Chicago state bankers for an address by E. D. Hulbert, after which resolutions were adopted.

THESE bankers want the wording of the new currency bill changed where it relates to the bank privileges.

UMA STATE SAVINGS is a new Chicago bank with Frank Collins as expert. Joseph Ma furnishes the name in part. Capital $20,000.

E. KUOLT, superintendent of banking in Wisconsin, is being congratulated upon being up the Citizens Savings and Trust of Milwaukee. "Crookedness, false entries and diversion of funds" is enough of a reason in the Wisconsin city where banking is on a high plane.

THE special and separately bound convention editions are decadent. They contain only such papers as can be had in advance, usually, come out weeks late and haven't a line of live matter in them. Why not?

JAMES T. BRADLEY, Southwestern National, Kansas City, has an analysis of the currency bill ready for distribution. Send in!

HARRY M. RUBEY of Golden, Colo., is chairman of the agricultural committee for his state and is going to wake things up a bit. He's a good one.

J. W. WHEELER of St. Paul got Joseph J. Chapman's place on the Big Council. Mr. Chapman construed the request of his honored chief to mean all that it said. He is out of everything outside of the bank.

HE even says that George Orde will have to run his own farm without advice or assistance hereafter.

THEY say the reason doctors do not try to live too long is the fear that they will outlive their patients.

SECRETARY J. L. HARTMAN of Oregon has sent out his 1913 proceedings book, well edited and well bound, as is his custom. His association has prospered.

F. H. WILLIAMS, R. D. Graham and W. T. Bradford, the Michigan committee on agriculture, have sent out a bulletin to stir things up a bit.

IT tells of what already has been done and of the plans for the winter campaign. Secretary Mrs. H. M. Brown, Ford building, Detroit, will send copies to those interested.

A COMBINED assault on the legislature for the needed laws will be made and for the always indispensable appropriation.

THE committee says: "The question of rural credits will be considered by the next congress and the government will be asked to loan money to farmers on long time terms and low rates of interest. It would seem that only the most prosperous farmers could take advantage of such aid. It is a subject worthy of discussion."

W. D. VINCENT of Spokane was at Washington with the country bankers' committee and believes the currency bill will be modified and passed so as to be workable and acceptable.

MR. VINCENT next year or the year after will start through the chairs in the clearing house section, if his friends can have their way.

HE has been an indefatigable worker on the executive committee and believes in the section as a power along constructive lines. On the agricultural and educational commission he has a well-earned place.

MR. VINCENT gave it as common talk in Washington that the three most effective talks of the week at the senate hearings were given by James G. Cannon, New York, President S. B. Montgomery of the Illinois Bankers Association and Frank A. Vanderlip of New York, in the order named.

THOSE appearing with President Montgomery were Col. J. S. Aisthorpe, B. F.

Harris, W. C. White, John M. Crebs, and H. D. Sexton.

GEORGE WOODRUFF was named to represent Illinois on the special committee appointed by the county bankers' meeting held at Boston.

GEORGE W. ROGERS of Little Rock was dubbed the "bomb-thrower" at Boston. He carried away a whole belt of scalps at the country bankers' meeting and then sent Senator Owen a telegram "in the name of 2,000 country bankers."

THE response was immediate and satisfactory. A hearing was granted for Monday, a day satisfactory to all.

THE very first act attempted under the new constitution was held to be a direct violation of its precepts.

FRIENDLY southern bankers wanted to have the fidelity bond committee with Robert D. Sands of Richmond "continued with expenses allowed."

BUT Uncle Sol Wexler was on guard, speaking for the committee, and it was referred to the new council.

THE real fight on the new document was to change the word "shall" to "may" in two important paragraphs concerning supervision of expenses of sections.

SOME of the sections resent control of funds by the council. If the new council starts right the change is unimportant. If it wobbles in the least there will be a new issue for Richmond.

CERTAIN little talked-of abuses have been obnoxious for a long time and are marked for destruction.

"AB" LEWIS of St. Louis and Abraham Lewis of Honolulu got mixed up in the mails and by the pages.

ERNEST A. HAMILL told the Boston papers he did not believe congress would pass a currency bill which would hurt either the country banks or the big city banks if correctly informed in the matter.

HOOPES of Texas had votes to spare in the treasurership, so friendly states tossed a few to his opponent, for Graham is a good fellow, and he did no buttonholing, not a bit.

EVERYONE was sorry Atlanta could not have the convention in 1914. Splendid publicity work had been done and the betting was even money against the field.

THEN, a too anxious adherent moved as an amendment to the motion "that we ballot for choice" of the half dozen places asking it, that it go to Atlanta.

THAT put the adherents of Richmond, Salt Lake, Atlantic City, St. Louis and Philadelphia all voting against Atlanta. Of course it lost. Of course Edens in the meantime had made his talk and Richmond had it.

MR. FRANCIS HENRY WILLIAMS, C. S.

Christian Science Practitioner

LOUIS G. KAUFMAN, president of the L'Chatham and Phenix of New York, got more space than any one else in the Boston papers. His snappy interviews made a double hit.

SUPPOSE the insurgents put up a ticket like this at Richmond: For president, Robt. E. James of Pennsylvania; for vice-president, James K. Lynch of California. Platform the correct interpretation of the new constitution?

IT wouldn't take two guesses as to what would happen.

BOSTON papers printed the opening address of Acting President Arthur Reynolds, the matchless presiding officer, in full. His was the only one to meet with such favor.

"NO. 40," published by the National Nassau Bank, New York, refers to F. W. Ellsworth of the Guaranty Trust as "the best publicity man in the country," and everybody seconds the motion.

JOHAN McHUGH of Iowa goes on the finance committee of the A. B. A. and on the executive committee of the clearing house section, which shows how a willing man gets work thrust upon him.

J. K. OTTLEY is head of the clearing house J. section, and thus Atlanta is honored even if out-generated in the fight for the 1914 convention. It was eloquence against numbers and eloquence won. The Richmond fans handed the white plume of leadership to W. G. Edens.

J. F. SARTORI went to the head of the savings section with an able assistant in Wm. E. Knox of the famous Bowery Savings.

THUS the section has harnessed the two best known savings institutions on either coast to work tandem.

F. H. GOFF of Cleveland is backed up by Ralph W. Cutler of Hartford in the trust company work. They are fit successors in trust to a long line of distinguished officials.

THE secretaries thought it wise to recognize the East and placed W. J. Henry of New York in the chair, although it "was coming" to W. W. Bowman of Kansas, who was re-elected vice-president and will follow Henry a year later. Fine business!

SECRETARY HALL will fall heir to the secretary-editor-treasurer mantle worn last year by W. B. Harrison. Hall will have to go some.

ILLINOIS didn't draw any prize in the section distribution, but her secretary "and lady" were on the official registry list all right.

W. T. FENTON of Chicago was on the big committee to name all other committees. He's a pretty safe "delegate" in such cases.

ARRANGEMENTS have been made by the Pennsylvania railroad for a special train to run as a section of the Broadway Limited, leaving New York October 27th, carrying eastern members to the second annual convention of the Investment Bankers Association of America to be held in Chicago October 28th, 29th, 30th.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE, just out of the U. S. penitentiary at Atlanta, charges that prisoners are "starved in the interests of economy." Yet Mr. Hawthorne is "in perfect health and gained thirty pounds in weight."

THIS is another case where supervision was resented, although highly beneficial to all concerned.

SENATOR ALDRICH does not go into technicalities in opposing the new currency bill. He's "agin" the government and says the bill is "partisan, unsound, socialistic," and anything else you like. Noble old Roman!

JAMES E. HAMILTON and family of Cedar Rapids, after the Boston convention sailed for the Bermudas.

MR. HAMILTON not long ago came through an illness which weakened him and "salt air" was prescribed as a tonic which will leave him "as good as new."

D. ARTHUR BOWMAN, St. Louis, is collecting data on "the automobile and the banker." He wants to know the effect the general automobile buying is having upon bank deposits.

THE effect of the Civil War upon the life of the time is impressively set forth by Senator Lodge in his "Early Memories" (Scribners.) "The war prevailed everything. You saw it in the streets, in the disappearance of silver and gold, in the early makeshifts for money, in the paper currency, in the passing soldiers, in the neighboring camps. You heard it in Andrew's voice addressing the regiments as they started for the South."

"NO boy could forget Robert Shaw going out at the head of his black troops or General Bartlett riding by on his way to the front, one leg gone, and strapped to his saddle. Military companies were organized in all the schools and every boy was compelled to drill. Ours was the first, and we were organized and thoroughly drilled, as if it had now become a part of every American's regular education, so that when the time came he might be able to do his duty in a perpetual war. The war appeared in the theaters, where every sentence which could be twisted into a patriotic allusion was loudly cheered."

J. L. MITCHELL recently resigned as president of the Live Stock National at Sioux City, Iowa, has not as yet announced his plans for the future.

If you were at Boston the following from the American Banker will make you sneeze. It was telling of the backward, modest "logical candidate" for the vice-presidency.

THEN it said: "And so forcefully did they present their cause, that Mr. Law could not otherwise than accept." The suspense must have been terrible.

THE influence of the new tariff legislation," say Ware & Leland, "has been already effective during the past week in making a contraction of demand for stocks so extensive as to be the most important factor in the speculative situation at the moment. This is the only reasonable outcome of the abrupt change which has been established in the nation's industries after fifty years of a protective policy."

EDAR RAPIDS is not to lose John Burianek, Jr. He has been elected (with stock control) president of the Peoples Savings Bank, an institution which practically as created by him.

THE bank couldn't get along without him and backing was furnished to settle the matter. For the past year Mr. Burianek traveled about the world and found offers of positions galore awaiting his return.

As cashier he had built up the Peoples Savings only to come under control by purchase of certain leading real estate operators. They tried to hold Mr. Burianek, it is said, as cashier.

RIVAL bank made an offer, and so did other institutions, but in the end John came into his own. It takes a banker to run a bank. The old staff has been reassembled and installed.

THE bank has a million in deposits and is in a marvelously fine new building of its own. And girls, he's a bachelor.

AWNDALE NATIONAL occupied its new building on Wednesday at 3337-9 West 26th Street, Chicago. From three until five p. m. the officers kept open house. There was a large attendance of friends and patrons.

THIRD NATIONAL, Dothan, Ala., issues a fine little house organ to help bring in new customers.

THOMAS C. McRAE of Arkansas, who spoke for the new currency bill at the Boston convention, received many congratulatory telegrams. First one to hand was signed R. D. Duncan of the State National, Little Rock.

FRANK H. LUCE is the new cashier of the Fidelity Trust, Tacoma. He formerly was a bank examiner. Arthur Pritchard is the active vice-president in the new line-up.

N. F. HAWLEY was the first of the Minneapolis bankers to return home, and thus it fell to his lot to explain to the papers why Joseph Chapman withdrew from the vice-presidency contest at Boston with his election assured.

WHEN he announced that it was done at the request of William H. Dunwoody, suffering from sudden and severe illness at the time, all was understood.

BIG attendance is promised for the Investment Bankers convention at the Blackstone October 28-30. J. E. Blunt, Jr., of the Merchants Loan is head of the hotel committee.

JOHN JAY ABBOTT of the Continental Trust is dean of the banquet committee and predicts an attendance of 1,000 at the feast.

ON Tuesday, the 28th, there will be an auto ride in the afternoon and a smoker and vaudeville in the evening. The chief event, the banquet, will come on Thursday evening, the 30th.

PRESIDENT GEORGE B. CALDWELL says there is deep interest shown in the meeting by all the bond and investment houses. A big attendance is predicted also by Secretary F. R. Fenton.

WALTER R. REARICK, whom so many of the boys want to follow George Woodruff through the chairs, was in the city this week. His is a state bank, down at Ashland, but he is deeply interested in the new currency bill.

HE believes it will be modified and then passed. In that event he hopes to see the bankers of the country give it a fair, earnest, patriotic trial and feels assured all shortcomings will be adjusted by congress quickly and accurately. CASHIER.

Touches upon proposed banking and financial legislation by congress

WASHINGTON LETTER

By R. A. ALBERTSEN

Relates to administrative and department matters interesting to our readers

Senator Reed of Missouri on Monday stated to a delegation of country bankers that neither he nor any other member of the banking and currency committee had any notion of passing legislation that would violate the "implied contract" between the government and the banks effected through the sale of two per cent government bonds at par to secure bank-note circulation.

The statement was made during a discussion of the threatened loss to the banks by the retirement of their circulation on the plan proposed in the Glass-Owen bill as it passed the house. It was supplemented by statements of other members of the committee after the hearing had adjourned.

Senator Reed did not undertake to say that the price of the two per cents would be maintained at par, but what he did say afforded a good measure of relief to the bankers present, who have been expecting a severe loss on their holdings of government bonds.

Senators Reed and Nelson inquired as to the probable effect on the sentiment of country bankers regarding the pending currency bill if it were so amended as to reduce for them the requirements as to subscription to the stock of and deposit of reserves in the proposed regional reserve banks. Senator Nelson suggested a reduction in stock subscriptions from ten to five per cent of the capital of country banks and a reduction in the required reserve deposit from five to three or two and one-half per cent.

These suggestions and numerous others were made in the most tentative way and principally to feel out the sentiment of the bankers under examination, but they indicated that the committee is of several minds as to what shape the bill will be in when it is finally reported out. The committee expects to continue its hearing till October 25th and is making new appointments with country bankers from various parts of the country.

Meanwhile the president is said to be growing restive over the delay and the desire of some democratic senators to have the currency bill go over to the regular session. He held conferences to-day with three or four senators, one of whom—Stone of Missouri—announced that an effort would be made to pass the bill at his session.

The delegates appointed to carry to Washington the resolutions adopted at the conference of country bankers in Boston a week ago called on the president to-day and had a longer visit with Secretary McAdoo, who gave them a speech on patriotism.

Secretary McAdoo said: "I have no more idea what any considerable number of national banks will refuse to go into the new federal reserve system than I have that I shall fly over the Washington monument.

"If we wait until everybody gets together on a measure," he added, "we never will have a beginning on currency legislation."

Denouncing as traitorous the report that government two per cents had reached a danger point in touching ninety-four, Mr. McAdoo said there was nothing to impair the bonds' value and the government's faith was back of them.

The secretary advised the bankers to "ledger the currency bill," and added that, in thus figuring out both sides, they would find the balance in favor of the bill.

The communication from the conference of country bankers was read by George W. Rogers of Little Rock, Ark., chairman of the bankers' delegation and mover of the original resolution in Boston. The document covers four principal points of objection to the bill on the part of country bankers.

1. The bankers urged that the two per cent government bonds used to secure bank note circulation be refunded at a higher rate of interest or redeemed at par to avoid the probability of loss through the decline in market value, particularly to such banks as do not join the federal reserve system.

2. The provision to force national banks maintaining savings departments to segregate a part of their assets for that purpose and invest savings deposits in special kinds of securities was attacked.

3. The bankers declared that permitting federal reserve banks to act as clearing houses free of charge would deprive member banks of profits derived from out-of-town collections.

4. They urged that they be permitted to carry part of their reserves in the reserve city banks with which they now do business.

In response to questions, Mr. Rogers said he believed country banks generally would support the bill and join the system if it were amended properly in these particulars.

Mr. Rogers announced that each of the four points of objection mentioned in the resolution would be discussed by a banker who had worked up the subject.

The four speakers are Gordon Jones, Denver; McLean Tilton, Jr., Alabama; George Woodruff, Joliet, Ill., and David Barry, Pennsylvania.

George Woodruff, president of the First National of Joliet, Ill., appeared before the senate banking and currency committee this week on behalf of the committee of country bankers appointed at the A. B. A. convention last week. Mr. Woodruff urged that the bill be amended so that the reserve banks will not be forced to collect individual checks at par and that country banks be permitted to charge for exchange and collections.

He presented figures from his own institution to prove that at present it costs his bank on the average of ninety-four cents for each $1,000 in exchange through its transit department allowing three days for collection. Over 200 Illinois country banks exchange through the bank of which he is president.

Cites Cost of Handling Checks

Mr. Woodruff pointed out that the expense of collecting these checks at par would be so great that the reserve bank could hardly bear up under it. His bank handled 799,420 checks from January 1st to August 31st, aggregating $29,900,000. The overhead expenses on these totalled $12,600—not including salaries paid officers of the bank or rent. This made an average of forty-two cents a thousand.

The average lost in interest on the handling of checks, according to Mr. Woodruff, is over fourteen cents a day per each $1,000.

If the reserve banks collect individual checks at par Mr. Woodruff believes the country banks will be thrown into much confusion because they will never know the exact state of their balance.

He also said that he would like to see a provision in the bill limiting individual checks to local areas and providing for bank exchange on all long distance transactions.

In accordance with this statement, seven recommendations were submitted for separate vote. All these have been approved by large majorities.

The separate recommendations are as follows:

1. In favor of the increase of the federal reserve board to nine members, the two additional members to be chosen by the original seven members, subject to the approval of the president; the compensation of the governor and vice-governor to be fixed by the board itself.

2. The creation of the federal reserve council to be elected by the regional reserve banks, the president and vice-president of the council to reside in Washington and to sit at meetings of the federal reserve board but without vote; their salaries to be fixed and paid by the banks.

3. That in the creation of the new system of regional reserve banks a beginning be made with the present central reserve cities (three in number), the number to be increased gradually by the federal reserve boards as in their judgment conditions warrant.

4. Concerning note issues: That restriction of the issue of federal reserve notes to $500,000,000 be eliminated; that interest on federal reserve notes be eliminated; that it be made unlawful for any federal reserve bank to pay out any notes but its own, the notes issued being given an identifying number.

5. That federal reserve notes should not be obligations of the government but should be guaranteed by the United States and that they shall be redeemable by federal reserve banks and not at the treasury of the United States.

6. That federal reserve banks mutually guarantee the federal reserve notes by providing that said notes shall become a first and permanent lien upon the combined assets of federal reserve banks.

7. That the reserve requirements of the Owen-Glass bill be modified and reduced for both country banks and banks in reserve cities.

The board of directors has requested an opportunity to be heard before the senate committee for the purpose of presenting the opinions recorded.

BANK CLEARINGS SHOW SEVEN MILLIONS INCREASE

No attempt has been made to imitate the silk fiber, and the note has a generally faded appearance. The thirteen stars that appear on the genuine, above the eagle on the face of the note, are omitted in the counterfeit. It should not deceive the ordinarily careful handler of money.

CROP LOSS IN LOUISIANA

Lake Charles, La.—Reports from the rice belt indicate that, while the crop has been greatly damaged, it has not been completely ruined. The loss will reach $1,000,000, it is said, the greatest perhaps the industry in Louisiana has ever suffered. However, there is no possible way of reaching an accurate estimate.

News came from Cameron parish that, while the water is high, a large per cent of the cotton crop had already been marketed and the cattle had all been gotten onto the high ridges.

A New Book for Banks

Well secured short term bonds, issued to mature in from one to five years, are attractive investments for the reserve funds of banks. Such securities, particularly of the larger issues, are apt to have a closer and quicker market owing to the relatively early maturity, and are not subject to extreme fluctuation in price.

We have compiled a book which describes the essential features of the current issues of short term securities. A copy will be sent to any bank or banker on request.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE FAVORS CURRENCY BILL

The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States meeting in Detroit, after completing a canvass of ballots found the sentiment of the business men's organizations strongly in favor of the report of the currency committee.

The board of directors of the chamber, in session there, completed the canvass of the ballots and found the sentiment of the business men's organizations strongly in favor of the report of the committee, the vote cast being 303 for and 17 against.

The committee in its report, which was made the basis of the referendum, stated:

"It regards the measure as a piece of constructive legislation and believes that it embodies in a large degree elements necessary to provide the nation with a safe currency and banking system. In view of the fact that the framers of the measure invite friendly criticism and suggestions, we are prompted to point out wherein the proposed act may be materially improved and strengthened."

A. Barton Hepburn, chairman of the board, Chase National, New York, declared at the national conference on currency reform this week that the Owen-Glass bill was "born in a caucus and cradled in politics."

The bill was defended by Senator Owen and Representative Buckley of Ohio.

ST. LOUIS BANKER SUGGESTS AMENDMENTS

Breckenridge Jones, president of the Mississippi Valley Trust, St. Louis, in appearing before the senate banking and currency commission at Washington recently, discussed the position of state banks and trust companies under the new bill and suggested amendments of the measure which would place state banks and trust banks on the same footing with national banks. Mr. Jones expressed the opinion that the corporate powers of trust companies should be allowed to remain. He cited figures to show that in the states of the Mississippi Valley, particularly those west of the Mississippi river, state banks largely outnumber national banks, and he contended that the pending bill discriminates against state banks, and so discriminating that it is in a measure unfair to the majority of the people of his region. He urged upon the committee the necessity of an amendment to the bill to more clearly define the powers and positions of the state banks and trust companies.

Mr. Jones also urged a reduction of the number of regional banks from twelve to five, saying that such action would give all the necessary decentralization without too many reserve banks. He felt that the currency system with five regional banks only would be stronger, the individual banks more powerful and infinitely safer, and he believed that the gold supply could be better controlled with a smaller number of banks. Mr. Jones does not believe that it would be advisable that the public be stockholders in the reserve banks. He said that if there is not a sufficiently satisfactory movement on the part of the national banks toward the new system, it is because the inducement to join is not sufficiently attractive.

ELECTED PRESIDENT OF KANSAS BANK

Montana Farmers Pay High Rate of Interest

J. M. Kennedy of Helena, commissioner of agriculture and publicity for Montana, has been compiling information in his office concerning interest rates on farm loans in the Northwest, and the figures show some very interesting facts. For instance—it is shown that the interest rate on secured farm loans in Iowa is 5 1-2 per cent; Minnesota, South Dakota and Nebraska about 5.7 per cent and Wisconsin 5 1-9 per cent. Montana pays the highest of all, 9.3 per cent. This is on first mortgage loans. The interest rates on farmers' notes unsecured other than by credit of the giver is higher, of course, in all centers, but Montana again pays much the higher rate. The range is from 5.8 per cent in Wisconsin to 11.4 per cent in Montana, the lowest rate being in Iowa. It is a singular fact that while the government reports and statistics, the authenticity of which cannot be disputed, show that Montana farm lands produce per acre more profit to the farmer than the farm lands of any other state or territory in the American union, the farmer is taxed for his loans in Montana more than in any other section of the Northwest.

Speaking on this question Mr. Kennedy said: "It has been the pleasant policy of the bankers outside of Montana who have been releasing money to Montana patrons for farm loans to insist that farming is more precarious in Montana than elsewhere, that the state is new and undeveloped, and that farming is largely an experiment here; that the loan risk is greater in Montana than anywhere else west of the Mississippi river. This is grossly unfair to the state. It hampers the agricultural development of Montana. It places an unjust burden upon the husbandmen of the commonwealth of many hundreds of thousands of dollars annually. I personally know of one county in Montana where only one bank is located in one of the most prosperous sections of the state. The little town where the bank is situated is surrounded by one of the most magnificent farming and fruit raising districts in all this Northwest country. Most of the farmers in the vicinity of that town are prosperous; in fact all of them are who have been there any length of time, but there is a lot of undeveloped and uncultivated land in the neighborhood. If a new comer goes in there and purchases a piece of that unbroken land and seeks a loan at the local bank for the purpose of making some needed improvements, no matter what the security he has to offer, he has to pay 12 per cent. Recently I spoke to some agents of loan companies representing eastern money in this state, and asked them why it was that cheaper money could not be obtained by the farmers in the country of which I am speaking. The answer was there had not been much development there yet and the agents of the loan companies had never been in that section and did not know much about it.

"One of the big insurance companies recently made a point in its reports to its stockholders to call attention to the fact that none of the company's funds were invested in the state of Montana. The officers of the company seemed to think this was a matter upon which they should be congratulated. It is the pleasant occupation of many of the men representing big money in the eastern and middle states to continually question the safety of money invested in Montana properties. I get much literature almost daily at this office, and when I read it I get boiling mad.

"One of the greatest necessities this state faces to-day is cheaper money to meet the requirements of the men who are doing most to upbuild the state and advance its prosperity and development. The representative of one of the largest loan companies in Oregon told me in Helena a few days ago that his company had recently loaned nearly $5,000,000 in this state to stock men for the purpose of moving their stock this fall. He said that some of the officers of his company had questioned the wisdom of loaning so much money on Montana stock, but that he had persuaded them it was without question both safe and profitable to do so.

"It is estimated that a group of five north-western states, of which Montana is one, requires to-day not less than $1,000,000,000 for the immediate purpose of replacing old farm buildings, buying new stock and machinery, building fences and purchasing general equipment and putting under cultivation new and fertile soil. This is perhaps a very modest estimate of the needs of the farmers in the territory mentioned. Uncounted thousands of acres of splendidly fertile lands are lying idle to-day in the state of Montana awaiting only the money and labor necessary to clear, drain, break and till that soil. Necessarily the cultivation of this land will be delayed as long as the farmer is required to pay the present rates of interest for the loans necessary for his success in farming. This question is being discussed in general terms, of course.

"I realize that the conditions surrounding the borrower and his own individuality enter largely in every instance into the question of the loan, but it is unreasonable, unfair and indefensible that in a country where dairying, stock raising, mixed farming, gardening and horticulture are carried on with almost universal success and profit, as is the case in the state of Montana to-day, that the operators carrying forward these enterprises are compelled to pay a rate of interest several per cent higher on their loans than their competitors in other states of the Northwest are required to pay.

"Throughout Montana to-day the farmers are almost universally in good shape financially. They are improving their property; they are adding to their live stock; they are improving the grade of that stock; they are paying their bills with regularity and promptness; their lands are increasing in value faster than the farm lands of any other state in the Northwest; they are surrounded by natural conditions that make for financial success where industry, sobriety and intelligence are exercised in any moderate degree. Why should they pay a higher rate of interest on their loans to carry on their operations than is paid by farmers in any other section of the Northwest?

"Montana needs more cheap money, and this office is doing all it can to direct the attention of the mortgage and loan companies of the eastern and middle western states to the advantages to be obtained in the Montana field."

INDIANA BANK TO MAKE ADDITION

The American Trust and Savings, Evansville, Ind., has taken out a permit for a $25,000 addition to their building at Sixth and Main streets. Plans have been prepared for the third story that will be added to the building and the additional space will be used for office suites, practically all of which are already under lease. When the improvements are completed the American Trust and Savings Company will have the largest bank building in the city.

GEORGIA BANKS IN FINE SHAPE

Reports of the Georgia state bank examiners filed with State Treasurer William J. Speer show that the banks of Georgia are in an unusually prosperous condition. Captain Speer stated last week that these reports show that money is growing much easier and that collections are good. He expressed the opinion that there would be a still further improvement in financial and general trade conditions due to the improvement of the cotton crop.

FORMER PROVIDENCE BANKER INDICTED

Edward P. Metcalf, who resigned the presidency of Atlantic National of Providence two weeks before that institution closed its doors last April, has, with four New York directors, been indicted and charged with the misappropriation of $200,000 of the bank's money. There are twenty-four counts in the indictment.

DETROIT BANK INCREASES CAPITAL

On recommendation of the directors the stockholders of the Detroit Savings Bank have approved an increase of the capital stock from $400,000 to $750,000. The plan by which it is to be worked out will give the bank undivided profits of about $300,000.

The new stock of $300,000 par value will be offered the present stockholders pro rata at $150 a share. The remaining $50,000 par value will be placed in the hands of a trustee to be sold to selected purchasers, not now identified with the bank, at $225.

OKLAHOMA BANK LIQUIDATES

Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane has announced the voluntary liquidation of the Kiowa National of Snyder, Okla., to be succeeded by the Kiowa State of that city.

KANSAS BANKING BUSINESS GROWS

The deposits in Kansas state banks September 4th totaled $118,170,478.86 against $106,049,142.85, an increase of more than $12,000,000 in a year, despite the loss of the corn crop and serious drouth damage to the forage crops. In the same time the loans had increased about $6,000,000 since September, 1912, showing a clear gain of more than $6,000,000 in the state banks. The national bank statement of August 9th shows deposits of $71,000,000 in Kansas. Bank Commissioner Sawyer of Kansas said:

"Since June, when the state bank deposits showed $111,912,346.36, the wheat crop has been harvested and much of it has gone to market. The unprecedented drouth has also forced the marketing of many cattle much earlier than usual and the increase in deposits comes largely from these two sources. The loans have increased almost two million dollars, which shows that the banks are meeting the demands of the people arising from the extreme conditions of the summer. It may reasonably be expected that the deposits will decrease from now until the next harvest."

Despite the many cheerful messages sent out of Kansas since the drouth stories spread, this bank report was an agreeable surprise.

VAN VECHTEN EXPLAINS CAUSES OF FAILURES

Ralph Van Vechten last week submitted at the clearing house meeting a comprehensive analysis of the causes leading up to twenty-one leading concerns which became insolvent. Fifteen of the failures were due to overextended credit, two were caused by dry rot, poor business and poor management; one was the outcome of labor troubles and poor business; one was due to internal dissensions. In another investigation showed that for a long period the actual working capital had been employed by the largest stockholder of the concern in his private operations; one failure was the result of flood conditions in the Ohio valley. There were found nine cases of padded or dishonest statements.

Mr. Van Vechten then called attention to a number of abuses which these failures disclosed and advocated a radical change in some of the practices which have prevailed.

Thomas Reilly of Omaha has been named a state bank examiner by Governor Morehead of Nebraska.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

Bankers who are interested in soil improvement work will read with interest of the appointment of Dr. Cyril G. Hopkins to take an important place in the upbuilding of the soil of the South. Dr. Hopkins has been granted a one year's leave of absence from the University of Illinois, and in a way has been "loaned" to the Southern Settlement and Developing Company, which has its headquarters at Baltimore. This organization is composed of the governors of the southern states and of the presidents of the important railroads of the South. There are no mercenary motives in the work, but the object is the general upbuilding of a better agriculture and a better rural life in the South.

Dr. Hopkins will leave the University of Illinois November 7th for his new work and will maintain his headquarters at Baltimore. He is to be the director of the work and will attempt to aid in the work of giving the southern states permanent systems of agriculture, soil fertility and advanced rural life.

Building Association Men Meet

The annual state convention of the Building Association League of Illinois will hold its annual convention in Springfield October 23d and 24th. Extensive preparations are being made by the Springfield Commercial Association for the entertainment of the guests. The secretary of the commercial association of Springfield, Harry M. Snape, who is himself a building and loan man, is making active preparations for the coming of the building association guests, who will number probably 250 men. A number of addresses by men who are expert in the building and loan work will be made. C. F. Hildred of Freeport is the president of the league and B. G. Vason of Quincy is the secretary.

Bankers find the building and loan associations in almost every instance to be of the best help to their customers. The associations of Illinois, for the most part, are very efficiently and economically managed and many worthy persons are aided in buying and owning homes or in accumulating funds through the monthly dues paid into these organizations. In almost every town there are to-day representative men who have secured their start in the business or professional world by the aid of these building and loan associations. Bankers encourage their work, knowing them to be carefully working along the lines of thrift and economy so much needed in our country now.

New State Banks Organized

The state auditor has issued a permit to I. E. Merritt, Murray F. Merritt and Mark R. Koplin for the incorporation of the Wellington State Bank of Wellington, Iroquois county. Messrs. I. E. Merritt and Mark R. Koplin are president and cashier, respectively, of the Hoopeston National at Hoopeston. They recently established a private bank at Wellington, following the failure of the private bank of Alexander Pate. They have now decided to make the institution a state bank. Murray Merritt, cashier of the new bank, is a nephew of I. E. Merritt.

Messrs. I. E. Merritt and M. R. Koplin conduct private banks at Buckley and Danforth, towns in Iroquois county, and they resided in Buckley previous to their removal to Hoopeston about four years ago. Mr. Merritt is now mayor of Hoopeston and is chairman of the Vermilion County Bankers Association. Both men are active in church, fraternal and social affairs in Hoopeston. They have also announced that they will begin the erection of a new bank building in Wellington, to be of the most approved plan for small towns. The capital of the new state bank will be $25,000.

The state auditor has issued a permit to W. C. Regelin, F. F. Hoffman, Jacob M. Horn and William H. Stevenson, Jr., for the incorporation of the Logan Square Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, with capital of $200,000.

Railroads Plan Improvements

Notwithstanding the close financial conditions reported by various railroads, there will be a large amount of building and improvement by many railroads in this state during the next few months. The Burlington has appropriated $350,000 for thirty-nine new stations, among the Illinois cities thus favored being Ottawa, LaSalle, Earlville, Oregon, Macomb and Centralia. The Chicago and Alton has recently dedicated at Bloomington, with elaborate dedicatory services, a mammoth three-story passenger station and office building. The Illinois Central has completed a new passenger station in Paxton and freight stations in that city will be erected by both the Illinois Central and the Lake Erie and Western. The "four-track" system of the Illinois Central, which is now being completed from Chicago to Kankakee, is also attracting much attention. The same road also has rebuilt and extended its roundhouses and yards at Champaign and much yard improvement will be made by various roads.

Interurban business is reported to be large and increasing. The Illinois Traction System is erecting a large new passenger station and office building at Champaign and has also announced a new nine-story passenger station and office building for Peoria.

dustrial cities in Illinois, reports so much building and expansion that a "labor famine" is now threatened. The Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad is building a $350,000 addition to the Danville shops and the contractor cannot find men enough to work. The plant of the Danville Malleable Iron Company, employing 300 men, has just been opened, fifteen miles of country roads out of the city are being paved with brick and the Big Four railroad is building a repair shop to cost about $250,000. Smaller improvements, with the above mentioned, will carry the new improvements over the million dollar mark. The new Vermilion county court house, soon to be dedicated, is a beauty and the city and county are proud of it. The six banks of Danville—the First National, Second National, Palmer National, Danville National, Commercial Trust and Savings and the American Bank and Trust Company—are enjoying the best of business and are keeping in touch with the rapid increase of their city's growth.

Palmer National of Danville

The view of the interior of the Palmer National of Danville, which was reproduced in a full-page picture published in last week's issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER, showed the interior of one of the most beautiful bank buildings in the state. The fixtures were designed and installed by the E. Jackson Casse Company of Chicago. The Palmer National of Danville occupies a prominent corner in that city and faces the square or plaza, and is directly opposite the beautiful new Vermilion county courthouse. The bank is in full view of the hotels and is just across the street from the passenger station of the Illinois Traction System.

The Palmer National of Danville has long been associated with the affairs of the Palmer family. C. J. and C. K. Palmer having been prominent business men of that city for many years. M. J. Wolford is the president; Thomas Monron, vice-president; Herman Bahls, cashier, and J. E. Walker and R. C. Wait, assistant cashiers. The capital is $200,000 and the surplus fund is $80,000. Deposits average from $500,000 to $700,000. The correspondents are the Chase National of New York and the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago.

Bank at Bradford Robbed

The Bradford Exchange Bank, in a town of the same name in Stark county northwest of Peoria, was robbed recently of sums variously reported to have been from $1,000 to $10,000. The bank was owned by Mrs. Rosa Thompson, who was the president. The robbers escaped in an automobile. One of the yeggmen went to the village telephone office and threatened to shoot the night operator if she went near the switchboard. Robert Thompson was cashier and J. E. Harney assistant cashier. The correspondents of the bank are the Corn Exchange National of Chicago and the Illinois National of Peoria.

Closed Bank Reorganized

The Bank of Creston, near Rockford, which was conducted by George Stocking and which recently failed, has been reorganized and has resumed business. Lyman Birdsall of Rochelle and Otto A. Wedler of Rockford are the interested parties and will conduct the business. Mr. Wedler and Chief of Police Hodge of Rochelle brought out a large sum of money from Chicago, said to have aggregated $100,000, to be used in paying depositors in case of a run being made on the bank. The assets of Stocking are said to have been $440,000 and the liabilities reached only $300,000 and the friends of George Stocking declared the bank to have been solvent.

Illinois Notes

Work on the new building of the Havana National of Havana is progressing nicely and workmen have set the granite work. When completed this will be one of the best bank buildings in the smaller cities of the state.

Canton will vote on a bond issue of $49,000 to build a new grammar school building.

The First National of Kankakee, which bank is doing some of the best publicity work in the state, is explaining in their newspaper advertisements, or newspaper talks to young men, how other "young fellows" and young business men have earned and saved money for certain purposes. Examples are given, without mentioning names, of course, of how this or that young man saved enough money to go to college or to make some other substantial start in life. The First National of Kankakee is doing some strong and telling publicity work of the right kind. Len Small is the president and C. R. Miller is the cashier.

Forgeries and other "crooked" work continue to baffle the wits of bankers and business men over the state. Kankakee, Joliet, Peoria, Springfield and many other cities reporting annoyance.

Calhoun county, located in the tongue of land between the Illinois and Mississippi rivers, has sold an apple crop worth $40,000 this year, so that there is a fair measure of prosperity in that part of the state. There are six banks in the county, all of which are owned by the same men and no loans are made outside of the county. Calhoun county has a rather unique distinction in Illinois, there being no railroad in the county, but there is seemingly plenty of money in that part of the state.

D. K. Fell, vice-president of the Kewanee State Savings Bank and Trust Company of Kewanee and well known as a land owner and a financier, died recently at his home in Toulon, Stark county.

Thrift is being taught to the children in the public schools of Kankakee, where one of the most successful penny savings systems in the state is being conducted. In a recent week 841 children saved and deposited $144.99. The work has been carried on so successfully at Kankakee that it is now permanently established and other cities are now doing the same work.

Leonard Scroggins, president of the Farmers Bank of Scroggins & Son of Mt. Pulaski, who is ninety-five years of age, was able to attend and enjoy the state fair at Springfield. Mr. Scroggins was born in 1818 and is still hale and hearty. He travels considerably on business errands. He is a large land owner, not only in Illinois and other states but also in Canada. He owns 20,000 acres of land in Canada and it is said that the deed to this land was signed by the late Queen Victoria.

S. B. Montgomery, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, has announced that a meeting of the administrative committee, composed of himself, Vice-President J. S. Aisthorpe and Chairman of the Executive Council George Woodruff, would soon be called and the standing committees for the year would be named.

Peoria banks closed Monday, October 13th, Columbus Day, but the holiday was not generally observed throughout the state.

James H. Belt, owner of a private bank at Bunker Hill, near Litchfield, has been adjudged bankrupt in the United States district court. His liabilities are said to be $188,790 and his assets $108,000.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

They are all back, the fifty Wisconsin bankers and the wives who made the sightseeing trip to the A. B. A. convention. They arrived in Milwaukee Tuesday after a trip of 2,700 miles, in which Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Montreal, Quebec, Toronto, and Niagara Falls were included. As usual, Secretary George D. Bartlett was charge d'affaires of the Wisconsin delegation and received high commendation for the smoothness with which arrangements unreel. The Wisconsin bankers were joined on the homeward journey by 100 bankers and their wives of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Illinois and Iowa.

In retrospect President Oliver Clyde Fuller of the Wisconsin Trust Company discusses the attitude of the A. B. A. convention towards the Owen-Glass currency bill as follows:

"I believe that the belief of President Wilson and his friends that the only opposition to the Owen-Glass bill comes from the big bankers in the big cities was more seriously shaken by that meeting of country bankers during the Boston convention than by anything that has happened or could have happened of a similar nature. Already I think we can see signs of a wavering of the president's friends in their determination to push the bill through the senate without delay and without amendments.

"The general opinion of the bankers assembled at Boston was that in its present form the scheme will prove absolutely unworkable and that unless changed in several respects so many of the country bankers will refuse to come in and subscribe their pro rata of the capital stock of the regional reserve banks that it will be impossible to organize all of them, and that in the end the whole scheme will fall of its own weight and lack of support.

"My personal belief is that Senator Owen and a majority of his committee are now convinced that the bill must be changed in several essentials and that it will be so changed as to make it attractive not only to the national banks, but possibly to some state banks as well. If that is done it will prove of great benefit to the whole country to be rid of our present inelastic currency system and provide a proper means of expansion and to enforce a contraction of credit when no longer needed for legitimate business."

Plan for Handling Securities of Defunct Trust Company

Bank Commissioner A. E. Kuolt, Judge F. C. Eschweiler and attorneys for the defunct Citizens Savings and Trust Company and its participating certificate holders will meet next Tuesday afternoon to determine upon final steps in winding up the company's affairs. The bank commissioner has given his consent to the proposal of the stockholders to organize a new company to take over the trusteeship of mortgages held to secure loans made by the defunct company and against which participating certificates were issued, providing a large enough percentage of the participating certificate holders are agreeable to the plan. It was the opinion of the stockholders that possibly 75 per cent of the former would consent to have the new company act for them, giving its officers power to work out the best methods of handling these securities unhampered by threats of litigation. No cut rate sales, was the ultimatum of the bank commissioner, who insisted that the securities be sold on the best terms possible and when the market is most favorable. Pending settlement of the company's affairs depositors have been asked to wait ninety days for their money.

Wisconsin Notes

The engagement of Miss Carolyn Harding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harding, Omaha, Neb., to Justus Frederick Lowe of the First Savings and Trust Company's bond department, has been announced. Mr. Lowe is a former resident of Omaha.

J. D. McMillan, Minneapolis lumberman, was elected director of the Wisconsin Central railroad, subsidiary of the Soo Line, at the stockholders' meeting in Milwaukee last week, to succeed Sidney C. Courteen, Milwaukee, retired, after serving on the directorate three years. All other directors were re-elected.

The following new state banks have been approved: Peoples State of Whitehall, capital $15,000; State Bank of Stetsonville, capital $10,000; State Bank of Ogema, capital $10,000.

¶ This Bank, being at the logical center of Wisconsin banking activity, and having an exceptional list of State and Foreign correspondents, offers its services to conservative Banks with the assurance that such a connection will be of mutual advantage.

LEGISLATIVE REGULATION OF CORPORATE REORGANIZATIONS

Robert S. Walker of the New York bar addressed the trust company section last week on "Additional Legislative Regulation of Corporate Reorganizations." Mr. Walker took the "reconstruction Acts" of Great Britain and discussed their appropriateness for enactment in this country. In Great Britain there are three general methods of winding up: (A) by court; (B) voluntary; and (C) subject to supervision of the court, he said. He then reviewed the difficulties that would arise under the constitution in making these statutes effective. England has but one parliament while we have forty-eight plus congress. The efforts of the commissioner of uniform state laws indicate how slowly general enactments, even of the most drab and dispassionate sort, become law. "Until we have some form of federal reorganization or registration, we shall have no right of departure for federal regulation of reorganization," he said. "Even did such legislation exist, it manifestly could apply only to corporations as are properly amenable to federal control—a very limited class, from which are excluded the host of corporations engaged in insurance, banking (other than national banks), mining, manufacturing, trading in short, practically all the corporations except the carriers of freight and of intelligence. Thus the problem can be solved only conditionally, if at all, by act of congress.

Still graver difficulties arise from our constitution. The several states are prohibited from impairing the obligation of contracts. A certain amount of restraint is placed on congress by the prohibition against depriving persons or corporations of property without due process of law. Hence any statute that took the course of forcing upon a dissentient minority a plan of reorganization or an emission of new securities would be subject to vital objections. In this country we do not countenance legislation that would debar a single bondholder from suing on the contract contained in his bond." Mr. Walker then cited instances of such legislation and continued:

One of the reasons urged for adopting the British reconstruction system is that it would give small security holders a simple recourse to the courts in the event that they consider themselves unjustly dealt with by a proposed reorganization plan. Resort to the courts is of no important value if the court cannot give relief. There is no use of passing legislation which would merely afford a place of lamentations without empowering the court to remedy the evils lamented.

"The upshot of the matter is that, unless the court can be given the power to foreclose and debar the minority, nothing is to be gained from such statutes beyond a modicum of publicity. The paramount feature of the British acts cannot be had in the United States. We can have courts or commissions approve or tinker a plan as a plan, but not force a single security holder, assenting or dissenting, to accept the plan thus canonized. Thus there is unnecessary confusion in the minds of those who urge the adoption of statutes like the British reconstruction acts. Save possibly (and of this I am very skeptical) as part of a modified bankruptcy statute, the thing appears to be impossible."

In conclusion Mr. Walker said:

"By this all too hasty survey it is at least indicated, I trust, that the vigorous, efficient British statutes apparently cannot be enacted here without amending our constitution; that anything short of the British plan adds nothing beyond publicity of dubious value, and in many cases adds to the perplexities and harassments attending the efforts of conscientious bankers endeavoring to rehabilitate discredited properties; and that our existing practices give every creditor and stockholder his day in court and preserve the right of free barter—propositions as soundly American and democratic as the British legislation is arbitrary and monarchical."

MONEY FIRM

The prevailing rate for money in Chicago continues to remain around 6 per cent, although certain borrowers entitled to special consideration have been able to secure funds at $5\frac{1}{2}$ and $5\frac{3}{4}$. The amount of money obtained at these rates, however, is comparatively small.

A considerable country demand is being made on the commercial banks. General conditions seem to indicate that business as a whole is keeping up satisfactorily.

NEW ARKANSAS BANK

The First National Bank has been organized at Stuttgart, Ark., with a capital of $26,000. Theodore Muense is president; George G. Lewis, vice-president, and C. H. Denslow, cashier.

COMPANY ACTS AS BANKER FOR EMPLOYEES

Striking a blow at loan sharks and giving a closer relation between the company and its employees, the Ford Motor Co. of Detroit, Mich., has put into effect a plan that aims to develop the habit of regular and systematic saving among the 16,000 men on its pay-roll. It has formed an Employees' Saving and Loan Association, under the administration of a committee that includes F. L. Klingensmith, an official of the company.

A small regular deposit is made to the association each pay day. Membership then permits the employee to deposit all the money he can spare in his regular savings account in his bank. If some emergency arises, he may borrow from the association by the payment of a fee without disturbing his bank balance and losing interest on it.

The rates of interest charged for money borrowed until the next pay day (two weeks) are as follows: $5 or less, 10 cents; $6 to $10, 20 cents; $11 to $15, 30 cents; $16 to $20, 40 cents. The loans are secured by order on the paymaster, who deducts the amount of the loan from the next pay of the borrower. Loans in excess of $20 may be obtained on such terms and time as may be arranged by the administration committee. All fees are collected at the time of making the loan.

Earnings of the association will arise from fees on loans to employees, interest on bank deposits and interest on special loans or investments made by the administration committee, which is appointed by the vice-president or treasurer of the Ford company. All earnings after any losses or expenses are paid will be distributed to the members at the end of each quarter in the form of a cash dividend.

Membership in the association is limited to the employees of the Ford Motor Co. and is entirely voluntary.

ROB BANK OF ALL CASH

Kewanee, Ill.—The Bradford Exchange Bank at Bradford, Ill., owned by Mrs. Rose Thompson, was robbed of all the cash it had on hand last week when the vaults and safe were blown up. The robbers escaped in an automobile.

One robber entered the telephone office and threatened to shoot the operator if she went near the switchboard. It is reported that between $2,000 and $3,000 was obtained, but the bank refused to divulge the amount.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis bank clearings for the month of September showed a gain of nearly 5 per cent over those of the corresponding month last year. Affairs at the financial institutions during the past week continued lively and a satisfactory volume of business was transacted.

Thirty-Five Years With Bank

William B. Cowen, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis, on Monday of last week received congratulations on the thirty-fifth anniversary of his connection with the bank. He has been vice-president since February, 1908. Mr. Cowen in 1878 began his active business career as clerk in the National Bank of Commerce. After serving a thorough apprenticeship in all the departments of the bank, he was rapidly promoted. He was made assistant cashier in 1898.

Manchester Bank Re-elects

Officers and directors of the Manchester Bank of St. Louis were re-elected last week, with the exception of A. M. Becker, vice-president, who resigned both as director and vice-president. Alfred J. Siegel, president of the Huttig Sash and Door Company, was chosen vice-president in the place of Mr. Becker, and John M. Schwaig, president of the Standard Clothing and Tailoring Company, was elected the new member of the board of directors. Gustav Bischoff, president of the St. Louis Independent Packing Company, was re-elected president and August E. Brooker secretary and cashier.

New Commonwealth Directors

William C. McBride, said to be the largest individual producer of oil in the United States, and Charles J. Maguire, president of the Maguire Coal Company, on Thursday of last week were elected directors of the Commonwealth Trust, St. Louis. They fill vacancies caused by the death of Elias Michael and the resignation of W. C. Nixon, a receiver for the Frisco railroad.

Charles H. Huttig Estate

The estate of Charles H. Huttig, the late president of the Third National, was listed at $1,218,765.39 in an inventory filed in the probate court last week. Of that amount $1,199,205 was invested in stocks, which were listed as Third National, 1,100 shares; St. Louis and San Francisco railroad, 2,650 common shares and 450 preferred shares; Huttig Sash and Door Company, 1,250 shares; Chemical Building Company, 520 shares; United Railways, 500 common shares and 1,200 preferred shares. Mr. Huttig also had invested in companies outside of St. Louis. His bonds were listed at $15,700 and notes $567.36.

Commerce Vaults Sold

Alterations to cost $25,000 will prepare the ground floor basement of the New Bank of Commerce building, northeast corner of Broadway and Pine streets, for the occupancy, January 1st, of the Mortgage Trust and the Mortgage Guarantee Company of St. Louis. The Mortgage Trust has purchased the business of the Commerce Safe Deposit Company, owned by the National Bank of Commerce, and will take possession of its safe deposit vaults in the basement on New Year's day, said James H. Grover, vice-president of the trust company. Tom W. Bennett is president. The Mortgage Trust has taken a long lease on the first floor and basement and will abandon its present quarters at the southeast corner of Fourth and Pine streets. The guarantee company has the same officers and directors and is closely affiliated with the trust company. Both companies will remain together as now.

Missouri Notes

Patton, A. Lee Ely, E. W. Schweer, R. L. Wilson and C. W. Hoare. A new bank building is being erected and the doors will be opened within forty days.

The directors of the Guthrie Bank, Guthrie, have awarded the contract to erect a bank building, the cost to be $1,900. The building will be finished about the first of December and the bank will open as soon as the building is ready.

James A. Jackson, cashier of the Gates City Bank of Kansas City was married recently to Miss Hazel Wilson.

Bankers Willing to Finance State

Arkansas bankers will be asked to carry out-standard warrants issued by the state treasurer through a resolution adopted by a number of bankers at a meeting held in the office of Governor George W. Hays recently. W. H. Garaffo, president of the State National, Little Rock, presided. Governor Hays explained that the state would issue warrants to the extent of about $550,000 more than there would be cash coming in to meet prior to the next settlement between county collectors and the state treasurer. He asked the bankers to formulate a plan by which they could carry this amount of warrants, and it was decided to ask the bank-of the state to carry warrants in proportion to their capital stock at a graduated scale of interest based upon the number of months the warrants are due to run. The base rate of interest discussed was 10 per cent, but Governor Lays is of the opinion that this will be reduced. The banks will be asked to carry $400 worth of warrants for every $10,000 in capital or surplus. There are 487 banks in Arkansas with capital and surplus of about $25,000,000.

Tulsa Bank Changes Owners

A change in the ownership of the Colonial Trust, the largest state bank in Tulsa, Okla., has been announced. J. W. Orr, president and L. Orr, vice-president, have disposed of their interests in the bank. I. F. Crow, former state bank commissioner, is the new president of the institution; J. W. Lewis, cashier of the First National of Sedan, Kan., becomes vice-president, and W. E. Bennett, assistant bank commissioner of Kansas, cashier.

Surety Firm Must Pay Bond

State money deposited in a bank and secured by a surety bond must be paid wholly by the surety company, notwithstanding the deposit is held by a state bank, the deposits of which are protected by the bank guaranty law, according to the ruling of Judge Edward Dewes of the Oklahoma county superior court, when he awarded the commissioners of the land office a judgment of $56,016 against the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company of Maryland. This decision affects similar questions that arise at every bank failure in the state. The judgment rendered against the Fidelity company was an outgrowth of the failure of the Columbia Bank and Trust Company of Oklahoma City, September 29, 1909. At the time of the bank's failure the commissioners of the land office had on deposit more than $50,000 of the public funds, payment of which was demanded and refused by the defunct bank and A. M. Loung, bank commissioner, who took official charge of the bank, according to the petition filed in the case.

Changes at Lawton Bank

Frank L. Ketch recently resigned as cashier of the Lawton (Okla.) National and is succeeded by E. E. Cones. Mr. Ketch has moved to Ardmore, where he now is identified with the Ringling railroad and townsite interest, being in charge of the office. F. A. Parkinson, who has been vice-president of the institution, has become active in the management of the bank. C. E. Malone, who has been acting as teller, has been made assistant cashier.

Texarkana Bank Clearings Show Increase

Bank clearings in Texarkana, Tex., during the month of September, according to figures given out by Ed Kuhl, manager of the Texarkana Clearing House Association, amounted to $1,741,278.55, nearly half a million in excess of the August clearings, which totalled $1,270,000.

Buy Lubbock Bank

Negotiations have been closed by which Ray Wheatley and Charles A. Fisk of Amarillo purchased the stock of L. T. Lester in the First National, Lubbock, Tex., the transfer giving the Amarillo financiers controlling interest in the institution. Mr. Fisk was put on the board of directors, the official personnel of the bank remaining the same as heretofore. The Lubbock National is one of the most substantial institutions on the plains, with a capital stock of $50,000 and surplus of $25,000.

Southwest Notes

Col. D. N. Fulbright has been elected vice-president and director of the Farmers Bank at Olvey, Ark.

The Bank of Grady, Grady, Ark., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $15,000, all of which has been subscribed. The officers are J. H. Hellums, president; B. F. Ingram, vice-president, and L. S. Goodman, secretary-treasurer.

H. H. Whithouse of Kansas City, Mo., has been made cashier of the Oklahoma State, Enid, Okla., to take the place of H. A. Dillon, who has resigned to become secretary and treasurer of the old Union Mutual Hail Insurance Company. This company lately went into the hands of a receiver. Mr. Dillon has paid off the liabilities of the company, reorganized it and will become secretary and treasurer. He will retain his interest in the bank and is still a member of the board of directors. Mr. Whithouse is from the Commerce Trust of Kansas City, where he held the position of discount teller for the past four years. Before that time he was cashier of the Fidelity State of Kansas City, Kan. Mr. Whithouse has purchased an interest in the Oklahoma State and will make Enid his permanent home.

Announcement has been made of the consolidation of the Delaware (Okla.) State and the Citizens State. Both banks were in the best financial shape. The following officers

Harry Bagby of Vinita has been appointed by State Bank Commissioner Lankford to succeed W. M. Malone as building and loan auditor of the department. Mr. Bagby is a son of Dr. Oliver Bagby, president of the First National of Vinita and the appointee was assistant cashier of that institution. Mr. Malone now is connected with the First State of Vinita.

Under a new assignment of territory for the Texas bank examiners, John S. Wightman was transferred from the Houston to the Amarillo district and A. L. Fall, who had been in the Amarillo district, was transferred to the San Antonio district.

A new bank to be known as the Collin County State Bank of Anna has been organized at Anna, Tex., with a capital stock of $35,000, with R. C. Moore, president; Dow Ratten, first vice-president; J. C. Barger, second vice-president, and J. T. Adams of Keller, Tex., cashier. This will make two banks for Anna.

The Texas department of insurance and banking has approved the following banks as reserve agents for state banks:

A. C. Tredick, 60 years old, president of the Farmers State of Kingman, Kan., died recently after six weeks of illness from typhoid fever. He had been a resident of Kingman thirty years and was a pioneer druggist in Kingman. He formerly was president of the First National.

Jones; Cashier, Leonard T. Bradbury. The directorate is composed of Frank W. Sponable, P. W. Goebel, H. C. Jones, S. D. Condon, W. H. Lyon, John R. Fordyce and Charles W. Mitchler.

BANKING INTERESTS IN STRONG HANDS

The great Boston convention—greatest in the forty years of the American Bankers Association—came at a time when banking circles are facing the most trying problem of the age, the enactment of a new banking and currency law. The location was fitting, the attendance of distinguished bankers unprecedented, and the interest shown in the sessions set a new high record. The elections of officers in the association and in the sections, the naming of important committees, produced a line-up grading higher than ever before. Following the example of Washington, who, under the spreading elm of Harvard, "put none but Americans on guard," the great A. B. A. named its ablest thinkers, its most noted tacticians, to lead in the movement upon Washington for a sane, safe and workable banking law.

Speaking of the Boston gathering President Arthur Reynolds said:

"In all the 20 years that I have attended conventions, I have never seen one with as much enthusiasm, as elaborate arrangements and as magnificent hospitality. In point of interest the business part of the convention has never been equalled and I doubt whether we shall ever see its like again.

"The keenness of the discussion over the currency problem, together with the agricultural features of the program, are hardly likely to be repeated. The entertainment features have been perfect in their completeness and in the care with which each detail has been planned. We owe the Boston bankers a deep debt of gratitude."

The great West fared well in the choice of officials and committeemen. President Reynolds is from Iowa and Treasurer Hoopes from Texas. The currency commission has Forgan, Wade, Herrick, Wexler, Swinney and Sartori—a distinguished list. Illinois has Crabtree on the law committee and Lampert on the finance committee. In fact the entire finance list is composed of western names. This is important, for under the new constitution many burdens are placed with this committee. The administrative committee could not be improved upon. President Reynolds is chief, being ex officio the chairman. The two others are Joseph Wayne, Jr., of Pennsylvania and Walter H. Bennett of New York. It will add greatly to the efficiency of the committee that Wayne and Bennett are "close to headquarters." All committeemen under the new constitution are members of council.

The new constitution is the result of five years' work by able men to eradicate petty politics from the association. In times past the council chose a chairman who ultimately became the president, whether fitted for the task or not. Most of the men were able, but in a few cases the routine results lead to a fiasco. Those who were driven out by the abolition of the office of chairman have immediately fastened upon the vice-presidency as the starting point. The nominating committee at Boston came largely pledged and instructed and in no sense was it a deliberative body. This work was done at the state conventions through correspondent banks or by wily personal representatives at a time when the new constitution had not yet been adopted, but in anticipation of it. Further work must be done or the choosing of members of the nominating committee will destroy the five years' work of the reformers. The committee should come to the annual convention open-minded and the very best of those willing to serve must be chosen. Luckily the new constitution provides an escape from fixed-committee nominations. It provides for nominations from the floor. This power was not invoked at Boston, although the incentive was presented in the most inviting form. Radical corrective measures likely will come at Richmond.

EFFECTIVE WORK BY COUNTRY BANKERS

The senate committee has given the country banker full swing in the hearings on the currency bill. The committee appointed at Boston through Woodruff, Rogers and Tilton as spokesman did effective work. The Illinois committee through its chairman, President S. B. Montgomery of the state association, made a fine impression. President A. F. Dawson of the famous "first First" of Davenport was kept on the stand for three hours. Being an ex-congressman and both fluent and convincing, the effectiveness of his testimony had instant proof. Chairman Owen asked Mr. Dawson to furnish him drafts of such amendments as would cover the four principal points emphasized by him in his remarks at the hearing. The points are in the main the very ones agreed upon as vital at the Boston country bankers' conference. The points made are:

- (1) Lessen the capital stock subscription.
 - (2) Protection against loss on the two per cent bonds.
 - (3) Protection against loss in the shifting of reserves.
 - (4) Permit the rediscount of a limited quantity of six months' paper.
 - (5) Give us equal privileges with the state banks, with which we are in direct competition.
- Mr. Dawson has sent out a letter to several hundred small nationals asking further suggestions. If you have a concrete idea as to how to word the amendments he would be glad to receive it. It begins to look like a new law before Christmas. Ex-Speaker Cannon has predicted it as a caucus measure, with or without amendment and Mr. Dawson has only to October 25th to send in his amendments. There is a business-like aspect to the whole line-up that is promising. If the new bill is amended so as to satisfy the reasonable bankers it will go through in quick time. Mr. Dawson took up the subject from the standpoint of the national banks in the average county seat in Iowa—such banks as make up over ninety per cent of the system. There are 7,500 national banks and of these 7,000 are small ones, and he urged upon the committee that the only way to get a workable financial system was to give these smaller banks something that they will go into. It was then he was asked to put into amendment language his ideas of what would satisfy the small banker.

MAKING THE RECORD STRAIGHT

There are those in congress, and upon many daily papers, strange to relate, who thought the great Boston convention of the American Bankers Association was a "called meeting of bankers to protest the currency bill" now before the senate committee at Washington. The Chicago conference of officers of state bankers' associations, clearing house delegates and members of the currency commission was such a meeting, but the Boston meeting was a fixed event and its verdict was one by all classes of banking, open to all member banks. W. T. Fenton of the National Bank of the Republic, Chicago, a member of the A. B. A. council, saw that a misunderstanding existed and promptly sent the following telegram to the president of the United States, the secretary of the treasury, Senator Owen and every member of the senate committee on currency and banking:

"The Boston meeting of bankers was not a called convention. It was the annual meeting of the American Bankers Association, an organization which has had a consecutive existence for nearly forty years. The date and place of meeting for the year 1913 were fixed by the executive committee before the national presidential election last year. It is a well known fact and the names on its executive council will show that the association has been controlled and dominated for the last ten or fifteen years by bankers outside of reserve cities. The subject of the currency bill was a natural one, as was the endorsement of the action of the Chicago conference, which conference in its preamble recognized the earnestness of the administration in its efforts to bring about currency reform, and offered its co-operation. It is not true that the bankers are opposing legislation; on the contrary they themselves have brought about the demand for currency reform and there has been, and now is, a general apathy on the part of the public on this question. The Chicago conference recommended certain amendments by unanimous action and the meeting at Boston simply endorsed the Chicago recommendations unanimously. Where there is so much misunderstanding I think this explanation due both to the bankers and the members of congress, believing that a spirit of fairness on both sides is essential at this time."

YOUR GRAIN DRAFTS are drawn chiefly on Minneapolis. The utmost promptness in presenting them to the drawees is very important. The Northwestern is equipped to handle such drafts with the greatest despatch. Its morning mail sometimes brings in as much as $1,000,000 in this kind of paper alone. The drafts are presented for payment immediately after receipt and the proceeds passed through the same day's clearings. A prompt, definite settlement is thus secured. Each item receives careful, individual consideration. You are notified by wire at once if any difficulty arises. The completeness of the system of collecting as developed by The Northwestern is the result of its forty-one years' experience gained directly at the grain terminal. The total resources backing the bank's efforts are over $35,000,000.

This ought to set at rest the assumption by senators at the currency hearings that the Boston verdict was the result of a "special" and not of an open national convention, a fact well known to all bankers.

RELATION OF THE GOVERNMENT TO THE TRUST COMPANY

Former Congressman Daniel W. McCall spoke on the relation of the government to the trust company at the trust company meeting at Boston. He said he believed the states are able to regulate trust companies without assistance or interference from the federal government.

"While ignorance of the law does not excuse," said the speaker, "ignorance of a subject seems to be a particular qualification for a man who is going to speak. Trust companies it appears, have many privileges; I have little experience of them as going concerns, although twice I have acted as receiver, and I am glad to say that in each case we paid dollar for dollar.

"The business of banking is older than the banks. Rates in early days were so extortionate that the business fell into disrepute, and only the Jews participated in it. The Jews were, in fact, barred from the trades, and there wasn't much but banking left for them. The matter of interest has been difficult for the law to deal with, because money, like other commodities, is governed by the natural law of supply and demand. Therefore, usury still exists.

"I feel very strongly that the great banks could provide for small loans. It is a simple thing for the big borrower to make a loan, but for the small borrower—even though a perfectly meritorious person—often is driven to the loan shark, with the inevitable result of financial destruction. Banks should make a new department for small borrowers; and they would thus get some new business, besides helping worthy people. This is a broad recognition of the banks' obligation to society. Big banks are now like the philanthropists, who living in the upper ether, provide for full minds only; and full minds do not go well with empty stomachs.

In regard to the national government in relation to trust companies, there does not seem to be any specific law for regulation, although the government may step in at any time and take control through a variety of powers which it has.

"It is a great mistake for the government to undertake to regulate trust companies; it may direct the workings of the national banks, but it is well, on account of varying conditions in different parts of the country, for local banks to have home regulation.

"Moreover, I haven't the utmost confidence in national regulation. There is so much legislation at Washington that nobody can follow all of it intelligently; and the legislators are far from home. The genius at Washington can arrange for the stage effects, and with red and green lights and sawdust he can produce illusions which are misleading to the home people. The laws are made, one might say, by men who have been district attorneys at home, and every bill is drawn so that it will indict.

"When the civil war broke out, the government, insolvent, had to depend on the state banks, and an example of poor Government methods is shown in the fact that gold was paid outright by the government and that the banks were unable to redeem in gold. This, I believe, made the war more costly than it should have been.

"Don't overload Washington with any more legislation than is necessary. Keep the laws under the eyes of the people and the home government will be better."

GEORGE SAYS FARM LOANS ARE HIGH CLASS

William George, president of the Old Second National, Aurora, when interviewed at Boston last week, said that high prices for cattle make a strong demand for money.

"The East has a wrong impression of farm credits which should be rectified," he said. "To my mind there is no better loan than one to a farmer. In the 42 years during which my father and I have been in the banking business we have not lost $200 in loans to farmers. It is not generally known that over 50 per cent of the capital stock of banks in Illinois outside of Chicago is owned by farmers."

WANT LONGER TIME SECURITIES ACCEPTED

J. C. Bassett, president of the Aberdeen (S. D.) National, and N. E. Franklin, president of the Deadwood (S. D.) First National, with two South Dakota business men appeared before the senate currency committee at Washington last week to consider the matter of the proposed amendments to the Glass-Owen currency bill.

The special efforts of the South Dakota delegation were directed toward the point of having the currency act accept longer time securities, both as to commercial paper and real estate mortgages, than is now designed by the bill as passed by the house. The South Dakota men contended that such short time paper is not practicable for that part of the country.

The cost is estimated at $750,000. The main office of the bank probably will occupy the first and second floors and basement, while the upper stories will be divided into office suites.

Cleveland

Central States News Letter

Cincinnati

Cleveland National bankers met recently and decided to accept the $600,000 which the United States government has offered to deposit in Cleveland banks as its share of the $50,000,000 crop moving fund. Col. J. J. Sullivan, who is chairman of the clearing house committee which had the matter in charge, said that money is not tight in Cleveland; there is a good brisk demand and the government money will serve as an additional incentive to business development. Besides Col. Sullivan, the committee consists of George A. Coulton, Charles A. Paine, C. E. Farnsworth and W. C. Caine. How much each national bank will take has not been announced.

Cleveland Chapter Opens Winter Activities

Sue Directors

Suit to recover $75,000 from the directors of the Portage Savings and Loan Company was begun in common pleas court at Ravenna last week. The amount is alleged to have been lost to the stockholders by the peculations of S. J. Post, secretary of the concern, who was sentenced to a seven-year term for embezzlement in April, 1913. Nina Wileman, a stockholder living near Ravenna, is named as plaintiff, but the suit is brought in behalf of all stockholders. The defendants named are D. M. Clewell, O. P. Sperra, W. S. Krake, M. G. Garrison, H. W. Riddle and R. B. Carnahan, directors, and A. W. Stocker, treasurer. It is charged that the defendants had charge and supervision of the affairs of the concern and that Post's embezzlement, which is said to have extended over a period of eleven years, was made possible by their gross inattention and negligence. Although the corporation's by-laws provided audit of books each January and July, no audit was had in the eleven years preceding the discovery of the shortage, the petition says. The stockholders' suit was started after O. P. Sperra, one of the directors who had been appointed receiver, had refused to institute suit in their behalf. An accounting is asked and the stockholders seek to recover the full amount of Post's peculations, together with interest from the dates when the various sums were taken.

Ohio Notes

Plans for a three-story brick bank, store and apartment building have been filed with the building commissioner by the East End Bank of Cincinnati, the estimated cost, $21,000. The new structure will be located immediately adjacent to the present location and will be erected in the spring. The East End Bank was organized about six years ago and has a capitalization of $50,000. Its officers are J. A. DeArmond, president; Chas. S. Ferris, vice-president, and Thomas Dressel, cashier and treasurer.

Worry brought on by the failure of the Portage Savings and Loan Company, of which he was a director, caused W. S. Krake to decline in health and he died on Friday of last week. Mr. Krake was one of the defendants in the suit filed by Mrs. Nina Wileman against the directors of the failed bank, asking for judgment against them for the $75,000 embezzled by the secretary, S. J. Post.

Big Gain in Bank Clearings

For the first nine months of 1913 the clearings of Rochester banks were almost $10,000,000 greater than the total for the same period of 1912. The totals are $191,408,508 for January to September, 1913, and $181,548,802 for January to September, 1912. The September clearings were $19,583,745.48 and the balances were $3,760,481.57, making total transactions of $23,344,227.05, more than a million in excess of the total of September, 1912, while the clearings for August and June of this year were below those for the same month of 1912.

Syracuse Bank Takes Canadian School Bonds

The Trust and Deposit Company of Onondaga has purchased a block of Canadian school bonds amounting to $100,000. President Arthur W. Loasby said that the bonds of Canadian municipalities are quickly absorbed by the London market under ordinary conditions, but that recently, on account of the disturbed Balkan situation and the stringency in the long market, New York bond houses have been literally besieged by Canadian cities who desire to place their new issues.

Changes at Louisville Bank

Stoughton B. Lynd, for thirty-five years connected with the Citizens National and for eight years cashier of that institution, last week became vice-president. Percy H. Johnston, national bank examiner at large, succeeds Mr. Lynd. Mr. Johnston, until he became a national bank examiner, was connected with the Marion National of Lebanon, Ky.

To Form State Institution

It has been reported that upon the consolidation of the Dorchester and Farmers and Merchants National banks, Cambridge, Md.,

the charters of the two institutions will be surrendered and a state bank established. The new institution will have a capital stock of $100,000 and a surplus of an equal amount. It is said that the Dorchester Bank will divide its undivided profits among its stockholders, leaving its surplus of $50,000 untouched, while the Farmers and Merchants Bank will reduce its surplus from $60,000 to $40,000 and levy an assessment of about $10,000 in order to bring its surplus up to $50,000. It is said that former Governor Henry Lloyd, now president of the Dorchester Bank, will head the new institution, with William F. Applegarth, Governor Goldsborough and W. Lake Robinson as vice-presidents.

Detroit Bank Enlarges Quarters

A five-year lease for the entire ground floor of the Union Trust building has been closed by the National Bank of Commerce, Detroit, and the Union Trust. The bank for the past three years has occupied the south side of the ground floor of the building and the increase in space will just about double its quarters. The new addition was until recently the offices of the Metropolitan State Bank. The offices will be entirely remodeled and decorated and when completed will give the bank one of the most convenient banking quarters in Detroit. It is expected that the changes will be completed and the new banking offices ready for occupancy by January 1st.

Reports on Jossman State

Elmer P. Webster, receiver of the defunct Jossman State of Clarkston, Mich., has filed his inventory with the circuit court. The assets total $154,136, the estimate including all stocks Jossman held that were signed over to the bank. The bank's total liabilities at the present time amount to $212,000. This does not include $21,124 in notes and mortgages placed by Jossman in Detroit banks. These, if not paid, will have to be met by the defunct bank. Mr. Jossman turned over to the receiver here twenty shares in the International Livestock and Lumber Company and stated he did not wish to withhold anything that would help lower the deficit. The total assets of the bank as classified: Commercial loans, $50,659; bonds and mortgages, $48,485; savings loans as listed, $32,842; cash in bank and reserve banks, $2,008; furniture and fixtures, $1,252; banking house, $5,000; stocks, $12,340. A $10,000 bond given by Jossman ten years ago, secured by Harrison Walter and Joseph A. Jossman, which the receiver says he will make an effort to collect, is not included.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by F. C. Redmond

Final plans for the sixteen-story Merchants National Bank building on the northwest corner of Fourth and Robert streets, St. Paul, have been approved by the board of directors and work of wrecking the old bank building will be begun at once. It is expected to have the construction work well under way by spring and the building ready for occupancy by January 1, 1915. The approximate cost will be $1,000,000. The new structure will be of renaissance style and front on Robert Street. It will be a steel structure faced with terra cotta and white enameled brick. The Merchants National will occupy the second and third floors, while the first floor will be occupied by stores. A broad marble stairway set in polished granite portals will lead from the main entrance of the building to the banking room on the second floor. The women will have a department of their own with special tellers and retiring rooms. There are also spacious rooms set aside in the plans for the use of out-of-town bankers and patrons of the institution.

Big Concern Enters State

The Western Finance Company, a $5,000,000 corporation, organized under the laws of Delaware, filed a copy of its articles with Secretary of State Schmahel last week. Three prominent Minneapolis financiers are the incorporators. They are F. E. Kenaston, president of the Minneapolis Threshing Machine Company; E. C. Warner, and P. M. Starnes. The company will utilize $2,500,000 of its capital in Minnesota. There is $3,000,000 of common and $2,000,000 of preferred stock, the latter to bear 6 per cent interest to be paid before any distribution of earnings is made to common stockholders. The object of the company is given as the loaning of money on securities of any nature, the acquiring of patents, manufacturing and the doing of a general financial business.

Discuss Currency Reform

Fourteen prominent Minnesota bankers and financiers were appointed last week by Governor Eberhart as delegates to the annual conference on currency reform held in New York City on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. They are E. H. Bailey, J. W. Wheeler, John H. Mitchell of St. Paul; F. G. Winston, Hovey C. Clark, E. P. Wells, C. M. Harrington, F. E. Kenaston, F. A. Chamberlain, E. W. Decker, and F. M. Prince, all of Minneapolis; George A. DuToit, Chaska; N. F. Banfield, Austin, and A. D. Stephens, Crookston.

J. J. Hill Makes Gift to College

J. J. Hill has given $50,000 to St. Olaf's College, Northfield, as part of the permanent endowment fund. The United Norwegian Lutheran Church of America has given $200,000 for a similar purpose. The interest on the total fund, estimated at $15,000 a year, is to be used for operating expenses of the institution. Mr. Hill agreed about two years ago to contribute $50,000 if the church raised $200,000.

Two New Banks Authorized

The Minnesota banking department has authorized the organization of the Scandia State of Erskine and the Farmers State of Rock Creek. The Scandia bank has a capital stock of $15,000. Julius Bradley is president. The Rock Creek bank is capitalized at $10,000. B. W. Quandt is president.

E. H. Bailey Back from Boston

"The currency bill now before the United States senate should never pass because it is unsatisfactory to the people, the business interests and the banks and it is an unscientific measure," said E. H. Bailey, president of the First National, St. Paul, upon his return from the convention of the American Bankers Association held in Boston last week.

"I am of the belief," said Mr. Bailey, "that the national bank act under which we have operated for fifty years can be modified and amended so as to bring about better conditions and more confidence than a revolutionary currency law. That our national bank act is sound in principle and the most satisfactory is seen in the great prosperity the country has enjoyed while it has been in force. This act has not kept progress with the extension of credits, but it can be amended to make it so. Should the present bill pass, and there is danger that President Wilson will force it through, I am satisfied that a series of misfortunes will follow. There will be a natural and large contraction of credits which in the Twin Cities will amount to not less than $25,000,000.

"The bad effects of this bill if it becomes a law will not strike the bankers but the business men and the masses. The contraction of credits will not make the bankers' position insecure, but will hurt the expansion of business.

"The need of currency reform has been greatly exaggerated. Business is marking time pending the passage or defeat of this bill."

Jury Ignores Court Order

At the close of the state's case of the trial of Henry O. Anderson, charged with permitting shareholders of the Meade County Bank, Sturgis, S. D., to borrow in excess of 50 per cent of the capital stock, the defense moved that the court advise the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. The court instructed the jury that the state had failed to submit a prima facie case and advised the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. The jury, after being out more than four hours, reported a failure to agree upon the verdict as advised by the court and was discharged.

Moneys and Credits Show an Increase

The final figures on moneys and credits returned for assessment in South Dakota for 1913 show $8,199,079, with but $1,649,888 returned for 1912. This increase has been marked in several counties and shows the difference between the old and new methods of assessment.

Banker Sentenced to Prison

Harrold M. Cooper, who last week was found guilty by a jury on the charge of receiving deposits as assistant cashier of the Meade County Bank, Sturgis, S. D., knowing the bank to be insolvent, was sentenced on last Saturday to one year in the penitentiary. The counsel for the defendant gave notice of a motion for a new trial.

Northwest Notes

Roy Quimby, president of the Mortgage Security Company of Minnesota, has announced that he has organized a bank at Hamel, Minn., with $10,000 capital, to be called the State Bank of Hamel. J. C. Kinney, president of the First National, Wibaux, Mont., has become the owner in the First State, Lemmon, N. D., of the stock heretofore held by G. E. Lemmon, and soon will come to Lemmon to assist in the upbuilding of the bank's business in that section.

W. C. Kees, formerly cashier of the Security State of Expansion, N. D., is the cashier and manager of the new First State of Beulah, N. D. Mr. Kees still retains his interest in the Expansion bank, having been elected vice-president of the institution. His brother, B. C. Kees, is the new cashier.

Work has been begun on the construction of the First State of Newville, N. D. It is expected that the building will be completed November 15th.

NEW YORK BANK SEES NO CAUSE FOR STRINGENCY

In its monthly circular the Fourth National Bank has the following to say on the present money outlook:

"There has been no unfavorable response of money rates to the heavy borrowings which are always required in connection with the October 1st financing. About $180,000,000 will be paid out during this month in dividend and interest disbursements. This sum is slightly in excess of what was distributed in the same month a year ago, and shows that the few instances of dividend reductions have been more than offset by the action of other corporations in enlarging their payments to shareholders. The relatively comfortable position of the money market is in sharp contrast with conditions which were looked for earlier in the year during the period of real stringency when troublesome complications were expected to develop about this time. The situation has been admirably handled, so that at the moment there is no reason to look for acute stringency during the balance of the year. The prospects are, however, for a broad demand for moneys with rates not far from those now prevailing for time loans and commercial paper. This is natural under the circumstances, for, in spite of the uncertainty over the tariff changes, the country is still doing a large volume of business."

Cracksmen took unfair advantage of Percy Hall and robbed the Stockmen's Bank at Honey Creek of $2,221 while the secretary of the Iowa Bankers Association was at Boston. The yeggs blew open the safe with nitroglycerin, but tracks of two men leading to the railroad station are the only clues available.

Des Moines, October 16.—Figures compiled by the state banking department following the reports as a result of the call issued September 11th show that deposits in the state and savings banks and trust companies increased $25,000,000 as compared with the report issued a year ago. This is considered a splendid showing. Deposits increased $7,969,701.98 between the date of the last preceding call and the September 11th showing, which is considered pretty good for three months. Resources increased $6,749,919 in the same three months. The report shows that since September 11, 1912, there have been forty-seven new banks formed in Iowa within the jurisdiction of the state banking department. In the period between the September call and the next preceding call there were ten new banks formed. The legal reserve is shown at 19.5 per cent. The actual resources are listed at $375,669,712.

Des Moines Bankers Club Meets

The Des Moines Bankers Club held its October meeting last week at the Savery hotel. It had been expected that Congressman Prouty would make the address of the evening but he had been summoned back to Washington to get busy on the currency bill. James G. Berryhill and Emil G. Schmidt were the speakers of the evening. At the annual election of officers George E. Pearsall of the Citizens National was elected president; J. D. Van Liew of the Capital City State was elected vice-president; Grant McPherrin of the Central State was made secretary and treasurer. Leo Stevens of the Century Savings and W. B. Lutz of the Home Savings were named members of the executive board.

when he returned some time later he found everything had disappeared. It was several days before the purse and $15,000 in paper was found in the mayor's front yard.

Leo Stevens, president of the Century Savings of Des Moines, returned from Chicago last week with the announcement that Iowa farmers are buying more cattle than in many years. Chicago bankers have been sending money to the country for purchase of stock and for the purchase of goods by the merchants and business men. The certainty that meat is going to be high impels the farmers to engage in stock raising to an unusual degree, Mr. Stevens says.

One of the few important bank mergers in Iowa in recent months is announced at Odebolt, where the First National and the Farmers National have consolidated. The name First National Bank will be retained. This is the oldest institution in Sac county and is the one of which Joseph Mattes is now president. The new institution will keep the directory board of both banks. The paid-up capital will be $140,000, the surplus will be $50,000, assets $1,000,000 and deposits of over $700,000. A new building is contemplated in the near future.

Capt. W. S. A. Smith in a speech before the Real Estate Association at Sioux City last week asserted that the bankers do not extend proper credit to the cattle raiser and agriculturist. Right there is where Capt. Smith got in bad, for the next day the bankers came back at him hard. W. P. Manley and James F. Toy were quick to state that no class of people on earth enjoys as much freedom in borrowing money as the agriculturist. Undoubtedly the statements are true, just as it is true that Iowa farm land is the best security on earth.

TALKS ON CURRENCY BILL

Edmund D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, who talked on the pending currency bill at the weekly luncheon of the Chicago real estate board recently, said no one can honestly question the intentions and the good faith of the national administration and that "if we fail to get justice it will be because we fail to present our case properly."

"I believe we must have faith," he said, "that those features of the bill which are really destructive and revolutionary will be eliminated before it becomes a law."

He said the United States has the best banking system in the world in that it gives the little fellow a chance to grow big, and declared that the purpose to reorganize the banking system in response to the fear that not to do so will be regarded as weakness was little less than a calamity and expressed the belief that in years to come "we shall look with regret on the loss of our free banking system."

"The real test of any banking system," he said, "should be the service it renders to the public. No other banking system in the world has done so much for the development of the country and has brought bank credits within the reach of so great a proportion of its people as our system has. The best way to get at big things is to cultivate the little things and give them a chance to grow big. Our banking system is about the only banking system in the world which gives the little fellow a chance to grow big."

"We are told, however, that they have no panics in foreign countries, and therefore their banking system must be better than ours. It is undeniable, however, that our system is weak in this respect, in time of danger and stress there is no way for banks to use their united strength for the general good."

"The modification of the Aldrich-Vreeland act, which would permit state banks and trust companies to join the currency associations, would accomplish all that the people of this country are really asking for. However, they are so thoroughly imbued with the notion that our banking system is fundamentally bad and must be reorganized before the danger of panics can be eliminated, that the powers that be at Washington are practically forced to provide for a new banking system. Anything short of that will be regarded as weakness and inefficient. To my mind this is little less than a calamity and I believe that in years to come we shall look back with regret on the loss of our free banking system."

DON'T WANT GOVERNMENT DEPOSITS

Duluth bankers do not regret their action of a month ago in refusing to accept the proportion of the government's $50,000,000 crop moving fund allotted to this point.

It is pointed out that the heaviest grain and general commercial business in the history of the local banks is being taken care of without difficulty or the least indication of stringency.

"A government deposit of funds of the size and on the stringent terms offered was no temptation to us," said J. W. Lyder, cashier of the Northern National. "When you come to think that clearings of our banks are now running at the rate of between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000 weekly, a government deposit of only $500,000 would have been a mere bagatelle. Our banks have abundant resources available to finance big lines of business and they are doing it this fall."

"There is no financial stringency in Duluth, nor is there likely to be this year," said D. Williams, vice-president of the First National. "The banks here were in the best shape of any in the country during the tight money period that existed up till the late summer. Their deposits had gone up in place of showing curtailment, as was the rule at most points through the country. We had not over-loaned and our loans were liquid. The money was in Duluth and it was available to advance to the grain people when they required it to handle the crop movement. The banks in this city had probably funds up to $8,000,000 ready to put out for that purpose." Mr. Williams expressed himself as optimistic regarding the general industrial and commercial outlook here. "Business is satisfactory in every line, and it is expanding," he said.

TEXAS STATE BANKS

The statement of the condition of the twenty-five state banks of Texas, maintaining savings departments, showed resources and liabilities amounting to $2,734,974.75. The saving deposits alone totaled $2,714,462.46. The actual cash on hand exceeded the necessary 15 per cent for reserve by $86,969.78. The total cash on hand amounted to $494,419.42. Of the savings deposits $2,044,349.86 has been loaned by the banks on property worth twice the amount, and $121,796.81 in county, city, town or school district bonds.

WOULD CHANGE BANKING LAWS

Texas Commissioner of Insurance and Banking W. W. Collier has announced that he will recommend to the next session of the legislature the passage of an act raising the minimum amount of capital stock necessary to the formation of state banks to $25,000. The present law allows the formation of banks with a capital stock of only $10,000. Federal statutes require capital stock of $25,000 for federal banks and the commissioner believes that the state laws should conform. This would place banks on a sounder financial condition, he believes.

NEW OKLAHOMA BANK

The Farmers National, Hydro, Okla., opened for business recently. The officers are D. O. Potter, president; A. J. Epperly, vice-president; J. D. Cusenberry, cashier. F. Unzicker, D. O. Potter, W. H. Dooley, A. J. Epperly and J. D. Cusenberry are the directors. Some thirty representative farmers are among the list of stockholders.

Thomas R. Shaver, for twenty-three years cashier of the Peoples State, Bay City, Mich., died recently. He was fifty years old.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Country banks in the territory tributary to Spokane are in excellent condition, as evidenced by the ease and promptness with which they have met the crop situation and are now actively paying off notes issued when the crop movement started. Money has been available whenever needed, and its quick returns to the sources whence obtained tells of prosperity in the rural and commercial districts where it has been used temporarily.

"The out-of-town banks are keeping the Spokane banks busy in desiring to pay off their notes," states R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company and president of the clearing house association. "These banks not long ago borrowed money to finance the crop movement. They are paying this back readily and, in addition, are buying commercial paper.

"The condition indicates that there is no possibility of any scare on the part of the country banks. Many are buying commercial paper now that never did before. The city banks are all looking for loans that will be paid on maturity automatically. The demand for commercial paper is unusually great. Many of the coast city banks also are buying Spokane commercial paper."

Spokane bankers have something new to talk about this week in the local publication of a story that J. Grier Long, president of the Washington Trust Company, is being "prominently mentioned" as a possibility for comptroller of the currency at Washington, D. C. Mr. Long says he is not an applicant for the position, and believes some of his friends at the national capital are responsible for any consideration given his name. Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and the president's private secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty, are friends of Mr. Long.

While in Washington last spring Mr. Long says he had an interview with Mr. McAdoo, which he believes has occasioned the mention of his name for the position. Since that time the administration has asked Mr. Long's opinions on pending financial legislation.

Spokane's strategic position as a distributing point for the Northwest is recognized by C. F. Massey, president, and Andrew Christ, Jr., secretary of the C. F. Massey Company of Chicago, who announced this week that their company would locate in this city a large branch factory to supply the demands of the entire West. Three acres of land for a factory site are being negotiated for by Mr. Christ, who announces that by employing the greatest speed in construction he hopes to begin operations by November 15th. The Spokane factory will supplement the output of similar plants of the company at Chicago, Minneapolis, Memphis, Des Moines, Newark, Anna, Ill., Chatham and Winnipeg, Canada. The company will manufacture in Spokane reinforced concrete products, railway supplies, highway alarms, signal accessories, comprising battery wells, cable posts, relay posts, concrete houses, bridge slabs, piles, high tension poles, culvert pipes, foundations, lamp posts, marker posts, mile posts, oil houses, power houses, station houses, telephone booths, watchmen's and switchmen's houses, etc. All these are constructed of concrete under basic patents which Mr. Christ declares are fully protected. At the outset the plant will employ from 50 to 100 hands.

"I have been favorably impressed with business and financial conditions in the West. Crops have been good and the people generally are prosperous." The foregoing statements were made during a visit in Spokane by Richard Deming, vice-president of the American Surety Company of New York. Mr. Deming, after spending several days in and around Spokane, said: "In this, my first visit here, I am simply dumbfounded at the magnificence of the residential sections and at the general indications of prosperity. I am convinced that Spokane is destined to become the great commercial center of the rich Pacific Northwest. I visited the big power developing propositions under way at Little Falls and Long Lake, where millions of dollars are being expended, and was greatly impressed with these big undertakings."

L. C. Lens, manager of the Spokane Flouring Mills Company, has purchased the Pendleton Roller Mills at Pendleton, Ore. The price is not given in the deed, but is near $175,000. The Pendleton mill is one of the largest in the Northwest, having a capacity of 750 barrels per day, and grinding approximately 1,000,000 bushels of grain annually. For several years the entire management of the mills has devolved upon a woman, Mrs. E. W. McComas, daughter of the late W. S. Byers, founder of the establishment. Mr. Lens is representing a syndicate of Holland capitalists, who have recently deposited a large sum of money in Spokane banks for the purpose of financing the acquisition of flour mills. The project was discussed first about six months ago, but conditions at that time did not warrant its consummation. With easier financial conditions obtaining throughout the Spokane country at the present time the negotiations were reopened.

EDMONTON NEWS

"There is an abundance of money for mortgage loans in Canada," said M. Chevalier of Montreal, general manager of the Credit Foncier, F. C., in Edmonton the other day; "but," he added, "the borrower must pay a higher rate of interest than formerly. This condition is general. The rate in Europe now is five per cent, as against four per cent until recently, and there is nothing to indicate that the price will be lower in the near future," though he predicted that the marketing of the exceptionally large crop of grain in the prairie provinces is bound to exercise a salutary influence in making local money conditions much easier.

Mr. Chevalier said that his company had experienced no difficulty in obtaining large sums of money for mortgage purposes in Canada. The Credit Foncier issued debentures for $7,000,000 last January and again in September a further issue of $5,000,000 was successfully floated, making a total of $12,000,000 borrowed for mortgage advances during the first nine months of 1913. The company paid a higher rate of interest than formerly, but has not so far increased the rate charged to its clients.

"Our total investments in Canada amount to more than $50,000,000," Mr. Chevalier continued, "and of that total $4,115,000 has been loaned on rural and city properties in Alberta during the last seven years. The money scarcity has not caused any alteration in the policy of the company, and no halt has been called in its lending operations."

Statistics compiled from farmers' reports show there will be increases of from twelve to twenty-three per cent in the 1913 grain crop of the province of Alberta. The crop is estimated as follows: Wheat, 23,540,000 bushels; oats, 44,345,000 bushels; barley, 11,310,000 bushels; flax, 650,000 bushels; rye, 410,000 bushels. The hay crop is estimated at 90,000 tons; potatoes, 8,150,000 bushels; turnips, 2,000,000 bushels; mangolds, 500,000 bushels; carrots, 340,000 bushels; dairy products, $4,000,000; poultry and products, $2,000,000; fur, $1,250,000; fish, $125,000; truck garden products, $120,000. The value of livestock in the province is placed at $110,000,000, a gain of eleven and one-half per cent over 1912.

Premier Sifton, replying to a question by E. Michener, leader of the opposition in the provincial legislature, said that Alberta's total outstanding debt is $15,741,981, as follows: Bonded indebtedness, $6,860,200; treasury notes, $7,533,338; bills payable to banks or otherwise, $971,500; overdrafts, $376,948. The premier said in answer to another question that treasury notes had been reissued as follows: $7,290,000, due on December 30, 1913; $243,333, due on April 1, 1914; expenses of negotiating the reissues, $218,700 and $4,496, respectively. The reissues were arranged through Lloyds Bank, the amount paid being one-fourth of one per cent, which includes all charges. The rate at which the reissues were negotiated is five per cent. Three thousand dollars is chargeable to the government as the expense of the premier's trip to England to negotiate the reissues.

A. H. Walker, general manager of the Sterling Bank of England, said in Edmonton a few days ago that there is a possibility the company will establish branches in western Canada. He added: "I am much impressed with the development of the cities in western Canada. The marvelous growth and conditions which are obtained here show the initiative and enterprise which the citizens have put forth. The larger centers equal our eastern cities in every way but size and the most skeptical easterner cannot but be convinced of the wonderful possibilities existing here."

When J. F. Cote, member for Grouard in the provincial legislature, requested the establishment of a bureau of mines in Alberta, he foreshadowed a movement that promises much for the mineral development of the province, which stands fifth among the provinces in the Dominion of Canada. The province produced minerals valued at $10,000,000 in 1910, when the total value in Canada was $122,004,932. These figures are the latest available, having just been issued in census bulletin by the federal government, dealing with the mineral output of Canada. There have been big increases since then. The coal output of Alberta in 1912 was 3,500,000 tons. Prospecting for oil, gas, asphalt, coal and minerals is progressing in various parts of the province.

Mrs. Fred J. Carr, wife of the Hudson, Wis., banker, and prominent member of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, died recently of acute indigestion while on an automobile tour through New England that was to conclude at the A. B. A. convention at Boston this week.

MAKING USE OF THE LIBRARY

Marian R. Glenn, in charge of the library and reference department of the A. B. A., told the bankers in her annual report last week in Boston some of the many advantages which the department affords.

"It is the function of the library and reference department to secure and supply information on banking subjects wanted by members of the association," said the report. "The requests received cover every phase of practical banking from acceptances to zone systems, and they come from country bankers, city bankers, from bank clerks and bank directors, association secretaries and business men. A morning's mail may bring requests from bankers in many different states for information on subjects as widely different as branch banking, days of grace, employees' pension funds, overdrafts, reserves, credit statements and real estate loans. The letters may come from a banker who is to make an address before his state convention, from another who wants pictures from which to select a design for a new bank building, or from an enterprising country bank cashier who wants specimens of bank advertising which will suggest ways of increasing the deposits of his bank.

"While this material is being looked up and prepared for mailing, perhaps a reporter comes from one of the financial papers for the picture and biography of some well-known banker to find out what states have 'Blue Sky' laws, or what bankers are doing in agricultural extension. The answering of this question may be interrupted by a telephone call from a New York City banker asking for the total amount of deposits in national banks, or by a messenger from a banker in a near-by New Jersey town who has sent over for something on commercial paper. A young bank clerk may take advantage of the noon hour to come in and consult the library's reference books, or to secure material for a debate on some banking subject. Special collections on trust company, savings bank and clearing house subjects are made for the use of section secretaries, and whether a question be as general as 'the value of co-operation,' or as specific as 'a good system for handling passbooks,' the library must be prepared either to furnish the desired information or to suggest where it may be found.

"Four thousand eight hundred additions were made during the year to the travelling loan collection of pamphlets, mounted clippings and addresses on subjects related to banking. Much of this material was secured as a result of letters requesting banks to send to the library the financial publications which they formerly destroyed when discarded. Specimen bank advertisements and 2200 pictures of banks and bankers have also been added to the files.

"To the reference collection of books on banking, association proceedings, government documents, statistical manuals, and bound financial periodicals, 300 volumes were added during the year. Of the 1800 volumes now in the library 1425 have been added since its organization and but forty-eight of these have been purchased. All other additions have been gifts, exchanges, or permanent loans. It is hoped, therefore, that a separate book fund or a larger annual appropriation may be made to provide for the purchase of certain standard reference works and books on banking which the library still lacks. A special feature of the year's work has been the collection of practically all available pamphlets and addresses, with thousands of press clipping comments, on the currency question.

To the library's complete record of currency reform, dating from the nineties, was recently added the gift of a set of the sound currency publications of the New York Reform Club. Material on the proposed federal reserve bill is being consulted daily at the library by bankers and others. Many loans of material on the Aldrich plan were made during the period of its discussion. Efforts will be continued to make the association's currency collection as complete as possible. As a result of the growing use of the library by association members, more than 2400 pieces of reference material have been loaned during the year to bankers in thirty-seven states, in Canada and Hawaii, in addition to the inquiries answered by telephone, by mail and at the library."

SEES NO LACK OF CONFIDENCE

Vice-President E. D. Hulbert of the Merchants Loan and Trust said this week that business interests are feeling no apprehension as a result of the legislative program of the administration at Washington. "If we would pay less attention to Washington and more to crops in the Northwest," said Mr. Hulbert, "we would be better off. I do not believe that any detrimental effects will result from the new tariff and do not see that it is doing Chicago any harm. Business is on a sound footing and the future is awaited with a feeling of general confidence and assurance."

INDICT EX-CASHIER

As a result of discrepancies found in the accounts of the Peoples National of Middletown, Del., when a new system of bookkeeping was installed last October, George D. Kelly, who resigned as cashier following the discovery, was indicted by the federal grand jury Tuesday, charging him with making false entries in his reports to the comptroller of the currency concerning the condition of the bank. The accused is a former comptroller of Newcastle county. The indictment contains ten counts, and it is alleged that in the first false entry he gave the amount of individual deposits at the close of business September 12, 1912, as $157,190.06, when the amount was $179,010.70, a difference of $21,820.64. At the time Kelly said that the difference was due to an error in bookkeeping.

CARTER GLASS TO SPEAK HERE

Chairman Carter Glass of the house currency and banking committee will address the Chicago Association of Commerce banquet November 28th. President Wilson was obliged to decline on press of business, but personally asked Chairman Glass to come and explain his currency plan.

CHICAGO MONEY MARKET EASIER

Money is easier again. Over the year funds were put out this week at 5 per cent on all industrial stock collateral, and the best bid for the ninety days' maturity on mixed collateral was 4 3/4 per cent. Commercial paper is again quoted as low as 5 1/2 @ 5 3/4 per cent for choice paper. In Chicago these figures spell returning confidence in conditions.

AGREE ON INCOME TAX PLAN

Chicago banks have agreed upon a system to be followed in connection with the new income tax law. This system will be followed until the government's interpretation of the law is issued, which the banks hope will be by November 1st, the date the law goes into effect.

BETTER PRICE FOR TWO PER CENTS

The week's rise in government 2 per cents they are now 1 1/2 points above a week ago and 3 points above the October lowest) appeared to reflect the waning of the recent vague apprehension over a possible final clash between government and banks over the banking bill's provisions.

Committee Chairmen of Investment Bankers

JOHN E. BLUNT, Jr.

JOHAN E. BLUNT, Jr., vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust, and John Jay Abbott, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings, are respectively chairmen of the hotel and banquet committees appointed to look after arrangements for the second annual convention of the Investment Bankers Association to be held in Chicago, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

Indications are that about 350 of the leading investment banking houses of the country will be represented at the convention, and it is expected that the attendance at the banquet will approach 1,000. The banquet will be held Thursday evening of next week in the Gold Room of the Congress. Headquarters of the convention will be at the Blackstone.

TO ASCERTAIN SENTIMENT ON CURRENCY LEGISLATION

The National Surety Company has sent to all the national and state banks and trust companies in the United States, a letter asking them to express their views on the provisions of the new currency law, and enclosed a series of questions, the answers to which, when returned, will be tabulated and the results given to the public.

This is the first attempt that has been made to ascertain the independent opinions of the banks as a whole on the pending legislation, and the replies will no doubt be of great value and interest.

SUCCEEDS FATHER ON DIRECTORATE

Henry Sandmeyer has been elected a director of the Merchants National, Peoria, Ill., to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of his father, Henry Sandmeyer, Sr. George T. Page has been elected to the vice-presidency, formerly occupied by the deceased.

URNS OVER PROPERTY

As a result of an interview with State Bank Superintendent Emory Lattanner of Ohio Monday, S. P. Solliday, cashier and prime factor in the defunct private bank at Murray City, turned over all his property for the use of the creditors of the institution. His possessions included $600, received for his automobile, and a house and lot valued at $1,500. The bank is still many thousand dollars from being able to pay out, but Mr. Lattanner hopes that the rest of the money may be raised from owners of the bank.

FRANK T. JOYNER is getting into harness nicely as cashier of the Standard Trust, Chicago, after spending much of his banking life in southern Illinois, mostly East St. Louis.

HIS home will be in Wilmette, on the North Shore. Down-staters should call on him for old times' sake.

H. S. ZIMMERMAN for Mellon National of Pittsburgh is sending out a fine, white ivory clock "for the banker's wife." It is a beauty and shows somebody's good taste in having no advertising of any kind on it. A para avis!

THE Mellon is a dominating influence in eastern banking and a leader in handling county bank balances for the Pittsburgh center.

NATIONAL SHAWMUT, Boston, has "followed up" the convention by sending a handsome small calendar to all who were registered. It bears a bronze medallion of old Chief Shawmut.

HOMER BRENTS, who so narrowly missed being the treasurer of the Illinois Bankers Association at the Chicago convention, is to be cashier of a new state bank at Incaid.

INCAID is not on the map as yet. It is a new town just laid out by the Peabody Townsite Company of Chicago, down near Taylorville.

SEWERS, streets, sidewalks and twenty-five houses, including the new state bank building, are being built.

TOWNS made to order, as Gary was, is a new form of business of which Illinois is to have a taste. Ought to be a money making industry.

HOMER BRENTS is a skilled abstract man as well as a banker and will be secretary and manager of the townsite company until the bank is ready to open.

HE has been cashier of the Colegrove & Co. bank at Taylorville for five or six years. The new bank will have $50,000 capital and be under a state charter, with John Incaid of Springfield as president.

MR. AND MRS. ARTHUR REYNOLDS were in Chicago on Monday en route home from the Boston convention. Mr. Reynolds remained over in New York to keep a speaking date and to transact administrative business at association headquarters.

THE hotel ability of Richmond as convention city in 1914 has been questioned quite seriously and may become a matter for reconsideration by the council.

IF it should be found that Richmond hotels are inadequate then Atlantic City, Atlanta, Salt Lake, St. Louis, etc., would have another chance to ask for it.

Company of this city. New law becomes operative November 1st and is an immediate and burning question in the banks.

BANKERS of Illinois held their annual convention in Chicago September 25th and 26th. The report published in THE CHICAGO BANKER is complete, and reflects the prosperous and enjoyable session held. "Cashier" of THE CHICAGO BANKER has some characteristic squibs that, as usual, are worth the price.—Texas Bankers Record.

HERE are the dates and places of the group meetings of the Missouri bankers: Kansas City, November 4th; St. Joseph, November 5th; Chillicothe, November 6th; Macon, November 7th; St. Louis, November 11th; Kennett, November 12th; Springfield, November 13th, and Lamar, November 14th. Secretary Keyser has out a nice little announcement card, and indications are for a successful swing around the circle.

GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY of New York has just issued the third edition of its book "Short Term Securities." It contains a list of the current short term issues of government and state notes, railway notes, public service and utility notes, and industrial notes, and describes in compact form the principal features of each issue.

A VALUABLE department includes a chronological index of maturities. The information is conveniently arranged in tabulated form for ready reference and the book is of distinct value to those interested in short term investments. Copies may be had by applying to the bond department of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York.

ASSERTING his right to use only side lamps on his automobile, if they can be seen from the rear of the car, the district attorney of Willows, Cal., has refused to equip his automobile with a tail lamp, as required by law.

HE promptly was haled before a jury in the recorder's court, which after several hours of argument could not agree, it standing nine for acquittal and three for conviction.

TESTS were made in front of the court house which proved the district attorney's contention correct, that the red glass at the back of the side lamps can be seen from the rear of the car, and a state-wide imitation of his action is promised.

AUTOMOBILE clubs are taking the matter up, and as it means the saving of an additional light many motorists are eagerly awaiting final action on the dispute.

THE tail light is the only one not under constant supervision of the motorist. It is the one that can "go out" on him without his knowledge, and makes him liable for arrest. Its elimination is desirable, so far as its location is concerned.

A NEW $2,000,000 national bank is tipped off for St. Louis. The backing is to come from Kansas City, so the story goes.

A BANKERS' golf tournament for the 1914 convention—a real one—is being urged from all over. It sure would be a hit.

OTHER nations contribute students, making in all 132 foreigners, many of whom were attracted by the famous school of engineering, the college of design, etc.

THE great university shows a gain of 15 per cent even over 1912. One study in the college of liberal arts has 54 sections, the safety number of 25 being in many instances exceeded.

A DEPARTMENT of photography has been instituted. One result will be the home illustrations in the college publications. Truly the U. of I. is some school!

DID you notice what James J. Hill said of our present banking system at Boston? "It is the wonder of intelligent men abroad and the despair of intelligent men at home." Pretty good!

MANY of the financial papers which now are denouncing the currency bill enthusiastically supported the Aldrich bill. Even their overheated oxygen treatment wouldn't keep it alive.

WHENCE springs their inspiration? They are just as unanimous when wrong as when it is in doubt. Get that?

THIS from Vanderlip: "It (the new currency bill) will turn hundreds of millions of dollars from call loans into commercial channels. It will lessen if not entirely reduce the advantage which borrowers on stock exchange collateral have over commercial borrowers."

AND he intended it for a knock. It tickled the committee nearly to death.

IF Mr. Vanderlip is right Wall Street will have to go from a call money to a time money basis, and the natural development would seem to be the establishment of fortnightly settlements similar to those in operation in London and on the Continent.

SPECULATION then would wait upon business and commerce, a reversal of present-day customs.

A. S. BEYMER of the Keystone National, Pittsburgh, came back from the Boston convention only to find that V. P. had been added on to his title of cashier, with a big hump on his salary.

MR. BEYMER has been chairman of Group Eight, president of his state association, and now is on the A. B. A. executive council.

ONE of our good contemporaries says of the banking and currency commission at Washington, that "its members learned all they ever knew of banking from the witnesses."

POSSIBLY. But here's another story: One very active agitator against the bill when on the stand was asked, "How many banks in your state?" "How many nationals?"

HE could answer neither question, yet he had been president of his state association only the year before and a very active "correspondent" of the anti-press.

THEY are now tearing down the old building to make way for the new sixteen story Merchants National bank building at Fourth and Robert streets, St. Paul.

WALTER J. HILL, son of James J. Hill, has just completed a $50,000 residence on the 45,000-acre Hill farm in Hampden township, about seven miles west of Lancaster, between Hallock and Humboldt, in the extreme northwestern part of Minnesota.

THIS is no fad with Hill, Jr., and not a money spending debauch. He is going in for live stock and profits. He feels sure he will win.

THE B. F. Harris talk at Boston made a hit with the Michigan Investor. Our copy had it in in two places.

JOHN W. STALEY of Detroit advised at Boston "an indorsement of the currency bill as amended by the currency commission" instead of protesting it as it is.

JOHN W. is right. Means the same or better and would have had a tendency toward harmony and good feeling.

UNLESS we have been misled by President George B. Caldwell, the Investment Bankers convention next week at the Blackstone will be a very significant meeting.

LOOKS to us that the movement is "sane and safe" enough by now to be taken in as a section of the A. B. A. Or, have they grown too big?

WITH the excesses trimmed off the old sections by the new constitution and the wide provisions made for new sections in that document it looks like the only logical thing to do.

OVER in Michigan Secretary of State Martindale gave out an interview stating that bank examinations in the past four years had cost the taxpayers $219,000.

AND, oh what a hornets' nest he did stir up between those who believed him and those who knew the total cost in four years to have been but $36,000, two-thirds of which cost was paid by fees and not out of taxes.

FURTHERMORE, Commissioner E. H. Doyle says "75 per cent of the losses of small banks comes from advances made on paper (mostly foreign) of which the banker has no actual knowledge."

WHAT do you think of Atchison paying six per cent and selling at ninety when the earnings on the common are 8.61?

IT means only an artificially depressed market. Not even the tariff changes can account for such a foolish scare.

ATCHISON'S entire bonded debt was made when money could be had at four to four and one-half per cent and counting all expenses as costing the road on the average considerably less than five per cent.

FRANK REED, cashier of the First National at Lake Forest, has taken the Chapman divining rod with which to search for new issues in economics.

MR. REED has organized a co-operative kitchen and dining room for a few neighborhood families who were having trouble in keeping competent cooks and maids.

HE rented a flat right next to the bank and each member family has his own dining table, silver and linen from his own home.

THE chef (not cook mind you) is one of the best. He's a good buyer also and the h. c. of l. has been solved at one blow. "Better eats at half the cost and no worry," says Cashier Reed.

HE predicts that other kitchen clubs will follow and that Lake Foresters will live happily hereafter.

NEW YORK SUN is "curious to know" who, among prominent bankers, owns "the initials R. P. G.?" How about Rollin P. Grant? for a quick answer.

ON another occasion it had a communication on "How to make shoes squeakless—by J. P. G." We have located this culprit in J. P. Gorin of the big Milliken National at Decatur.

BOOTH Grant and Gorin are "noiseless" bankers, doing lots of business, and making countless friends.

JAMES B. FORGAN calls upon Secretary McAdoo to be more specific in his assurances that "everything will be all right in the new currency bill. Something more authoritative than generalities is required to suit the dean of the Chicago Clearing House.

THE indorsement of the new currency bill by the Chicago association of commerce was quite orthodox. Even as few as three, at most five, regional banks would suit it.

THE changes suggested were mainly those advocated by Chicago's leading bankers and indorsed by the A. B. A. at Boston.

IT so happens that the press dispatches from Boston sent out only a part of the names of the reappointed currency commission.

THE whole commission was reappointed and continued. No body of men could with cause be prouder than the commissioners over present currency prospects.

AT its Chicago meeting criticism and opposition were silenced and a spirit of negotiation adopted which has been contagious.

THE senate committee in particular has come to regard bankers' advice and counsel and their co-operation as not only necessary but desirable.

THE famous comment of Mr. Reynolds that "there is so much in the bill that is good and so little that really is bad" in time convinced the bankers who had jumped at the conclusion that it all was bad, and the legislators who had thought it all was good, that a middle course is the right road to take.

MR. REYNOLDS now predicts an end of money and business uneasiness within the next thirty days, December 1st at the latest.

NOW, let everyone pull for an easier, more restful feeling and the thing is done. Conditions are right and the "panic goblins" have gone to the woods.

NOW, if Pankhurst and Sulzer could join the Colonel for the balance of the season in South America "they never would be missed."

SHORTS in the big exchanges ran to cover on Tuesday. Good times people took a kick at them.

STRENGTH of steel shares was attributed largely to the anticipation of a favorable report for the third quarter to be made public next Tuesday.

ANXIETY as to the interest due November 1st on the Rock Island railroad 4 per cent collateral trust bonds was modified when it was announced that the company had more than $2,000,000 in the bank with which to pay the interest, amounting to $1,427,000.

HARRIS TRUST and its eastern associates have purchased nearly two million City of Vancouver 4½ per cents. Can sell them on a 5.10 basis.

THE open mortgage is the whole thing in corporation financing at present. Has many advantages.

If the Illinois suffragists from force of habit take to "split" tickets, the election judges' job will go begging.

WE understand that the description of the jewelry stolen from a Banks street residence was not copied from the personal tax schedule.

PRESIDENT CHARLES C. CRAIG of the Bank of Galesburg has been elected to the Illinois supreme bench, a position for which he is fitted by birth, training, ability and high character.

COLONEL CRAIG has served in the legislature, is a colonel on the governor's staff, and has a large and lucrative law practice.

HE is a graduate of Knox College and of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis. His father, Alfred M. Craig, was a member of the Illinois supreme court for twenty-seven years.

THE price of the government twos has been upward of late, owing to Secretary McAdoo's assurances that they would be worth more under the new currency law than heretofore. Some of the more apprehensive who sold at the low point will be the losers.

CHARLES H. McNIDER, who started as first mate on the New Constitution at Detroit and landed so handsomely at Boston, is coming back to Iowa overland in a Big Six Mason (City). Was at Brettonwood buying gasoline at last report.

NOW, honest, wouldn't you just throw up your hat and cheer if good, old Nelson Lampert should go in as comptroller?

IT would be tough luck if he should have to give up those junkets to Briarcliff again.

CHAS. N. FOWLER has testified before the senate committee that if the Glass-Owen bill becomes a law in its present form it will cause "commercial bedlam and financial ruin."

AND yet, nobody called out the troops. Mr. Fowler indorsed the Canadian currency system but said the home brand "is rotten."

HERE are two good bits of advice dealt out by Dean Keyser to the Missouri bankers, but good in interstate commerce:

BANKS are in danger of being defrauded every time they cash a check or draft for a stranger without adequate and genuine endorsement.

DON'T advance funds "for expense money" or other purposes, on checks or drafts left for collection. Be careful in dealing with strangers claiming to be in your vicinity for the purpose of purchasing real estate—whether they be simply "negotiating" or have "closed the deal."

ARIZONA'S convention this year is to be a sort of hallowe'en party at Phoenix.

J. R. BRANCH, recently of Wilmington, N. C., has been elected cashier of a little bank at Southport (not on the map) in the same state.

SOUTHWESTERN bankers continue to throw bouquets at Secretary Bowman for the fine Boston tour which he arranged, starting from Kansas City.

HE had 125 on board, probably 90 of them from his own beloved state. Missouri and Oklahoma contributed the balance.

FROM Chicago east, the five-day tour included Canadian points and at Toronto and Ottawa the tourists were handsomely entertained.

SECRETARY W. B. HARRISON of Oklahoma says it was the best ever and that Bowman is a wizard at planning and carrying out successful tours.

SECRETARY KEYSER laid off the hunt for the girl with the "artificially red cheeks" who handed a string of bad checks to members of his flock, long enough to escort a second big train from adjoining territory, starting from St. Louis.

THE Keyser train had a liberal following from Arkansas and Texas. CASHIER.

Investment Bankers to Convene Here

Next week on the occasion of the second annual convention of the Investment Bankers Association of America, Chicago will be the scene of the largest meeting of investment banking dealers that has ever been held. Judging from the number of delegates that have been designated to Secretary F. R. Fenton, including the hotel reservations which have been made with Chairman John E. Blunt, Jr., of the Merchants Loan, and John Jay Abbott of the Continental Trust, chairman of the banquet committee, about 350 of the leading investment banking houses of the country will be represented, and it is estimated that the attendance at the banquet will be close to 1,000.

Headquarters of the convention will be at the Blackstone and the banquet will take place in the gold room of the Congress Thursday evening. The convention proper will be called to order Tuesday morning at eleven o'clock in the ball room of the convention headquarters at the Blackstone by President George B. Caldwell of this city. The first session will be devoted principally to officers' reports. The second session will be held Wednesday morning at ten o'clock. In the addition to the reports of standing committees the following addresses will be heard: "Municipal Financing," Edmund D. Fisher, deputy comptroller, New York City; "Investment vs. Commercial Banking," Prof. William A. Scott, University of Wisconsin; "Some Covenants Which Every Trust Deed Should Contain," by Silas H. Strawn of the Chicago bar. Postal savings bonds will be discussed by a representative of the postoffice department.

The concluding business session of the convention will occur Thursday morning at ten o'clock in the ball room of the Blackstone. Routine business will include the election of officers for the ensuing year. At this session Samuel Insull of the Commonwealth Edison will talk on electrical securities and Delos Chappell of Los Angeles will have for his topic "Financing and Development of Hydroelectric Power." John E. Blunt, Jr., of the Merchants Loan will speak on railroad bonds and John E. Oldham of Merrill, Oldham & Co., Boston, will discuss public utility bonds. Clark L. Poole of Clark L. Poole & Co. is known for a talk on timber bonds.

At the banquet to be held Thursday evening in the gold room of the Congress there will be speakers of national prominence. These include James J. Hill, who will discuss railroad financing; Frank A. Vanderlip of New York, "The Effect of the Proposed Banking Legislation on Corporate Securities;" "Effect of the Proposed Monetary Legislation on General Business," George M. Reynolds. The Rev. J. automobile ride Tuesday afternoon for the delegates and guests. A smoker and vaudeville will take place at the Blackstone the evening of the same day. Wednesday afternoon will include visits to local points of interest within the scene of the convention. The social feature of the evening will be a theater party for all in attendance at the convention.

Speaking of next week's convention, President George B. Caldwell, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings, and largely responsible for the organization of the investment banking interests of the nation, said:

"I feel certain that when our convention is over and reports and deliberations of the meeting are thoroughly weighed, the Investment Bankers Association of America will clearly have demonstrated its usefulness. Being a young organization and with but a year to show our worth, we naturally have had difficulty in establishing an identity. Our practical services of the past year in the interest of, not only our members, but the interest of the investing public as well, have launched us into a year in which I feel sure our services will be better felt.

"The speakers and addresses at our convention were chosen with a view of helping investment dealers in their every day business, and will, I think, prove attractive."

The principal subjects which are expected to come before the convention are "Blue Sky" legislation, the income tax and the proposed banking and currency legislation.

The present officers of the Investment Bankers Association are as follows:

President, Geo. B. Caldwell, Chicago; vice-presidents, A. B. Leach, A. B. Leach & Co., New York; William R. Compton, William R. Compton Co., St. Louis; Lewis B. Franklin, Guaranty Trust, New York; Warren S. Hayden, Hayden, Miller & Co., Cleveland; Frank W. Rollins, E. H. Rollins & Sons, Boston; secretary, F. R. Fenton, Devitt, Tremble & Co., Chicago; treasurer, C. T. Williams, Fidelity Trust Company, Baltimore.

The board of governors consists of Harry E. Weil, Weil, Roth & Co., Cincinnati; Erastus W. Bulkley, Spencer, Trask & Co., New York; Charles A. Otis, Otis & Co., Cleveland; Harold Kauffman, G. H. Walker & Co., St.

Louis; J. Edgar Elliott, Breed, Elliott & Harrison, Indianapolis; Charles H. Schweppe, Lee Higginson & Co., Chicago; George K. Reilly, Montgomery, Clothier & Tyler, Philadelphia; George W. Kendrick, III, E. W. Clark & Co., Philadelphia; Eugene M. Stevens, Stevens, Chapman & Co., Minneapolis; H. P. Wright, H. P. Wright Investment Co., Kansas City; Henry L. Duer, Whelan, Duer & Lanahan, Baltimore; R. L. Scoville, Ussing, Scoville & Co., Pittsburgh; J. Herndon Smith, Smith, Moore & Co., St. Louis; A. C. Foster, Causey, Foster & Co., Denver; Herbert Witherspoon, Spokane and Eastern Trust; Charles R. Dunn, Union Trust, Detroit; C. W. McNear, C. W. McNear & Co., Chicago.

First Gun in "Blue Sky" War

The first gun fired by the Investment Bankers Association of America in its war against the "Blue Sky" laws enacted by the states of Arkansas, Idaho, Iowa, Michigan, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Vermont and West Virginia, and patterned after the original law of Kansas, was heard in Grand Rapids, Mich., a few days ago when counsel for the bankers appeared before Judges Dennison, Sessions and Tuttle of the United States court and assailed the constitutionality of the Michigan law. The point was made that the act, although intended to reach only fraudulent or "fly-by-night" concerns, was so broad as to prohibit all sales of securities in the state, unless its rigorous conditions were complied with. It was also argued that the prohibition against the sale of securities involving substantial risk would stifle enterprise and industry. Attorney-General Fellows, for the state of Michigan, conceded that the state commission had found it necessary to put a very limited construction on the act to prevent it from operating against dealing in standard securities. The governor of Michigan is said to have already announced his intention of calling a special session of the state legislature to enact a new law if the present law is decided to be unconstitutional.

The New Georgia "Blue Sky" Law

Georgia's "Blue Sky" law was approved August 19, 1913, and requires that the secretary of state should demand of the dealer the disclosure of such pertinent facts as are sufficient to enable intending purchasers to form a reasonable and accurate judgment of the value of the security.

Conforming to the above law, the Hon. Philip Cook, secretary of state, has had prepared blanks for the convenience of dealers in filing this information. Each and every question upon the blanks must be answered and all the information called for upon the blanks must be furnished or the application will be refused

HOMER BRENTS TO KINCAID

Homer Brents, cashier of the John B. Colegrove & Co. bank, Taylorville, Ill., has resigned his position to identify himself with the F. S. Peabody interests in the opening of the new town of Kincaid. After November Mr. Brents will be permanently located at Kincaid, and when the proposed new state bank, to be capitalized at $50,000, is launched there, he will be its cashier. He will be prominently connected with the Peabody Townsite Company which has let a contract for twenty-seven modern cottages at Kincaid, until the new bank is ready for business. Mr. Brents has been cashier of John B. Colegrove & Co. since its organization in April, 1908, before that having been associated with Mr. Colegrove as an abstractor, and his loss to Taylorville will be deeply regretted by his many friends.

BOSTON BANKER DEAD

William H. Hill, for many years a prominent Boston banker and a member of the firm of Richardson, Hill & Co., although not active in business since 1903, died last week at his home in Brookline. He was a director in many banks, insurance and other companies and helped found the financial house with which his name has been connected ever since, about forty years ago.

SENATOR ROOT AT CURRENCY CONFERENCE

New York, October 23.—Senator Root is said to have attended a conference here, organized to support the Vanderlip proposal for a central bank plan of currency reform. Leading bankers, merchants, brokers and financiers attended.

IRVING PARK NATIONAL HAS STEADY GROWTH

Irving Park National, one of the $100,000 banks, opened up for business in April, 1912, now has deposits around $260,000, and is looking forward to the completion of a fine brick and terra cotta building at 4201 Irving Park Boulevard.

vision of a great many buildings for themselves and others, and they are doing things up right.

Ben B. Castle is cashier and a director, formerly holding the same position for eleven years at the Arlington Heights State, where he still remains vice-president. Ralph N. Ballou of the National Produce has lent a willing, helping hand at Irving Park, as well as at Downers Grove, Bowmanville and others. Ten of the twelve directors are business and professional men who have lived in Irving Park from fifteen to forty years.

The new location is at the Northwestern railroad station, and is in the center of a thriving business district.

VANDERLIP'S CENTRAL BANK PLAN

Washington, October 23.—The administration was surprised to-day when Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank of New York, came before the senate committee on banking and currency and submitted a comprehensive scheme for an absolutely government controlled central bank of issue, capitalized through popular subscriptions to its stock.

The degree of government ownership and control goes far beyond the administration bill. This new financial plan contemplates control through boards appointed by the president for terms of fourteen years each at a salary of $15,000 a year with $17,500 for the chairman, under such restrictions that politics never can enter into its management and banks cannot have any voice whatever. It would be given power to issue circulating notes, rediscount commercial paper and hold in its vaults the reserve gold of the country. It also would operate as the fiscal agent of the United States.

NORTH DAKOTA BANK CLOSED

The Savings Deposit Bank, Minot, N. D., nearly all the stock of which is owned by Grant S. Youmans, was closed Tuesday by State Bank Examiner Severtson. Mr. Severtson objects to about $35,000 in mortgages held by the bank and demands that this amount be replaced by cash. The deposits of the institution are about $50,000, and it has about $12,000 in cash. Negotiations are being carried on with two other Minot banks for loans to pay the depositors.

Charles A. Barlow, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has been appointed a bank examiner to succeed James M. Cover, resigned.

The New Banking and Currency Bill

It is necessarily technical in its nature and therefore hard to understand.

BANKERS MEET AT TRAVERSE CITY

The fourth regular meeting of the Northwestern Michigan Bankers Club was held at Traverse City and was in the nature of a social session complimentary to the ladies. This was the first social meeting that had ever been attempted by the club and the success of the undertaking will assure others in the future. The visiting delegates were taken for a ride over the peninsula in the afternoon and a reception for the ladies was tendered at Park Place. In the evening there was a reception for all the members and guests and a Bohemian dinner. At the close of the banquet an address was delivered by President A. Buttars of Charlevoix, one of the pioneer bankers of northern Michigan. Then followed a musical program and the remainder of the evening was given over to dancing. A. Buttars of Charlevoix is president of the club; Leon F. Titus, Traverse City, vice-president, and A. J. Maynard, Traverse City, secretary and treasurer.

WILL OPEN NEW BANK

The Minneapolis Trust of Minneapolis, has taken an option for a lease on the building of the failed Bank of Ironwood, Ironwood, Mich., and contemplates opening a branch institution there. The Minneapolis Trust controls banks in various small towns in the Northwest. Ironwood has but one fiscal institution, a bank controlled by strong mining interests of the Gogebic district. Two older banks have been wrecked in late years and in each instance the failures were followed by the prosecution and conviction of the cashiers.

MINNEAPOLIS CLEARINGS HIGH

Bank clearings in Minneapolis for this year have passed the billion dollar mark. This will be the seventh successive year in which the city has reached this figure. Present clearings has marked the greatest volume of general business ever handled in a like period in the history of the city.

GRAND RAPIDS TRUST ADDS TO DIRECTORS

The Grand Rapids Trust has added six new members to its directors. They are Thomas C. Carrol, Grand Rapids; James K. Flood, Hart; William Grobhisier, Sturgis; William Boutit, Grand Haven; William H. Mann, Muskegon, and Edward J. Rankin, Kalamazoo.

BELIEVES BANKERS WILL BE TREATED FAIRLY

F. W. Woodruff, vice-president of the First National, Joliet, Ill., in speaking of the attitude of the Wilson administration toward the bankers, said:

"The Washington administration is inclined to give the bankers anything that is fair." He declared that the newspapers had slightly misunderstood the attitude of the banks, and so quoted them. "I feel that the Wilson administration will deal fairly, and there doesn't seem to be any reason why there should not be a very satisfactory currency bill enacted," said Mr. Woodruff.

He stated that the senate had been courteous in the extreme and seemed inclined to grant some minor changes in the currency measure, that would make it satisfactory to the business interests of the country.

MASSACHUSETTS BANK CLOSED

Comptroller of the Currency Kane this week ordered the closing of the Traders National of Lowell, Mass., after a national bank examiner had alleged the institution to be insolvent. Three months ago the capital of the bank was shown to be badly impaired and notice to this effect was served upon the directors.

A close relationship existed between the Traders and the Atlantic National of Providence, R. I., which was closed April 14th.

ANDORRA AND SAN MARINO

If any one should tell you of two small republics in Europe of which you never had heard you would be surprised. Even then you would be slow to believe that they bordered on France and Italy. They do, however, and they are Andorra and San Marino. Of these two quaint republics little is known. Miss Virginia W. Johnson in her interesting volume, writing about what she knows thoroughly, therefore, introduces to the reader a new and unique territory. Located within their mountain fastnesses where for hundreds of years they have defied the attempts of the various European nations to subdue and annex them, these little countries, seldom visited by tourists or travellers, preserve their unique and interesting customs and traditions.

The little histories are well written and faithfully illustrated. Dana Estes & Co., Boston, are the publishers at $1.25 net.

Fuller was taken to Watseka, where he furnished bond.

HELD ON BANK CHARGE

William Houlihan, arrested in Detroit recently, has been held to the federal grand jury on a charge of having in his possession altered bank notes of a foreign nation. Houlihan was held by United States Commissioner Hurd after a witness representing the Bank of Montreal testified that $370 in Canadian currency found on Houlihan when arrested was part of the $273,000 stolen from the New Westminster, B. C., branch of the Bank of Montreal more than a year ago.

ELECTED TRUST COMPANY OFFICER

H. J. Alexander, second vice-president of the First National, Pueblo, Col., has been elected vice-president of the International Trust Company. J. C. Gunter, former supreme court justice, was elected a director to fill the place caused by the resignation of Spencer Penrose. The International Trust now has two vice-presidents, Theodore G. Smith being the other one.

MOVES SAVINGS DEPARTMENT

The savings department of the Interstate Trust and Banking Company, New Orleans, shortly will be removed from the present offices, at Canal and Camp streets, to the main office of the bank in the Tulane-Newcomb building in Camp Street. Marcus Walker, cashier of the institution, said that the removal was caused for business reasons, that it had been found that the branch can be operated with more ease and would be under the direct supervision of the officers of the bank in the main building, thus obviating much detail in the transaction of the business.

COMMERCIAL ARBITRATION

By J. W. SPANGLER, Vice-President Seattle (Washington) National Bank

I seek to revive interest in and thoughtful consideration of a plan, the principles of which are very old, and require no defense and should the advantages be sufficient its general adoption will sooner or later occur. Time was when all differences were settled by physical force. Indeed, in England up to 1819, citizens could settle their differences legally by personal encounters, but in that year we read of their advanced conclusions in the following language:

"Trial by battle is a mode of proof unfit to be used in any suit and it is expedient that the same be wholly abolished."

Arbitration might be employed in adjusting almost any form of dispute but its application to commercial disputes seems most likely, and since commercial activities are of the most intimate concern to us I have elected to consider the subject briefly with special reference to commercialism.

The state of Montana has a statute providing for the submission to arbitration of almost any matter in controversy between parties, except title to real estate, and providing further that when the arbitration is conducted properly and finally determined, it has the same force and effect as a judgment in a civil action and is equally as binding on the parties to the controversy.

The state of Washington, in which I live, has a similar statute and has had for many years, the original act having been passed, I believe, in 1860, although it since has been amended in some particulars. The law is not frequently invoked, however, and may to a certain extent be considered to have become a dead letter, and while I am not well informed as to the facts I am inclined to the opinion that the same is true of the Montana law.

Recently the subject, "Commercial Arbitration," has engaged the attention of the New York Chamber of Commerce, one of the most dignified and important organizations of its kind in the United States. Other organizations also have become interested in the subject, notably, the National Association of Credit Men, which has appointed a special committee on commercial arbitration.

To my mind the chief point in favor of arbitration is the expedition with which differences may be settled. There are the law's delays so annoying to the busy commercial citizen, which are, I believe, primarily due to the crowded condition of our court calendars; then, too, lawyers may invoke a score of measures well known to the profession to delay the final hearing of a case,—interlocutory proceedings, convenience of counsel, unpreparedness of one side or the other.

Absence of witnesses and various motions are some of them, all of which are familiar to any who have had court experience.

Material saving in attorney's fees and court costs constitute another point favorable to arbitration.

In settling disputes by arbitration it is possible for the disputants to select for their "judge and jury," who are one and the same, experts on the subject in dispute, men who are in intimate contact with similar problems and familiar with the business custom and practice touching the points involved in the controversy, and thus relieve the proceedings of the necessity for a large list of expert witnesses and effecting a reduction in the time necessary to hear the cases, as well as largely reducing the item of cost. Intricate points of law are obviously not suited to arbitration. Recent experience has shown, however, that points of fact are best decided by arbitration methods. You will, of course, readily understand that none but honest differences are likely to be submitted by the disputants. If A. and B. should have a controversy in which A. is attempting to defraud B., it is most unlikely that A. would consent to arbitration. In such a case he would prefer to take his chances with the courts, trusting his cause in the hands of some keen, technical lawyer with the hope of winning. In many of our actions at law to-day both parties are honest in their contention and frequently each questions the good faith and integrity of the other, resulting in protracted, expensive and bitter contests.

At this point may I briefly present for your consideration the plan and the experience of that great commercial center, New York City? From its earliest existence in 1788—145 years ago—the New York Chamber of Commerce has had a committee of arbitration; owing, however, to certain imperfections either in the plan or the state laws governing the practice and possibly influenced by changes in commercial custom, the plan in recent years has fallen into disuse. In the spring of 1910, however, the president of the chamber of commerce appointed a special committee of five to consider and report whether there was need of re-establishing the committee of arbitration. This special committee, headed by Charles L. Bernheimer, after exhaustive research and careful consideration, reported that there is need of re-establishing such a committee and gave its opinion that such a committee "would perform a valuable public service in the settlement of business disputes and differences, saving much expenditure of money and many tedious delays and vexations incident to trials in courts of law."

The plan prepared and adopted includes the selection of a list of not less than fifty official arbitrators. Matters may be submitted to one of the official arbitrators, who may act as sole arbitrator, or to any two, which two shall select a third, the latter to be chosen from the official list of arbitrators, or may be submitted to the entire committee on arbitration.

Disputants referring matters in controversy are required to sign a form of agreement which includes a stipulation to the effect that they will abide by the decision of the arbitrator and will not withdraw from such submission after

H. J. DREHER
Milwaukee
President American Institute of Banking

THE NEW A. I. B. PRESIDENT

The recent election of H. J. Dreher of Milwaukee as president of the American Institute of Banking brings to the head of that organization a man who typifies the purpose of the institute in a remarkable degree. The cardinal principle of the American Institute of Banking is the education of bankers in banking. Manifestly, the logical man to head such an organization should be at once a banker, an educator and a worker. Mr. Dreher possesses these three qualities.

A bank messenger at nineteen, manager of the bond department of his bank at twenty-six, and assistant cashier at twenty-eight, Mr. Dreher thus gives practical evidence of his ability as a banker.

As an educated man and as an educator it may be mentioned that Mr. Dreher holds the degree of LL. B. from Marquette University, has been admitted to the bar in the state of Wisconsin, holds an instructorship in Marquette University, and on different occasions has delivered addresses at the commencement exercises of the extension division of the University of Wisconsin. He has finished the prescribed course in the American Institute of Banking and is a holder of the institute certificate. During the educational advancement that marked his administration as president of Milwaukee Chapter the number of certificate holders in that chapter increased from five to twenty-three.

As a worker he has been "on the job" constantly. He has served on various committees in Milwaukee Chapter, has been a member of its board of governors, and was twice elected its president. He was a member of the program committee of the Rochester convention of the institute and chairman of the program committee of the Salt Lake City convention.

A practical banker, a practical educator, and an incessant and efficient worker, Mr. Dreher combines those qualities which illustrate the best type of an institute progressive. Mr. Dreher has grown through service and experience and the institute will benefit by his leadership.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

General business conditions through the state are reported good and bankers and merchants are enjoying good fall business with prospects for continued activity through the winter months. People are spending money with freedom, yet a more conservative view is being taken of larger and more uncertain enterprises.

Farmers have not viewed the recent "slump" in grain prices with joy although it is probable that city consumers may have some satisfaction in the downward trend of farm products. Bullish ideas of "dollar corn" and other fancy values for corn ranging from sixty-five to ninety cents a bushel have largely subsided and the cereal has persistently gone down in price from sixty-two to fifty-six cents (October 21st). As a result of lower prices many farmers will decline to sell their grain and will call upon country banks for loans, and already Chicago banks are reporting heavy inquiries from country bankers. Moreover, the corn crop in the rich farming district will be much better than was expected ten weeks ago and with good fall pastures feeding conditions will be much better than anticipated; all of which argues for lower prices on corn for the present at least. Wheat is looking well and the wheat acreage is much larger in Illinois than heretofore. The gloomy feelings caused by the long drought and intense heat have largely disappeared and there is every indication for good winter business.

Death of Valentine Ulrich

Death removed another of the staunch figures and one of the grand old men of the banking business in Illinois when Valentine Ulrich, president of the Home Savings and State Bank of Peoria, "like a sheaf of wheat, fully ripened, one of the oldest and most highly respected business men of Peoria, was gathered to the last harvest." His death took place at Venice, Cal., where he had been living for a number of years in retirement, Friday evening, October 17th. Mr. Valetnine was almost seventy-eight years of age.

Of sturdy German stock, Valentine Ulrich was born in the village of Sand Rheinpfalz, Germany, December 16, 1835. He came to America at the age of sixteen, landing in New York City and soon proceeded to Elmira, N. Y., where for five years he clerked in a store. In 1857 he went to Peoria and has since been identified with the business and banking interests of that city. He was interested in the dry goods and grocery lines and opened one of the first wholesale grocery stores in Peoria. About 1877 he aided in the organization of the German-American National of Peoria and was its president from 1883 until 1892. In June, 1892, he organized the Home Savings and State Bank, was elected its president and has since remained in that position.

The bank will be conducted as heretofore by his three able sons, who are Charles E. Ulrich, vice-president; Henry W. Ulrich, cashier, and Robert V. Ulrich, assistant cashier. "He was a man of excellent character and always endeavored to do what was right and goes to his grave with the esteem of all who knew him." He leaves a legacy of character as well as of property to his sons and the passing of Valentine Ulrich removes a man of excellent business judgment, high purpose in life and one devoted to the best ideals of present day American business.

Millbrook Bank Robbers Captured

John Clint and Charles Stuppy are lodged in the Will county jail at Joliet and have been identified as the men who robbed the Bank of Millbrook and obtained $11,000 on the night of November 20, 1912. Clint and Stuppy were arrested while en route to Frankfort in an automobile, where it is supposed they expected to blow the bank safe. A complete outfit of safe-blowers' tools and a bottle of nitro-glycerine were found in the automobile. E. Elertson, cashier of the bank at Millbrook, identified Clint and Stuppy. Warrants have been issued for their arrest and return to the Kendall county jail at Yorkville.

Business Good at Rockford

F. D. E. Babcock, secretary of the Rockford chamber of commerce, reports a healthy, substantial growth in that city, and manufacturing industries, banks and business interests are growing normally. Good progress also is being made in the home-building, which is after all one of the most convincing evidences of solid and substantial growth. Financial matters there are reported as very satisfactory and the banks are all in a healthy and prosperous condition. Rockford long has enjoyed an enviable record as a large and growing manufacturing and business center and also is well known as an insurance center. The community has many excellent qualities as a residential city and the educational advantages are unexcelled. Rockford College, a strong college for young women, has for many years enjoyed an enviable reputation as a high-class institution, ranking with the large women's colleges of the East. The Rockford chamber of commerce is doing good work in organizing the business and manufacturing interests of the city and is one of the most effective commercial bodies in the state. R. K. Welsh, attorney, is the president; Frank S. Datin, vice-president. Datin Dry oods Company, vice-president, and M. A. Jellgren, assistant cashier Third National Bank, is the treasurer.

V. B. Mulford of Rockford

V. B. Mulford, who has been for many years cashier of the Manufacturers National of Rockford, has resigned that position to engage in business and will specialize in farm loan investments. He will be succeeded as cashier by A. P. Floberg. During the years Mr. Mulford has been associated with the Manufacturers National he has built up a wide circle of friends for himself and for the bank and his many friends wish him the greatest success in his new undertaking.

The Manufacturers National of Rockford is a United States depository and is one of the many strong banks of Rockford. The bank occupies commodious quarters in a large three-story building and is well equipped in every way to carry on business. The capital is $200,000 and the surplus and profits amount to $8,895. Savings accounts are emphasized by this bank and negotiable certificates of deposit are issued. The bank carries a supply of Swedish currency so that parties who wish to send small amounts of money by registered letter may be accommodated. The correspondents are the National Park of New York and the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago.

Rockford Bank to Build Next Spring

The Swedish-American National of Rockford has announced that it will erect in the spring of 1914 a new and modern banking house. The institution has purchased a desirable banking location on the southwest corner of Seventh Street and Fourth Avenue, with a frontage of forty-one feet on Seventh Street and a depth of one hundred and ten feet on Fourth Avenue. The bank will have light from both the east and the north and especial attention will be given to the highly important topic of good light in a banking room.

The plans have not as yet been fully worked out, but the intention of the bank is to erect a three-story fire-proof brick or stone building which will be modern in every respect. The Swedish-American National of Rockford will be one of the best appointed and equipped banking rooms in northern Illinois.

Organized in 1910 as No. 9823, the Swedish-American National of Rockford has enjoyed highly satisfactory growth and at the close of three and one-half years in business the deposits are approximately $600,000. The officers of the bank feel that with the new equipment the bank will make larger increases in business in the future. William Johnson is the president; John A. Alden, vice-president; Otto A. Wedler, cashier, and C. Arthur Rohlen, assistant cashier.

New Bank Buildings Down-State

The White Heath Bank of White Heath, Piatt county, will soon be housed in a neat brick building. The bank has been purchased by Ona L. Cline of Monticello and Silas Sievers of White Heath from the estate of the late J. H. Cline and the new owners will continue the business. Ona L. Cline is county treasurer of Piatt county.

The State Bank of Weldon, DeWitt county, is erecting a new double-room brick building, one room to be occupied by the bank and the other by a store while the Knights of Pythias lodge will have quarters above. Carl Swigart of Clinton is the president and H. T. Swigart of Weldon is the cashier. This building will replace one destroyed by fire last August.

The First National of Casey, Clark county, is another bank to have suffered a fire loss as the bank and adjacent business property were damaged by fire last week. The loss means considerable expense to the bank in remodeling.

Among the more pretentious bank buildings which are now being erected in this state are those of the Central National of Peoria and the National Bank of Decatur. Both of these new buildings have been described before in THE CHICAGO BANKER. They will be among the largest and best equipped in the state. The Central National of Peoria is building a ten-story bank and office structure while the National Bank of Decatur is erecting a pattern of the low, monumental type of bank building preferred by many bankers. Both banks have a host of friends who are watching the improvements with great interest. Other new bank buildings down-state, all previously described in THE CHICAGO BANKER, are the First National of Charleston, Havana National of Havana, the First Bank and Trust Company of Cairo, and the First State Bank of Chester. The Illinois State Bank of Quincy is having plans drawn for a new building.

Illinois Notes

Farm land values in Will county were broken when a farm near Canton Farm sold recently for $255 an acre, while the previous record was $233 an acre.

It is announced by Springfield architects that building operations in that city will be doubled next spring.

The Elgin City Banking Company, affiliated with the First National of that city, is another Illinois savings bank which is doing excellent publicity work in the thrift campaign now being carried on by many progressive institutions. Elgin has many factory workers and the Elgin City Banking Company is endeavoring to aid them. John Newman is the president and George W. Glas is the cashier.

Will county will be one of the ten counties to conduct an agricultural short course which is an advanced form of the usual farmers' institutes. The work will be organized by the University of Illinois and will include instruction in soils, crops, farm mechanics, dairying, animal husbandry and horticulture. Similar schools will be held at Effingham, Chandler-ville, Onarga, Raymond, Geneseo, Galesburg, Adrian, Ottawa and Abingdon.

Corn day, November 7th, will be celebrated in Illinois public schools with great interest. Programs are being arranged, children are being drilled, and the day will be made an important one for farmers and their children. The purpose of the day is to emphasize the importance of agriculture as the leading industry of Illinois.

The Security State Bank of Mound City, northeast of Cairo on the Ohio river, will open for business January 1, 1914. Herman Gaunt will be the cashier.

CHARGES FALSE PRETENSES IN LOAN

Charges on the part of the First National, Pueblo, Col., to the effect that F. J. Kincaide, head of the Kincaide Mercantile Company, had borrowed $500 from the institution on false representation of assets, led to his arrest last week. The complaint filed in court contains a complete statement of Kincaide's assets and liabilities, alleged to have been submitted by him to the bank at the time he applied for the loan. In it he declares himself to be worth $6,495.60, over and above all indebtedness. Investigation, however, has proved that the statement is largely false, according to the allegations made in the complaint. The defendant has pleaded not guilty and has been released on a $500 bond.

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

Half the number of applications required before the newly organized Bank Deposit Insurance Company can issue policies have been received and, according to Secretary George D. Bartlett, the balance of the required number will probably be received in time to start issuing policies by the first of the year. The law, passed by the 1913 legislature, requires that 200 banks apply before policies can be issued. To take out policies the banks pay one-fourth of one per cent on their deposits to maintain the guarantee fund and one-half of one per cent of the deposits to start the fund.

Things are moving faster with the Bankers' Mutual Casualty Company, which has received 350 applications for burglary insurance from the 700 banks of the state and is preparing to open offices on November 1st, in charge of Mr. Bartlett, who is also secretary of this company. For the first six months only $5,000 insurance will be issued to each applicant, but the amount will be increased as soon as the actual cost of carrying such risks has been determined. The bankers of the state have been paying an average of $10,000 annually for the past five years for burglary insurance and of the $50,000 thus expended only about $6,000 has been returned as insurance. During the past year there were two bank burglaries in the state, both successful. The rates of insurance in the new company vary from $1 to $12 per thousand, the premiums varying with the style of safe used. The company proposes to carry the insurance at actual cost and at the end of the year, after providing for the surplus fund, the excess in premiums over expenditures will be rebated pro rata among the members. The charter of the company permits insurance of all casualties, but for the present only burglary will be insured against.

Await Instructions on Income Tax

Milwaukee bankers are awaiting instructions from Washington or from internal revenue agents as to their duties in assisting the federal government to collect the new income tax. First activities along this line will come with the collection of the tax on November interest on bonds.

Defunct Trust Company Sues

The defunct Citizens Savings and Trust Company has instituted an action against the First National and Marshall & Ilsley banks to compel the two latter to honor checks which the plaintiffs declare were turned down by the two former institutions when their holders presented them following the closing of the trust company's offices. The amount involved is said to be $14,611.25, fully covered by deposits in the two banks.

Direct Salesmanship Course

William L. Ross, manager of the bond department of the Second Ward Savings Bank, is directing the course in bond salesmanship at Marquette University this year. Mr. Ross' experience is exceptionally broad and won for him the direction of the Second Ward institution's bond department when this branch of its business was created.

Trust Company Named Receiver

The First Savings and Trust Company has been named receiver for the Heller Piano Company which went into bankruptcy last week. The order was made by Judge K. M. Landis of Standard Oil fame sitting in the Milwaukee branch of the federal court this week.

Wisconsin Notes

That the currency bill will not be passed at the present session of congress was the prediction made by Prof. Howard Hill, instructor in banking and economics of the state university before students of the Milwaukee normal school this week. Prof. Hill gave the bill high indorsement.

The Milwaukee Chapter of the American Institute of Banking opened its new quarters in the Germania building last Friday with a smoker. President J. H. Daggett of the local chapter and President H. J. Dreher of the national organization were the principal speakers.

Group Five, Wisconsin Bankers Association, held its eighth annual convention at Lake Mills on Wednesday. The group comprises the bankers of nine counties in the southeastern part of the state exclusive of Milwaukee county. TWO BANKERS CONVICTED ON MAIL
FRAUD CHARGE

J. M. McDonald of Pleasant Hill, Mo., president of the American Trust Company, Memphis, Tenn., and E. L. Hendrey of Little Rock, Ark., a director, were found guilty last week of using the mails to defraud in connection with the operation of their bank by a jury in the federal court. Verdicts of not guilty were returned against O. E. Helton of Shattuck, Okla., secretary, and E. R. Odle of Chicago, a director. The American Trust was organized about February 16, 1911. It began business on a capital of $500,000, of which $110,000 was said to have been subscribed, $60,000 paid in. Government officers charged that letters sent through the mails set out supposed facts that the bank had connections with various others in the South, and that its officers and directors would get control of several small banks, connect them with the American Trust so the latter could become a clearing house for them. There was a similarity between the operations of the all night and day banks of Memphis, Kansas City, Mo., Kansas City, Kan., Little Rock and Oklahoma City and the American Trust of Memphis. The arrest, trial and conviction of the operators of these banks and their failures caused the American Trust to close, and upon examination of its books the receiver found that but $1.16 remained in the vault and that all its supposed deposits were myths.

DEFUNCT BANK TO PAY DIVIDEND

A dividend of at least 60 per cent will be paid on October 31st to depositors of the Amherst (Ohio) Bank which closed its doors on July 3d. This announcement has been made by State Senator Carl D. Friebolin of Cleveland, who is in charge of the liquidation of the bank's affairs. Senator Friebolin's statement shows $127,569 has been collected to the bank's credit, with expenses to date amounting to $2,988.94.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

Bank clearings in St. Louis during the past week have been quite large and business at the financial institutions has been active. The demand for money has been fair, rates holding firm at and around 6 per cent.

Urge Amendment of Currency Bill

The St. Louis Association of Credit Men at its monthly dinner in the City Club on Thursday of last week unanimously adopted resolutions asking amendments in the Owen-Glass currency bill. The resolutions ask that the federal reserve notes be the obligation of the issuing bank, to be redeemed by the bank in gold, the notes constituting a first lien on the bank's assets, to be secured by a gold reserve of 33 1/3 per cent. The notes so secured would not require the government guarantee. The resolutions state it is entirely unnecessary and inexpedient to place the credit of the government back of these issues. The resolutions recommend that the reserve banks be accorded representation to the extent that two officers should receive salaries and attend meetings without voting powers. A smaller number than twelve reserve banks was favored. Opposition was recorded to the elimination of the savings department provisions of national banks, and to the payment of interest on deposits by the reserve banks. Or, if interest is to be paid on government money, the same rate should be paid to banks.

Officers Dine Stockholders

Officers and directors of the North St. Louis Savings and Trust Company on Thursday of last week entertained the stockholders at dinner at the Washington hotel. Louis Boeger, president, said that in the four years of the company's existence it had prospered and during the year just closed the net profits had been $17,000 or 17 per cent on the capital. Besides President Boeger the officers of the company are Edward Pancok and G. Phillip Hoffman, vice-presidents; H. H. Oberschelp, vice-president and counsel, and Charles W. Owen, secretary and treasurer.

Urges New Withdrawal System

Representatives of St. Louis banking institutions are urging the city to adopt a new system of checking out the deposits of the city money in the various banks. They are limited to half a million dollars each and it has been customary for the city to draw checks on one bank until the account there is ended, then start on the next one. The banks where the money is deposited draw lots and take their turns accordingly. It was suggested that hereafter where any considerable amount is withdrawn on treasurer's warrants that this sum be prorated among all the city depositories. It was the possibility of a stringency in the money market that caused the request for a distribution in the withdrawal of funds, according to Mayor Kiel.

Seventeen banks have submitted bids for handling cash in the treasury of St. Louis for the next year. Sixteen offered 3 per cent interest and one, submitted by the State National of St. Louis, 2 per cent. The city now has $5,892,513.49 on hand, divided among twelve banks, eleven of which hold half a million dollars each.

Poor Mans Bank into New Quarters

The Industrial Loan Company, known as the Poor Mans Bank, has leased a new banking room at 714 Chestnut Street in the International Life building and will move next Monday. It is now at 730 Chestnut Street in the same building. The new room has nearly three times as much space as the present location. The Industrial Loan Company has been in business six and a half months, has made 3,500 loans, aggregating $315,000, to salaried people at 6 per cent interest and has driven twelve loan sharks out of business, according to an announcement issued by the management. James Gay Butler is president.

New St. Louis Bank Chartered

State Bank Commissioner Mitchell has issued a charter to the Laclede Trust Company of St. Louis, which is capitalized at $100,000. The new institution will open quarters on Jefferson Avenue near Market Street about November 15th. William G. Mueller is president and H. W. Kroeger, formerly with the Jefferson Bank, has been chosen secretary. Other officers are yet to be chosen. The directors are W. G. Mueller, president; Leo J. Bayer, vice-president and manager; A. H. Donnewald, secretary; F. W. Linn, Frederick Heger, James A. Dacey, Albert Theis, Henry W. Kroeger, John C. Rodenberg, George F. Stevens, Leonard H. Ballman and Wm. F. Kampmeier.

New Missouri Banks

A charter has been issued to the Bank of Bagnell of Bagnell, with a paid-up capital stock of $10,000. The board of directors is composed of G. W. Kays of Waham and M. M. Howser, H. E. Vance, William Tompkins, C. M. Payne, Louis Harvey and W. T. Blankenship, all of Bagnell.

State Bank Commissioner Mitchell also licensed the Plantation Equipment Company of Valley Park, Mo., which complied with the requirements of the "Blue Sky" law. Bank Settlement Approved

In an official note of acceptance addressed to President E. G. Hornor and Secretary John S. Hornor of the late Bank of Helena, Helena, Ark., the twelve large depositors of the insolvent institution who were submitted a plan of the bank some days ago whereby the claims now pending against the latter could be amicably and justly adjusted and the entire indebtedness liquidated, signified to the former officials their full approval of the plan outlined by them and indicated their co-operation in the latter to the full extent of each. The bank, through its former president and secretary, offered to liquidate all claims now pending against the same, outlining the formation of a stock company to be composed of the Helena Interurban Company and West Helena Land Company and capitalized at $600,000, which company would dispose of its shares to the various depositors of the bank.

"Blue Sky" Ruling

According to an opinion handed down by Attorney-General Moose of Arkansas on Friday of last week, foreign corporations may sell their stock in Arkansas by mail without violating the provisions of the "Blue Sky" law. For some time a number of concerns in adjoining states have been selling stock in Arkansas by advertisements in newspapers throughout the state. Their method was to get some one to agree to purchase the stock and then deposit the money with a bank in Arkansas until the stock was delivered, when the money or draft would be forwarded to them. The attorney-general says: "In such case it is my opinion the bank or person who delivers the stock and collects the draft would not be the agent of the seller, and would not be violating the "Blue Sky" law. The sale, in such case, takes place beyond the limits of the state."

Sees Good Field in Raising Stock

Edgar E. Walden, manager of the real estate department of the Central Bank and Trust Company, Little Rock, Ark., believes that live stock farming can be practiced successfully in any section of Arkansas.

"There are about 20,000,000 acres of land in Arkansas that can be in part or entirely devoted to live stock raising," said Mr. Walden. "The South is the future center of the industry and there is no state so well fitted for the new position as Arkansas. Our land is priced on the average about one-seventh less than the land in some of our northern states. They keep their cattle under fence the entire year, feed them almost the entire year, while we seldom feed for more than three months, very seldom keep our cattle under fence, have tremendous ranges in all parts of the state, yet we sometimes have trouble in convincing our own farmers that a newcomer can do well raising stock on their land. Oftentimes the absence of live stock on farms would cause a prospective Arkansan to conclude that they won't do well.

"Live stock therefore will play an important feature in the real estate business in the future. A great proportion of the thousands of immigrants who are coming to Arkansas come because they look at the increase of population, the decrease of the number of live stock, the tremendous open acreage in Arkansas, the relative low value of the land, the abundant water supply, the congenial climate, the opportunities for range, the adaptability of soil to feed crops, and decide that live stock farming is to be a paying business and that Arkansas is the best location."

Oklahoma Banks Consolidate

The consolidation of the First National and State Guaranty banks, Frederick, Okla., under the title of the First National, has been announced. The change became effective on Tuesday of last week. The consolidation gave the new bank a capital of $60,000 and a surplus of $5,000, making it the strongest institution in the county. J. L. Lair is president; J. B. Beard, Jr., and A. Lair, vice-presidents; S. E. Patton, cashier; D. M. Long and J. A. Mathis, assistant cashiers.

Editorial Comment

SANCTITY OF THE TWO PER CENTS

For some months those who have been agitating against (not trying to amend) the new currency bill have talked and written glibly of the great loss which will come to banks owning the two per cents for circulation purposes. All along the proponents and defenders of the new bill have contended that fears of such losses were groundless. To bring the issue to a conclusion R. D. Duncan of Little Rock forwarded a circular issued by bankers in one of the central reserve cities. In reply to Mr. Duncan the secretary charges that the effect of the proposed measure on United States 2 per cent bonds is being deliberately misrepresented by certain banks. He contends that these bonds will suffer no depression in market price as a result of the legislation, which, he adds, will confer additional advantages on the possession of these securities. Mr. McAdoo also says that he has not found a single banker who actually intends to quit the national banking system if the bill becomes a law.

If the secretary is right, then opposition to the new currency bill, based upon such misconstruction of the provisions of the bill, should cease. Unfair allegations have quite the opposite from the intended effect in such cases. The wisest way to proceed is toward honest, needful amendment. There is much room for such effort. Factional and political opposition will be equally ineffective, for in congress the new bill drew its overwhelming support from republicans, progressives and democrats alike. Secretary McAdoo concludes his strong letter to Mr. Duncan by saying: "The bill does not deprive the 2s of the circulation privilege. It leaves it undisturbed. Every national bank may continue to buy the 2 per cent bonds and take out circulation against them to the full amount of its capital stock, as provided by existing law."

FARMING PAYS WHEN WELL DONE

That just plain farming pays when well done has been demonstrated by John H. Rasor of near Allen, Texas. In thirty years, from nothing, he now owns 1,800 acres of the best land in the state and just plain, mixed farming has done it all. Mr. Rasor was born in Kentucky and tried farming in Iowa, but found the climate too rigorous in the long winters. In Texas he farmed on rented land until he found himself. Before he had courage to buy he had, in fifteen years, paid out in land rent alone $13,500. Then he plunged and paid payments instead of rents. He contracted to pay in bushels of wheat, not in dollars, and thus he dealt in a form of credit with which he was familiar. He found it easy to pay for the first 200 acres and immediately bought a second 200.

In fifteen years he has bought and paid for 1,800 acres besides building houses and barns and buying the best of farm machinery. He and his boys have done the farming and the feeding of the live stock. Mrs. Rasor and two daughters have kept their end of it going on an equally high plane. Just at this writing Mr. Rasor has stored 9,000 bushels of wheat, 10,000 bushels of oats, after selling half these amounts which he did not have storage for. He sold also five car loads of cattle. Yes, farming pays when well done. Mr. Rasor might have remained a renter the rest of his life. His real prosperity came with the courage of ownership. Had he bought at first, as he did fifteen years later, his wealth would now be fourfold. This case should be written up as an agricultural document—a real lesson in farming.

A SEASONABLE BOOK FOR BOYS

Here is one book your boy will earnestly thank you for buying. It is a most suitable birthday gift or a holiday (Christmas is coming) remembrance. It comes from the famous publishing house of the Dana Estes Company, Boston, and is entitled "Every Boy's Book of Handicraft, Sports and Amusements." It isn't a bit like the others. It is up-to-date and original. Most of them are reprints from magazines or boy's papers, and the illustrations few or old. This volume is of 700 pages and has not less than that many illustrations closely related to the text. It covers wood and metal working and electricity—right up to the minute. Photography, bicycling, gardening, dogs, chickens, printing, trapping, camping, fishing, woodcraft, boating, skating, driving, snow sports and aeronauting and all for $2.00, net. It's a big buy for the money.

In short, it is a well considered companion to "Three Hundred Things a Girl Can Do," published also by the Dana Estes Company and world famous. This work covers the whole range so far as is possible of the best active interests of the typical boy, anywhere between the ages of ten and twenty. It is a modern book for a modern boy. From every subject treated, the obsolete and out-of-date has been excluded and the most approved present-day methods, plans and information substituted. New ideas for creating and doing things, the product of the most ingenious minds, are given, as well as study along the lines of the boy's welfare through a development and training of the brain, eye, ear, body and limbs. It is, in fact, a trustworthy guide and counsellor of the best things of youthful endeavor of the past as well as the present and where possible, it takes a dip into the future.

The information and plans given have all been judiciously selected with fine regard to simplicity, thoroughness, utility and safety. Many of the articles will be found to fit admirably with the boy's studies and activities and tend to promote interest in work as well as play. The book is, above all, practical. Its rules and plans are, in all cases, derived from authoritative sources, and apparently no effort or expense has been spared to secure the best. Most of the handicraft problems are the outcome of the author's personal experience in shop and factory, including a service of several years as a government inspector of furniture by C. C. Fraser, the author, who also wrote "Good Old Chums," a very popular boys' book.

EMPHASIZES NEED OF EDUCATION

Joseph Chapman, speaking recently before the Duluth Chapter of the A. I. B., gave some good advice to his auditors. "The worst failure in the banking business," said the speaker, "is the man who is always afraid he will do something he will not get paid for."

"What is hampering the American banker today," said Mr. Chapman, "is ignorance, and the same thing is true of the average congressman when it comes to financial matters. If the American banking of a generation ago had had the same opportunities for study and becoming efficient, the country would not be puzzled and confronted with the currency difficulties that it is to-day."

"The bankers have allowed themselves to get weaned away from the people until the people as a whole have more confidence in the politician in financial matters than they have in bankers. Bankers have been too content to study the few little problems confronting them in their own banks and have learned nothing of the problems involved in drawing up a national currency measure."

BANKERS WOULD ENCOURAGE BOYS

As an evidence of their interest in better farming for Alabama, and of their desire to interest and encourage especially the young farmer boys, Judge C. E. Thomas of Prattville, Ala., chairman of the agricultural committee of the State Bankers Association, has announced that the bankers of Alabama through his committee will offer as the leading prize this year a free trip to Washington, D. C. This prize will be won by the grand champion boy corn raiser of the state, and is worth $100, which is sufficient to pay all traveling expenses from Alabama to Washington and back as well as all his expenses while seeing the sights of the capital.

"COMMERCIAL ARBITRATION"

arbitrators have accepted their appointment.

The rules and regulations governing the procedure are few and simple:

An oath must be taken by members of the committee.

Submissions must be in proper form and acknowledged.

Hearings are public or private as the parties may agree.

Cases must be heard with as much dispatch possible and shorn of needless formalities.

Rooms and stationery are furnished by the member of commerce.

Each party furnishes his own witnesses, paying the fees thereof.

Arbitrators' fees are $10 per day, which fees, stenographer's expense, and other minor expenses are to be awarded as the arbitrators decide.

Beyond these there are practically no rules, while these were made for the chamber of commerce in New York, I see no reason why they are not adapted, with possibly some slight modifications, to the use of any community. In some states the fees of arbitrators are as low as $3.00 per day each, a ridiculously low figure, and an element which has a disconcerting influence in attempted arbitration. The experience of the New York Chamber of Commerce since the adoption of the above plan has, I am told, been very gratifying and numerous cases have been submitted and successfully settled.

The chamber of commerce or commercial societies in the small cities can follow this example. The plan provides an avenue of usefulness under the direction of our chamber of commerce not now generally undertaken but merely within their scope as institutions organized and maintained for the benefit of their respective communities. The requirements on the arbitrators would be much less in the small communities, and the cases upon which awards are to be made would be of less frequent occurrence.

The committee on arbitration and the outside arbitrators would be undertaking no harder task than most public-spirited citizens are willing to and do undertake in other directions.

Our courts would be relieved of many small matters now engaging much of their time, and, I believe, a fair chance of a more satisfactory result to the disputants beside the saving of time and expense incident to extended litigation.

Moreover, it seems reasonable to me to conclude that the idea of arbitration has a tendency toward elevating the standard of fair dealing among men and in most cases there might be expected to be less bitterness during the hearing and after the award than is usual in and after court proceedings, and the interest of commercial peace would be advanced.

The simple informality of properly arranged plan of arbitration where differences or disputes are "talked over," so to speak, would tend to establish the truth of the sentiment contained in the verse of Nixon Waterman:

"If I knew you and you knew me—
If both of us could clearly see,
And with an inner light divine
The meaning of your heart and mine,
I'm sure that we would differ less
And clasp our hands in friendliness;
Our thoughts would pleasantly agree
If I knew you and you knew me."

GROWTH OF AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY

According to the census of motor vehicles, compiled at the Third International Road Congress held in London in June, 1913, the number in use in the world was 1,161,911, of which 1,024,913 were automobiles and 136,998 were motor cycles. Of the total, 628,185 were in use in the United States, 125,728 in England, 89,185 in France and 70,006 in Germany. It will be seen from this that in the number of motor vehicles the United States exceeds the total for all other countries. The total number of commercial auto trucks in use at present outside of the United States is 69,556. In the United States motor trucks are included in the general statistics of automobiles and in 1912 amounted to 50,000. These are increasing at a more rapid rate than passenger automobiles and in 1913 will probably amount to 100,000.

In 1909 there were 743 establishments in the United States engaged in the manufacture of automobiles, including bodies and parts. Only 265 of this number manufactured complete automobiles as their product of chief value, but these establishments employ more than two-thirds of the average number of wage earners engaged in this industry.

The extraordinary development of the automobile industry is seen by a comparison of the number and value of the automobiles manufactured in three given years. In 1899 there were 3,723, valued at $4,748,011; in 1904, 21,692, valued at $30,033,536; and in 1909, 126,593, valued at $249,202,075, or seven times the value in 1904. According to the estimates of the best authorities there were 285,000 pleasure vehicles made in the United States in 1912, and from statements received from motor car manufacturers there will be 627,000 made in 1913, or more than were in the whole world outside of the United States in 1912 and more than double the output of 1912.

Cincinnati

The new twenty-one story bank and office building of the Second National of Toledo was opened for business on Tuesday of last week and hundreds of people called during the day to get their first glimpse of the new quarters. Congratulations and flowers were showered on the officers of the Second National. On Tuesday evening the new banking quarters were open to visitors who were allowed the freedom of the entire institution.

Sale of Bank Building

Emory Lattanner, Ohio state bank superintendent, has been refused the authority to remodel the first floor of the Columbus Savings and Trust Company building, Columbus, which he believed would be the means of bringing in a greater revenue from rents and would enable him to pay a greater per cent on deposits. The court was of the opinion that to sell the building would be the best method of procuring the required funds. Six judges of the common pleas court on Friday of last week voted to sell the Columbus Savings and Trust Building at once, the value of which has been reported to be $910,000. It cannot be sold for less than two-thirds of this value.

Beach Bank Dividend

M. A. Warnes, of Millersburg, special deputy appointed by State Bank Superintendent Lattanner to have charge of the liquidation of the Citizens Bank of Beach City, Ohio, said last week that probably a dividend of 50 per cent would be given to the depositors between January 3d and January 10th. He said that the indications now are that depositors will realize better than 50 per cent, which depends on how much of the money represented by paper can be collected. Mr. Warnes filed a statement of the bank's condition with the common pleas court recently. It gives the total assets and liabilities at $137,153.54 each. The assets include: loans on real estate, $29,833; loans on collateral, $24,573.44; other loans, $47,721.90; overdrafts, $3,565.08; state, county, municipal bonds, not included in reserve, $2,500; other bonds and securities, $5,000; fixtures, $3,012.52; current expenses, $1,134.12; interest paid, $16.77; cash items, $13.95; due from reserve banks, $12,034.61; gold coin, $1,466.66; silver dollars, $95; fractional coin, $604.91; United States national bank notes, $2,015; deficit in loans, $3,514.83; deficit in Mt. Eaton office, $51.75. The liabilities are: capital stock paid in, $15,000; interest, $673.58; exchange, $72.92; individual deposits subject to check, $43,591.03; demand certificates of deposit, $13,856.13; time certificates of deposit, $63,717.39; due Central National Bank, $175.73; cash over, $66.76.

Dividend Delayed

Announcement has been made that the payment of the first dividend of the Osborn Bank will be delayed until November. This postponement has been made necessary by the need of filing with the clerk of the Greene county court a list of claims allowed and rejected at least five days prior to the payment of a dividend.

Lexington Bank Increased Capital

A statement of the increase in the capital stock of the Bank of Commerce, Lexington, Ky., from $100,000 to $150,000 was filed recently by the officers and directors of the bank. The new stock was voted at a meeting of the stockholders held August 19th and was apportioned among the stockholders in the proportion of one new share to two old shares. At the same meeting the number of directors was increased from fifteen to twenty.

Bank in New Home

The Union National, Louisville, Ky., has announced that it has removed from its former quarters, Sixth and Main streets, to locate in its new offices on the main floor of the Inter-Southern building, Fifth and Jefferson. In its new location the bank occupies the entire lower floor. Handsome furnishings have been installed and the new quarters are among the best equipped banking rooms in Louisville.

York Bankers Hold Reunion

Bankers of York, Pa., and the county held a reunion last week at the Lafayette Club. The banquet was given by the New York Clearing House Association. John J. Frick was toastmaster, and addresses were made by ex-Judge W. F. Bay Stewart, president of the Security Title and Trust Company; Grier Hersh, president of the York National; Paul Winebrenner, treasurer of the Hanover Savings Fund, and William R. Horner, cashier of the York County National.

New West Virginia Bank

Bank Commissioner Matthews of West Virginia has issued a charter to the Bank of Flemington, Flemington, W. Va. The authorized capital stock is $25,000, with the following incorporators: Martin L. Shields, T. J. Winter, Rosemont; N. F. Kendall, Grafton; G. O. Sinsel, John B. Cather, I. D. Martin, all of Flemington.

Marine National of Buffalo Increases Capital

The Marine National, Buffalo, N. Y., has increased its capital stock to $2,500,000. With an equal amount of surplus, total capital, surplus and undivided profits now show $5,400,000. The bank reports its resources at the present time as the highest in its history, in excess of $39,000,000. Since the election of Messrs. Knox and Rand to official positions with the Marine National, only three months ago, the resources have increased nearly $5,000,000 and the dividend rate has been increased from 12 per cent to 16 per cent, a dividend of 4 per cent being paid October 1st. The bank has sent out a call for a meeting of the shareholders to vote upon a proposition to still further increase the capital stock from $2,500,000 to $5,000,000. This is done in anticipation of merging the Columbus National with the Marine. They then will have a surplus of $5,000,000, in addition to the $5,000,000 capital, which will give the combined bank resources of more than $60,000,000—one of the great national banks of the country.

Senator Owen Addresses Baltimore Chapter

The Baltimore Chapter, American Institute of Banking, opened its season recently with an address by Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma on "The Pending Banking and Currency Bill." The other talk of the evening was made by Gen. J. Kemp Bartlett, vice-president of the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, on "The Development of Corporate Suretyship." The governors of the chapter have arranged for a series of talks twice a month by prominent men during the winter. These evenings will be interspersed with class work. John A. Graham is president of the chapter; Albert N. Smith, vice-president; H. Clarke Jones, secretary, and Benjamin Hwath, treasurer. In his address on the currency bill

Senator Owen said in part: "The weakness of our present system is known to all students of the question. There is a unanimity of opinion in desiring remedies. In Europe there is a great and open market for commercial paper. A bank can go into almost complete liquidation. Concentration and mobilization of reserves is provided for, as is an elastic currency such as that of the Reichsbank of Germany."

"Here are the great defects of our system: insufficient provision for concentration and mobilization of reserves, a narrow market for commercial paper, and inelasticity in currency. The bill attempts to provide for concentration and mobilization of reserves by the twelve reserve banks. It has been suggested that we have only one bank as the nations of Europe do. We must remember that our country is 3,000 miles broad and that Germany could be set in the heart of Texas, and that with twelve reserve banks we will have less actual institutions than the same expanse of territory in Europe."

Retires From Bank

Alvin C. Baker will succeed Duane D. Jacobs, president of the Farmers and Traders Bank, Lafayette, Ind., on January 1, 1914. Mr. Jacobs has been president of the institution since its organization and now wishes to retire so that he may have more time to himself. He expects to make a trip abroad next summer and on his return to engage in the real estate and loan business with Frank P. Bellinger of Indianapolis. Mr. Baker has been a member of the board of directors since the bank was organized and holds the first shares of stock that were issued.

Bank Changes at Mishawaka

J. A. Roper has resigned as director of the First National, Mishawaka, after having served in that capacity since its organization and been its president since the death of M. V. Beiger in 1903. He also resigns his directorate in the First Trust and Savings Company. Mr. Roper retires to give his attention to other interests, including his factory at Dixon, Ill., where he contemplates moving. At the regular meeting of the board of directors A. D. Warner was elected to fill the vacancy. F. G. Eberhart was elected president and Mr. Warner vice-president of the First National. The officers of the First Trust and Savings Company remain the same.

Gain in Detroit Bank Clearings

In the first nine months of this year ending September 30th, Detroit passed both Cleveland and Cincinnati, and now ranks tenth in bank clearings in the country. Detroit's total for the nine months was $986,623,395, compared with $827,474,178 for the corresponding period in 1912, an increase of 19.2. Cleveland for the same period reports clearings of $955,798,177, a gain of 14.5 per cent, and Cincinnati, $983,258,200, a decrease of 3.9 per cent. For September the Detroit total was $106,314,822, a gain of 21 per cent over the same month last year, compared with Cleveland's $104,431,773 (an increase of 3.4 per cent) and Cincinnati's $103,128,850 (a loss of 3.7 per cent).

The Farmers State of Inverness, Mont., has filed articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state. The new bank is capitalized at $20,000. The directors are J. C. Peters, C. E. Wehr, and J. P. Danielson, all of Inverness.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by F. C. Redmond

The October circular of the Northwestern National, Minneapolis, is optimistic, notes that business is going along on a sound basis, that there is a good demand for money and that interest rates are not any higher. Of the situation in the business world at the present time, including Minneapolis and the Northwest, the circular says:

"The financial situation in Minneapolis continues to reflect sound basic conditions and a fair measure of prosperity in all lines of business. There is a good demand for money at approximately the same rates that have obtained for the past few months. Some few indications of a softening of rates are regarded as temporary, and with the continuing demands for funds for crop moving no material reduction of rates is looked for until these demands abate."

Outline Conditions in Northwest

George F. Orde, vice-president of the First National, Minneapolis, who returned from the convention of the American Bankers Association in Boston last week, said the addresses before the convention by President Vincent of the University of Minnesota and of James J. Hill were among the biggest features of the meeting. "Both Dr. Vincent's and Mr. Hill's addresses were very well received," said Mr. Orde, "and I think eastern bankers have learned much in regard to the northwestern crop and business conditions as a result. The prominence given these talks by northwestern men was very gratifying to the bankers from this section."

New Bank on South Side

Business interests which control the South

Side State Bank at Riverside and Cedar avenues will establish a new bank about December 1st, on Franklin Avenue. The new institution will be called the Franklin Avenue State Bank, will have $25,000 capital stock and $5,000 paid in surplus. R. K. Blinkenberg, now of the grocery firm of Blinkenberg & Gustafson, will be cashier. Among the principal backers of the bank are F. E. Kenaston, A. M. Woodward, A. A. McRae, John Lind, A. O. Erling and H. F. Rosing, principal stockholders in the South Side State Bank.

Addresses Minneapolis Chapter

Congressman George R. Smith of Minneapolis addressed the Minneapolis Chapter, American Institute of Banking, last week. The principal objection that Mr. Smith has against the currency bill now pending in congress is the possibility of politics entering into the proposed federal banking system. He said that it might be possible for four men to control the entire banking system of the United States, and as a member of the banking and currency committee of the house he proposed to fight the objectionable features. "I believe the political control features of the bill will be removed before it passes the senate," Mr. Smith said. "The great opportunities for misuse and abuse of the federal reserve board should not be placed where they could be used for political purposes." Other speakers were H. L. Moore, secretary and treasurer of the Minnesota Loan and Trust, who spoke on the value of technical training such as the Minneapolis Chapter offers in the every day problems of banking life, and Professor C. H. Preston of the university, who spoke of the extension work being done by that institution for business men of Minnesota. Lester T. Banks, president of the chapter, presided at the dinner.

St. Paul Banker Recovers Health

Kenneth Clark, former president of the Merchants National, St. Paul, has returned to St. Paul from Poland Springs, Me., fully recovered in health and says he feels ten years younger. Mr. Clark suffered from rheumatism and needed a vacation. On his return trip Mr. Clark stopped off in several eastern cities. He said that business is marking time pending the operation of the new tariff bill and the fate of the currency bill now before the United States senate. "It would be unfortunate to pass the currency bill in its present form," said Mr. Clark, "and I don't think that it will be passed. It can, however, be made a very good one with proper amendments."

St. Paul Bonds Sell Rapidly

The Northwestern Trust and C. O. Kalman & Co., St. Paul, have disposed of the entire $100,000 worth of Summit Avenue paying bonds which they recently bought. The bonds were in allotments of $30,000 for October; $30,000 for November and $40,000 for December.

State Loans $20,927,176

Minnesota owns $20,927,173.03 interest bearing bonds and certificates, according to a statement issued last week by State Treasurer Walter J. Smith. Most of these securities are credited to the permanent school and university funds and they have been purchased from the funds derived from the sale of state land and from iron ore royalties. The total of trust funds owned by the state is approximately $33,000,000, the balance being represented by money owing on and land contracts and other items. The treasurer's statement shows that the state is doing a larger loaning business than most banks. Municipalities, school districts, counties and other government subdivisions are constantly borrowing from the school fund on bonds duly issued by them. The interest rate is but 4 per cent, thus saving the borrowers a large amount as the prevailing rate in the eastern money market on such securities is not under 5 per cent. Since January 1st the state has loaned to its municipalities $1,233,101.23, the total at that time being $12,818,074.80. During this same period the holdings of Minnesota in bonds of other states has decreased by $350,000, due to the redemption by the state of Tennessee of its securities October 1st.

State Mine Receipts Big

The net receipts from Minnesota mines during the quarter ending September 30th averaged $4,000 a day for ninety days, or a total of $350,000, according to figures compiled by P. Funk, mineral land clerk, state auditor's office. The total shipment of iron ore to date is 2,400,000 tons, and it is expected that when the season closes the total will have reached 3,000,000 tons. The season's output for 1912 was only 1,464,736 tons.

Duluth Chapter Banquet

The Duluth Chapter of the American Institute of Banking gave a banquet to the officers and clerks of the Duluth and Superior banks at the Commercial Club last week. Joseph Chapman, vice-president of the Northwestern National, Minneapolis, delivered an address on "Chapter and Farm Work." Others in the program were Mayor Prince, H. G. Fulton, J. L. Washburn, president of the Northern National; H. S. McGregor, cashier of the City National, and D. Mahoney of the American Exchange. G. W. C. Ross was the toastmaster.

Effort to Recover $6,000

The First National and the City National, Duluth, have begun suit in the district court of Hennepin county to enforce the collection of notes alleged to have been executed by C. A. Kayne of the Kayne & Carter Lumber Company of Bemidji. Judgment for $4,500 and $500 respectively is demanded. Others also have filed suits against the lumber concern, the total amount of the claims, all of which are based on promissory notes, being $49,500.

Superior Postal Bank

The postal savings bank in the Superior post-office now has deposits amounting to nearly $100,000. The business of the first year shows that deposits of $64,047 were made while last year the deposits amounted to $92,459. In 1912 $1,802 was withdrawn, while in 1913 the sum of $45,297 was taken out, leaving a balance on hand of $93,407.

Bank Aids Farmers to Purchase Sheep

R. T. Buckler has returned from Montana with 5,000 sheep which were purchased by him and C. A. Hitchcock for the Merchants National, Crookston, to be sold to the farmers of that vicinity at cost. Many farmers have placed their orders.

New Bank at Sherman

The Farmers Savings, Sherman, opened for business on Wednesday of last week. The officers are O. A. Hanson, president; Adolph Schuch, vice-president; J. M. Hauge, cashier.

Bonding Department Attacked

A test case, seeking a writ of prohibition and injunction against Insurance Commissioner Olson, to determine the constitutionality of the North Dakota bonding act, was started at Fargo last week. The act, which was started at Fargo last week, also as a director and stockholder in a bonding company, has brought the action. Mr. Olson contends that the law creates a monopoly in the state bonding department by taking away the legitimate business of bonding companies chartered by this and other states and actually kills all competition. The bonding companies of North Dakota and other states are supposed to be behind the suit, and if an adverse decision is returned in North Dakota, the action will no doubt be carried to the supreme court of the United States.

Northwest Notes

The home of E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, Minneapolis, was ransacked Wednesday night of last week, but the burglars were frightened away by the return of Mr. and Mrs. Decker. Nothing of value was taken except some old coin.

The United States National, Superior, Wis., has installed an electric clock fitted with a set of Westminster chimes. The clock is fitted with a lighting system so that it can be seen by night as well as by day. A. J. Wentzel, vice-president of the bank, is the sponsor.

Voogd & Co., now the active owners in the State Bank of Sargeant, Minn., have negotiated a deal whereby they became heavily interested in the First State of Dexter. Mr. Voogd and son will have charge of the bank at Dexter.

The Oak Park State, Oak Park, Minn., opened its doors for business last week.

D. W. Cheney, formerly president of the Olivia (Minn.) State died at his home in Sparta, Wis. Mr. Cheney was a resident of Olivia and in business there for a number of years. The cause of his death was heart disease.

The stockholders of the Lake City (Minn.) Bank, the oldest state bank, have renewed its charter for a period of thirty years. The bank was incorporated as a state bank November 4, 1873, and was granted a charter for twenty years, which on its expiration, was renewed for twenty years. The Lake City Bank was started as a private institution in 1867.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

Des Moines, October 23.—Des Moines bankers who have returned from the big convention at Boston are outspoken in declaring it was a great session. Naturally, Iowans are greatly pleased that Arthur Reynolds of the Des Moines National was elected president of the A. B. A. although it never was doubted in Iowa but that such action would be taken. Mr. Reynolds is very popular in Iowa. The discussion among Des Moines bankers relates largely to the currency bill and to the discussion of it before the Boston convention. They unite in the statement that business conditions in the East are entirely satisfactory and that the tariff in all probability will cut little figure in the financial situation.

Lack of Interest in Currency Reform

Governor Clarke did his part in naming delegates to the national conference on currency reform in New York October 14th and 15th under the auspices of the Academy of Political Science. However, it is thought that very few of those named from Iowa attended. The Iowa delegation was named by the governor as follows; J. L. Waite, Burlington; R. O. Green, Fort Dodge; George W. French, Davenport; Ben Bear, Decorah; George E. McClean, Dubuque; B. P. Holst, Boone; L. A. Hamill, Keokuk; Lee Nagle, Red Oak; Harry J. Green, Decorah; Thomas D. Foster, Ottumwa; J. H. Darrah, Chariton.

Alleged Blackhander Arrested

Albert Alley was arrested last week by Deputy United States Marshal Bidwell of Des Moines on charges of trying to "black hand" President John B. Elliott of the Knoxville National at Knoxville. It is charged that Alley mailed at Cordova a letter demanding that Elliott deposit $500 in a designated spot. If he didn't do it he was to feel the point of a knife, according to the letter. Alley is a fisherman. He eluded the officials for several days but was apprehended.

Discover "Shinplasters"

A Davenport paper recently contained an interesting account of the discovery at Florence, Neb., of some of an original issue of "shinplasters" which caused a riot in Davenport fifty-five years ago. These "shinplasters" to the amount of $200,000 were issued by the Bank of Florence. This was a branch of the Cook & Sargent Bank at Davenport, later the First National of that city. The notes were circulated extensively in Davenport. When the panic of 1857 came on, the value of this sort of money fell to even lower than eighty-five cents on the dollar. People presented them at the Cook & Sargent Bank and asked for gold. The bank had none to give them. The bank was stormed and later the home of Ebenezer Cook was attacked and only the calling out of the militia prevented its destruction. Later the bank was forced to redeem the small amounts held by the laboring classes. It was J. B. Richardson who discovered four of these old time notes at Florence. They were brought to Davenport and put on display in the First National windows.

Alleged Forger Arrested

S. H. Keeler, believed to be a clever forger, was arrested in Des Moines last week by Gust Patek, Iowa representative of the W. J. Burns agency. Keeler secured $25 on a bogus check at a hotel, $25 at a business house and $20 at a drug store before he was stopped. When arrested, he had fifty blank checks in his possession. Keeler is said to have admitted that he passed forged checks, on the Stock Yards National at St. Paul. He is also accused of forgery at Ottumwa.

Purchases Controlling Interest

Controlling interest in the First National Indianola has been purchased by Edgar C. Cline of Dallas, S. D., and by William A. and Roy Lane. This is the only national bank in Warren county. It was established forty years ago and is one of the best paying institutions in the central portion of the state. Edgar C. Cline was formerly in the banking business at Guthrie Center, but when his bank, the First National, was consolidated with the Guthrie County National, two years ago, he went to South Dakota where he has been engaged in the banking business.

Bank Robbery Averted

Some excitement prevailed in Tabor, Iowa, last night recently when a couple of pedestrians heard some one walking on the tin roof of the First National Bank building. Naturally enough, they jumped to the conclusion that the institution was about to be robbed. They stationed night watchmen and awakened Chief Ira McCormick, who appeared on the scene with a gun ready for action. But before any one could be killed, the fellow was seen to climb off the roof by means of a ladder and disappear. Watch was kept the remainder of the night but no robbers appeared.

To Prepare European Farm Report

Dennis P. Hogan, well known banker at Massena, called upon Governor Clarke last week and told the latter that he is going to prepare a report upon farm conditions in Europe. Mr. Hogan visited Europe last summer as a representative of the American Farmers Congress and he intends to submit a report along the same lines as that submitted by "Tama Jim" Wilson and Henry Wallace, well known Iowa agricultural experts.

Iowa Notes

P. W. Hall, secretary of the Iowa Bankers Association, is planning a special campaign to encourage the growing of alfalfa. Mr. Hall has sent out cards and posters to the members of the association showing the importance of growing alfalfa in Iowa, and he is preparing to send out more of them as the winter advances.

David P. Oldfield, vice-president of the Citizens State at Mitchellville, and father of Cashier S. J. Oldfield, died last week at the age of 89. He had been prominent at Mitchellville for forty years.

Harry Westergaard, president of the Marne Savings at Marne, has sold his controlling interest in the institution to J. B. Swinburne. Mr. Swinburne had intended to start a new bank, but after consideration the course as here outlined was adopted. Mr. Swinburne will be president of the institution and the other officers will remain unchanged.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

By far the most significant feature of a generally bright business and financial situation in Spokane is the fact that building operations in September, 1913, show an increase of 215 per cent over September, 1912.

In that month this year 79 permits for a total of $678,715 were issued, giving Spokane thirteenth place among cities of the United States. In September last year 87 permits for $214,515 were issued.

Conditions in the farming regions of the Spokane country have been excellent for fall operations. Recent rains put the ground in good shape for fall seeding, and many farmers are busy planting now.

Farming operations next year will begin to show the results of the P. G. Holden-Spokane chamber of commerce alfalfa campaign in a marked increase in the number of hogs and dairy cattle and in a general move toward diversification.

Spokane bankers are given credit by H. F. Davidson, president of the North Pacific Fruit Distributors, for aiding materially the co-operative, central selling efforts of thousands of fruit growers of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. This is the first year of the distributors' existence, and the organization has had a distinctly good effect on the returns of the growers.

"We appreciate the interest Spokane banks are taking in financing this movement," states Mr. Davidson, who is a wealthy Hood River (Oregon) grower. "The bankers have been willing to go outside of the central office in Spokane and care for the sub-centrals affiliated with the big organization. We have found Spokane banks willing to make liberal advances for the benefit of the various local district organizations from the time of making shipment until all returns are made."

As an important adjunct of a comprehensive campaign to be carried on by the Spokane chamber of commerce to urge easterners who contemplate going to the San Francisco exposition in 1915 to see Spokane while in the West, the following novel slogan has been selected by the publicity committee: "Spokane 1915—You'll miss it if you miss it." The committee plans to conduct an extensive campaign the next two years to bring to the attention of tourists the advantages of the Spokane country in a scenic way. Heretofore this has been impossible because of the lack of a hotel that would compare with the best in the country, but the approaching completion of a $2,000,000 hostelry by Spokane capitalists places the city in a position to take care of those who come to see the surrounding mountains, lakes and rivers.

Ernest J. Wienss, aged 21 years, cashier of the Bank of St. Joe, Idaho, and formerly connected with the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company of Spokane, died Sunday night at St. Luke's hospital, after a protracted illness. The remains were sent to his old home at Beatrice, Neb., for interment. Mr. Wienss was taken ill with appendicitis. He underwent an operation and for some time was believed to have recovered. He suddenly grew worse and a second operation was performed. He gradually weakened during the last few days.

W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National bank of Spokane, has started a contest in mathematics in which several hundred pupils of the North Central high school will compete. Algebraic equations and factoring will constitute the contest. Mr. Vincent will have the winner's name engraved on a silver trophy cup presented by himself.

After spending several days in Spokane investigating business conditions and inspecting his company's extensive holdings here, Gerald R. Brown of New York, comptroller of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, returned East much pleased with the situation. "Business conditions in Spokane are good, and the outlook for the future decidedly assuring," said Mr. Brown before leaving. "Every one in Spokane with whom I talked informed me that the situation had improved a great deal in the last few months, and, so far as I have been able to determine, this contention is correct."

Having gotten its survey of labor conditions in Spokane well under way, the industrial committee of the chamber of commerce has now turned its attention to getting information as to the market for each of the various products of Spokane. This is but another phase of the complete and comprehensive industrial survey being conducted by the committee for the purpose of assisting prospective investors and manufacturers who come or write to ascertain the possibilities offered by this city. The survey of labor conditions shows that Spokane occupies a middle ground. It disproves the statement that this city was the home of excessive and prohibitive wages, and establishes the fact that the scale of wages paid in Spokane is manifestly fair to both employer and employee. What the survey of market conditions will show remains to be seen, and, as in the other case, the committee is going to the merchants for information.

EDMONTON NEWS

Official notification has been given to all organized cities in Alberta by the provincial government that it purposes to amend all charters to prevent cities from granting bonuses or any other aid to corporations, industries of manufacturers. It is also provided that no cities will be permitted to exempt such corporations from taxation, or subscribe stock, or guarantee the interest on bonds or debentures. This will place cities on an equality with municipalities, villages and towns in the matter of bonusing industries and will terminate a pernicious practice that has been productive of much contention and legislation. It is in accord with the expression of the union of Alberta municipalities which, at its last convention, passed a resolution bearing upon the question.

Representatives of the Alberta provincial board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada and the boards of trade at Edmonton and Calgary discussed with Premier Sifton and members of his council the feasibility of legislation to facilitate the recovery of small debts. It was proposed that a law be enacted similar to that existing in the eastern provinces and in British Columbia, providing for inquiry into the resources of the debtor and giving the trial court power to order the payment of a sum weekly or monthly out of the debtor's wages. The legislation proposes to give the plaintiff the right to have the payment deducted from the debtor's wages by his employer. The premier announced that the cabinet will consider the matter.

Hon. Peter E. Lessard, a prominent capitalist and insurance man of Edmonton, was confirmed in his election to represent the constituency of St. Paul in the Alberta legislature by Justice Beck of the supreme court, who set aside the petition of Henry Tessier on these grounds: (1) That the petitioner was not qualified by three months' residence; (2) that the deposit accompanying the petition was not made in accordance with statutory requirements, inasmuch as it was set up that the money was the money of Mr. Garneau, the defeated candidate, who was the real petitioner, and was merely using the name of the actual petitioner; and (3) that the service of the copy of the petition was not in accordance with the provisions of the election act. In dismissing the case, the court ordered the petitioner to pay the costs of the trial to the respondent.

J. D. McArthur, president and builder of the Edmonton, Dunvegan & British Columbia railway, who recently submitted a proposal to the Alberta government to build the Alberta & Great Waterways railway to Fort McMurray, 230 miles, provided the bonds were guaranteed to the extent of $20,000 a mile, announces that the big shops at Transcona will be moved to Edmonton at once.

WELLS PLANS TO INCREASE INTEREST IN AGRICULTURE

George T. Wells of the Denver National recently has been appointed vice-chairman and secretary of the Colorado bankers' agricultural committee. Mr. Wells has devised a comprehensive plan for stimulating interest in improved farming methods in his state. He has divided the state into ten sections, which are geographical divisions also, appointing a man in each section as a member of the general committee, he in turn to act as chairman of a local committee, comprising the various counties adjacent. It will be his duty to obtain if possible monthly reports from each one of his counties as to the agricultural development and condition of such county and send these reports to Mr. Wells with his district report. The vice-chairman plans to condense the various reports and make any notes worthy of consideration, sending this to each member of the state association. It also is proposed to enclose with each one of these reports a paper of approximately 750 words touching upon agricultural subjects and written by authorities on these matters.

S. B. MONROE RESIGNS FROM BANK

Stephen B. Monroe, president of the Kalamazoo (Mich.) City Savings Bank, has resigned and in his place the directors have elected Alfred B. Connable, mayor of the city. Mr. Monroe's action follows the mention of his name in connection with the affairs of Victor L. Palmer, financial head of the Michigan Buggy Company, and it was for fear that this connection of their names might hurt the bank that he decided upon the action he took. He repeatedly was urged by the directors not to resign.

WESTERNERS OPTIMISTIC

Herbert Witherspoon of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company had charge of the western delegation which attended the Investment Bankers Convention. Speaking of the attitude of the West toward the future, Mr. Witherspoon said: "We are decidedly hopeful regarding the future. Our lumber business is rather quiet, and has been affected unfavorably by the conservatism of the middle West, where we find the market for our output. The developments in the money market and the gradually slowing down in building operations naturally have affected us, but the state of Washington has had a big wheat crop, and this means a great deal. It may be of interest to those who have not investigated the fact that our farmers in Washington produce a yield of wheat more than twice that of the average in other parts of the country. This fact is revealed by the agricultural department report. Our farmers are very intelligent and are up to date. Collections have been very bad in the West for several months. In May and June collections fell off 90 per cent, when the middle West began to curtail in its use of lumber. This probably was due to the fact that many of the line yards in the middle West have been doing business on borrowed money, and when the banks began to restrict their loans the retail dealers began to take advantage of the fill time on their accounts with the mills in the Northwest. We believe, however, that things will gradually get better."

NEW COMMITTEES OF ILLINOIS BANKERS

The following committees have been appointed for the ensuing year by the administrative committee of the Illinois Bankers Association:

Federal legislative committee—S. B. Montgomery, chairman; Quincy; J. S. Aisnorpe, Cairo; George Woodruff, Joliet; E. D. Hulbert, Chicago; Wm. C. White, Peoria; John B. Jackson, Anna; R. T. Hicks, Pittsburg. Agricultural committee—John M. Crebs, chairman, Carmi; B. F. Harris, Champaign; Irving Shuman, Chicago; H. H. Antrim, Freeport; Jas. W. Bailey, Macomb. Good roads committee—S. E. Bradt, chairman, DeKalb; J. G. Edens, Chicago; H. G. Riggs, Quincy; A. A. Traylor, East St. Louis; T. F. McCartney, Metropolis.

MISSISSIPPI BANK IN HANDS OF RECEIVER

The First National of Natchez, Miss., has been placed in the hands of receivers. The bank was organized in 1895 and had a capital of $250,000. Its deposits are estimated at $958,000. A notice announcing the receivership was posted on the doors of the bank Thursday. It is stated that all depositors will be paid in full.

ENTERTAINED BY AUGUST BLUM

One of the orators at the big I. B. A. banquet, F. A. Vanderlip, was entertained at luncheon on Friday by Vice-President August Blum of the First National. Others at the table included W. T. Fenton, his son, and W. W. Harris.

Western Association Leaders

J. B. JENNINGS
MOBERLY, MO.

L. F. CRAWFORD
SENTINEL BUTTE, N. D.

Two of the new association presidents are J. B. Jennings, vice-president of the Mechanics Savings, Moberly, Mo., and L. F. Crawford, cashier Interstate Bank of Billings County, Sentinel Butte, N. D. Both have long been active in the affairs of their respective organizations and have given generously of their time and efforts in promoting the usefulness and efficiency of those bodies.

MONEY FIRM IN CHICAGO

The prevailing rates for money in Chicago are around $5\frac{1}{2}$ and 6 per cent, with scarcely any variation from day to day, either in the case of collateral loans or commercial paper. Local bankers are of the opinion that little change may be expected for some time. One banker predicted that ease in money may not be expected for the balance of the year.

"There will be no congestion, but discounts will be firmly held, as the supply of funds is not in sufficient volume to take care of new enterprises, which the banks are unwilling to promote under present conditions," he said. "There is a tendency to go slow until the banking bill is settled one way or the other. Then there has been too much extravagance, not only in private life but in corporate financing, and there are many undigested securities to be taken care of."

SCOUTING FOR BIG LEAGUE

The "Capt. Glenn Collins" who "spoofed" the Investment Bankers as "a big London bond man" and ate their good things, drank their wines, etc., is now thought to have been a scout for the Big League (A. B. A.) merely to see if he could discover promising timber for a new section. Get the point?

TOPEKA BANK CHANGE

Fred P. Metzger has resigned as president of the German-American Bank, Topeka, Kan., to devote his entire time to his duties as vice-president of the Home Mutual Insurance Company. It is believed that Theo. C. Mueller, vice-president, will succeed Mr. Metzger. Mr. Mueller was cashier of the German-American for several years prior to the death of J. B. Betts, former vice-president. Mr. Metzger founded this institution and owned stock in it, all of which he has sold.

CALDWELL DENIES RUMOR

George B. Caldwell, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, will not resign his position as vice-president of the Continental and Commercial Trust in order to engage in the bond business.

The report grew out of the offer of a partnership in a bond house, which Mr. Caldwell declined in order to remain with the Continental.

State Auditor Brady has issued a permit to Mark P. Bransfield, F. A. Hibbert, Louis T. Jamme and Thomas F. McFarland for the organization of the State Bank of Clearing; capital stock, $25,000.

B. F. HARRIS was up this week for the round-table conference at the dairy show.

A S chairman of the agricultural conference Mr. Harris expects to begin the issue of a bulletin December 1st dealing with the work of the agricultural and educational committees of the forty state associations interested.

PROBABLY the bulletin will care for some of the publicity work of the agricultural commission of the A. B. A., of which Mr. Harris is chairman.

THE mantle of Joseph Chapman, who "renounced the world" at Boston, has fallen upon the willing shoulders of Mr. Harris.

EVEN the great Pennsylvania has decided to do all its financing hereafter under a general mortgage. Funny no one thought of it in all these years.

CONTINENTAL AND COMMERCIAL TRUST, Chicago, has a neat folder on "Income Tax" if you are interested.

HARRIS TRUST has out quite a volume on the subject if you care to go in still deeper.

If this doesn't fill your longing for higher education write to F. H. Colburn, secretary of the California association, for "The California Bank Act."

YOU will find the volume most conveniently arranged with an extensive cross index and a marginal index which contains about five hundred references to the 123 sections of text.

NELSON N. LAMPERT is the new president of the Chicago Bankers Club. His election, so the retiring president, Wm. A. Heath, says, was unanimous in a meeting which for once almost approached a quorum.

THE dining season opened with a banquet at the LaSalle Saturday evening last, which was well attended. The speaking was of a high order. The humor was done brown by William H. Reese of Milwaukee.

PRESIDENT A. W. HARRIS of the Northwestern University talked on "Technical Education for Business," explaining what is being done and why in the new schools of commerce being established by colleges and universities.

WHEN Dr. Harris accepted he said he would NOT talk on the currency and he certainly selected an absorbing text. He was listened to with closest attention and was congratulated at his conclusion.

THE club has grown in membership and is one of the important dining organizations of the city. Its programs are universally of a high order, time being divided fairly between the serious and the humorous.

COLONEL JOE POLLARD was to have been the fireworks on Saturday evening but was kept away "by circumstances, etc."

A NCESTRY OF THE AMERICAN DOLLAR" is one of the most interesting of the unique little booklets sent out monthly by First National of Boston.

WE are sorry to announce the demise of two more Illinois private banks—at Belleville and at Palmyra.

THE bank at Palmyra is in State Senator Canaday's district. Senator Canaday at the last session of the legislature was one of the chief opponents of the bill for state inspection of private banks.

THE last call found the Chicago nationals in satisfactory shape.

A FEW weeks ago the government contributed $5,000,000 cash to Chicago banks. But after deducting that there would remain a $9,000,000 deposit increase since last August. Cash is $1,500,000 better than in June. Loans have shown but a moderate expansion, less than one-half of 1 per cent over the August total and 2½ per cent over June's total.

THE caution of the past six months has dissipated panicky conditions, probably much to the surprise of "Jim" Donald and "Dan" Wing of foreboding fame.

D. L. HEINSHEIMER, president of the Iowa Bankers Association, is in Chicago, (at his daughter's residence in Wilmette) in preparation for a minor operation from which beneficial results are expected.

HIS health and strength are such, even at his advanced age, that the surgeons say his friends need not feel apprehensive.

PRESIDENT W. A. CLARK of the Carolina National, at Columbia, S. C., has sent out a most engaging and instructive pamphlet on "The Currency Question." He doesn't claim entire originality but that the views expressed are those he steadfastly has advocated for twenty years. It is very much out of the ordinary.

DIME SAVINGS BANK of Detroit, William Livingstone, president, will occupy its fine new building Monday, November 3d. A big reception to friends and patrons is planned.

THE new structure will be one of Detroit's show places. It fronts the postoffice and great public plaza and is a sky-scraper in form. Labor troubles courageously contended caused delays, but the Commodore never hoists a white flag.

COLONEL LIVINGSTONE is one of the foremost figures in the western financial field and has to be consulted in affairs to which it is central.

HIS private interests and investments are large, and yet he gives freely of his time in all forward movements. He was one of the most popular of a long line of popular presidents of the American Bankers Association.

A FRIEND drew "fifty in currency" in a Chicago bank this week and got ten five dollar notes of the National Bank of Commerce—new ones signed by Messrs. Ward and Alexander.

THE numbers began H133839A and ran up consecutively to '49A, which might be regarded as something unusual.

ministration bill, has issued a statement in which he hinted that the Vanderlip proposal is a "red herring," designed to prevent or at least delay currency legislation.

CHAIRMAN GLASS draws attention to the lightning like changes of opinion which Mr. Vanderlip has made with frequency the past few weeks.

JACOB H. SCHIFF points out that Mr. Vanderlip only required three days to completely "switch" and wants to know why.

MR. SCHIFF gives him credit with being "actuated by high but mistaken motives," which is more than Chairman Glass allows.

THE Tribune on Monday had a picture of the whole Damm family, so far as its membership is known at present.

IT likewise paid its compliments to the whole —family of medical quacks or crooks who live off their dupes. Great paper!

WELL, if we get a chance to vote for Roger Sullivan for any old office that he wants, we'll do it. Hasn't changed a mite since his only other suit was his working suit.

LUNCHEON down at the Blackstone this week was the correct tip to all having the price or standing in with President George B. Caldwell of the Investment Bankers.

IT was convention week and a lot of preparation put everything in fine order. Boston had nothing on Chicago in that respect.

H. L. STUART of Halsey & Co. was the general chairman and each of his associates on the general committee was chairman of a subcommittee, a splendid form of organization.

THUS it came that John Jay Abbott arranged the big banquet and Joseph A. Rushton the dinner for the board of governors, smoker, vaudeville, etc.

JOHN E. BLUNT, JR. owned the hotels for the time being and saw that every applicant had "room and bath," as the custom is.

ALBERT W. BULLARD was the Robert Morris-Alexander Hamilton combination in the matter of looking after the finances. No small job in itself.

JAMES L. MARTIN bought the theater tickets, lined up the autos and bossed the entertainment job in a matchless way. He didn't mix the Martinis out at the South Shore. He only prescribed them.

WARREN S. HAYDEN of Cleveland is one of the active vice-presidents of the association and an Ohio booster for keeps. The future in his state, he says, is rosy.

THE Examiner used a "stock cut," evidently for George B. Caldwell. George deserves better treatment than that right at home.

E. M. STEVENS of Minneapolis sees business depression at about the vanishing point. He's a cheerful optimist with all the good talking points right up his sleeve.

THE tip at the Blackstone was that O'Gorman and Reid, of the senate committee, will vote for the Glass-Owen bill and that it will be reported out seven to five.

GEORGE W. KENDRICK III. of Philadelphia, chairman of the committee on public utilities, said the financing of such enterprises had been made more complicated by the creation of state commissions.

ALLEN G. HOYT, chairman of the association's committee on legislation, said: "As investment bankers we are entirely in sympathy with the move to devise laws to prevent the distribution of wildcat securities, commonly known as 'Blue Sky' laws; but we are opposed to crude, ill-drawn, paternalistic laws, which interfere with legitimate banking of responsible dealers in high-grade securities."

GEORGE B. CALDWELL, president of the association, created a mild sensation by his statement in his annual address that the agitation against corporations "has gone so far that our government at Washington is almost certain to be on the bear side of the market."

ANDREW M. LAWRENCE spoke on publicity and boomed "the Hearst papers" to beat the band. "Hearst publicity," said Andrew, "is so effective because the public has confidence in it." Confidentially he told us that the Hearst bonds on the Hearst building were the finest bonds ever issued in Chicago and sold the quickest.

MANY of the daily papers appeared to think, according to their big headlines, that Mr. Caldwell's chief business at the convention was to assail the Taft and Wilson administrations, which would have been a most untactful thing to do.

HARRY M. WEIL of Cincinnati says it will not be long until Huerta has everybody in Mexico except himself in jail. Then we are to jump in and capture him and keep the doors locked until things settle down a bit.

S. E. BRADT of DeKalb has been re-appointed chairman of the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers Association notwithstanding he is on the state pay-roll in a $3,500 job.

JOHN M. CREBS of Carmi has succeeded B. F. Harris as the head of the committee on agriculture and vocational education. It is understood the good work is to be kept up.

ROBERT A. BABSON and A. Piatt Andrew maintain that the Owen-Glass bill is an inflation measure, and that consequently any stimulation of business after its passage will be only the prelude to a period of reaction and depression. Many delegates at the Blackstone argued that the inflation will increase prices and the cost of living.

CORN EXCHANGE NATIONAL has put in a new system of indirect lighting, the envy of all its neighbors.

CHARLES M. McNIDER and family, just in from the Boston convention, drove up just in time to hear the address by President George B. Caldwell. Mack has been touring the Berkshires, Bretton Woods and points between there and here.

GARDNER P. STICKNEY of the Wisconsin Trust, Milwaukee, was one of the few heavyweights present who didn't hold an office or a committee of any kind. He was just a plain delegate.

SAMUEL K. MARTIN, friend of Louis G. Kaufman, New York, was one of the first to register.

WM. R. COMPTON, St. Louis, is on the list of vice-presidents and is a great believer in the future of the association.

C. C. SWINBURN of Butte, Mont., called as a guest. He was on his way to the South and only spent the day in Chicago.

LEVERING MOORE of New Orleans was looking up his former Chicago friends. He had his bringing-up with Peabody, Houghteling & Co.

HOMER W. McCOY had three whole tables at the banquet for his associates and friends—eighteen in all.

AMONG those in the party were August Blum, William C. Niblack, and LaVerne Noyes.

GEORGE FORREY of Indianapolis was one of the Hoosier delegates.

THE whole official staff was re-elected from president down. This is a monster tribute to its founder, organizer and third-term president—George B. Caldwell.

THE governors did not feel that the helm should be put into new hands until the main principles of the association have become its fixed policy.

SECRETARY FENTON told how anxious a whole lot of financial papers were to become the official organ of the association but all had been turned down.

HIS report did not make it plain, but he later stated that the would-be official organs were not Chicago publications, which is something to be pleased about.

THE most useless of all things is the official organ, and next to it in uselessness is the association which permits one.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, JR., was here representing a New York firm and seemed awfully lonesome at not seeing B. F. Harris in one of the "high chairs."

EUGENE M. STEVENS was the top-notch-er from the Northwest. His is the leading firm in Minneapolis.

CAPT. TAYLOR of Rollins & Co. had 35 guests at the banquet. Halsey & Co. had 9 and the Continental Trust all they could get.

ALL of the big Chicago bond houses had lists of guests. L. A. Goddard of the State Bank was a personal guest of Homer W. McCoy, head of the big house of McCoy & company.

THEODORE L. WEED, former director of the U. S. Postal Savings Banks, but now with the American Bank Note Co., New York, along with President Greene of his company, was attending the convention with deep interest.

DIRECTOR WEED (he was then) made a big hit with his program address at the B. A. convention at Detroit last year. The bankers have felt differently toward the government banks ever since.

EVERYBODY at the Blackstone was sorry he hadn't bought a lot of government two's in 94 so that he could have sold them this week in 98. Another illustration of how the smartest even can be misled by governmental operations of the practiced sort.

THERE were even bets that the next new section of the A. B. A. will be a country bankers' section. You know if George Rogers gets it into his head there ought to be one all—well, all of anything can't stop him.

GEORGE is so tickled with the big hit his string of kickers made in Washington, being the president and the secretary of the treasury, and having four whole sessions with the currency committee all to themselves, that he's likely to think about the possibilities of the future.

HOW would this line up do? For president of the new section, George Rogers of Kansas; for vice-president, George Woodruff of Illinois; for chairman of executive committee, W. B. Harrison of Oklahoma, and for secretary, McLane Tilton, Jr., of Alabama.

THERE would be something doing all the time at the sessions. The investment bankers will back the country bankers for place and to win.

OF course this leaves Gordon Jones, W. J. Bailey and Davis Barry temporarily out in the cold, but they can start something else.

THE country banker will carry the flag until the new bill makes the two per cents safe, cuts out the savings bank features and abolishes free exchange.

EMORY W. CLARK of Detroit is an optimist on the automobile business. He says every failure makes it more stable. Nothing to worry about, then, for there will be others.

THE electric vehicle convention and show this week at the La Salle was the investment bankers' only rival.

THERE will be many, many chances to buy cycle car stocks during the winter. Follow Keyser's advice about handing money to strangers.

ONE bank which bought a draft on automobiles in transit now has the cars. The dealer rejected them as defective and proved his case.

THE IRVING NATIONAL, New York, is distributing to its customers a pamphlet containing the coupon regulations as issued by the commissioner of internal revenue under the income tax law, with an explanatory letter.

H. E. WARD, cashier of the Irving, has gone into the matter in a special letter to all depositors, giving general directions how to collect coupons, and inviting specific correspondence on the complex subject.

JOHN M. CREBS, the new chairman of the agricultural committee for the Illinois Bankers Association, was for several years president of the Illinois State Fair Association and ex officio a trustee of the University of Illinois and greatly interested in the work of the agricultural college. He has thus been in touch with such matters as naturally will be considered by the committee.

THIS is quite fortunate, for Mr. Harris in the years he held the chairmanship has set a pace no green hand could make. It is not expected that Mr. Harris will accept the second place on the committee.

NEITHER is it expected that W. G. Edens will continue on the good roads committee, having devoted his full share of time to the work.

ONE private bank failed at Palmyra, this state, last week, and two brand new state banks are being organized. The fight was for the title "First State."

IT would be a fine scheme to take out First State charters in all of the private bank towns, for "guaranteeing of farm mortgages and overloaning to single borrowers" surely will, in time, bring the demand, just as it did at Palmyra.

WHERE there are two such banks, the one really in a position to incorporate should get ready, for the opening is quite likely to come in such cases.

LOTS of postage stamps wasted in the big banks in Chicago. A package from one of them came to THE CHICAGO BANKER this week bearing first class letter postage 32 cents. Parcel post would have cut the cost greatly.

Investment vs. Commercial Banking

Prof. W. A. Scott of the University of Wisconsin at second annual convention of Investment Bankers Association explains the distinction

Dr. Wm. A. Scott of the University of Wisconsin delivered a very able address before the Investment Bankers' convention on "Investment versus Commercial Banking." He defined commercial banks as essential parts of the machinery by which goods and services are exchanged in the everyday conduct of business, while investment banks are essential parts of the machinery by which the savings of the people are collected and applied to the production and transportation of goods and to the service of such public bodies as the federal, state, county, township and municipal governments. He described certain features of our credit system to show that the commercial banks perform the service of a medium of exchange and said that the indispensable tools for their work are commercial paper and the checking account; that bank notes may or may not be used but are essential to the workings of a perfect system. Instead of the receipt of money on deposit and loaning it out again being the only business of commercial banks, as many believed, the performance of these services is purely subordinate to their main line and would not be undertaken at all if the discount of commercial paper, the conduct of checking accounts and the issue of notes were not also carried on, he said.

"The service rendered by the investment bank differs greatly from that of the commercial," said Dr. Scott. "It acts as an intermediary between the person who has accumulated capital and those who are in a position to invest it in fixed form. Two processes are here involved—the accumulation of the savings of the community on the one hand, the development of natural resources and the construction and management of manufacturing and transportation agencies on the other. The transfer of capital to public bodies, such as central governments, states, municipalities, and other political divisions for unproductive consumption, is a process also carried on by investment banks similar to the other in its nature, but having peculiarities which place it in a class by itself."

Dr. Scott continued: "It is possible, indeed very easy, to confuse commercial and investment banking. This confusion is most readily accomplished by the exchange of investment securities for checking accounts. Thus a commercial bank may treat bonds, mortgages or the personal notes of its customers indefinitely renewed and discounted for investment purposes in the same manner that it treats genuine commercial paper. The consequences of such action, however, are most serious. They are inflation of credit, forced liquidation and, in extreme cases, commercial crisis.

"When commercial banks create their own demand obligations, either in the form of checking accounts or notes against investment securities, they are creating an obligation which they may not be able to meet. When they exchange credit accounts for commercial securities, the ordinary processes of commerce bring into their possession day by day the means of meeting the obligations which they create, but when they create such obligations against investment securities, the funds regularly coming into their possession for the meeting of such obligations are quite inadequate for the purpose. The enterprises which these investment securities represent, however productive they may be, bring into existence only after a series of years an amount of produce sufficient to offset the original investment. If such an enterprise produces a profit of 10 per cent a year, it takes ten years to reproduce itself. If only 5 per cent profit per annum is produced, twenty years are required. The demand obligations created by the banks, however, must be met long before these periods of time elapse.

"The only means by which the banks can meet such obligations when they mature is by the sale on the market of the securities in their possession not yet due, and, while an individual bank may be able to transfer such securities to another institution, and the banks of a country as a whole sometimes may be able to transfer them to the banks of other countries, the danger is always present that such transfers cannot be made, and even if they can be only at a great sacrifice. Forced liquidation, in other words, is a necessary outcome of over expansion of credit caused by the exchange of investment securities for checking accounts, and if such forced liquidation is general throughout a country and attempted on a large scale, it can only be accomplished through the agency of the bankruptcy courts, and when these function on a large scale, commercial crisis is inevitable.

"On account of certain of our laws and practices, we are constantly exposed in this country to the confusion of investment and commercial banking. Many years ago, as a result of financial distress on the part of the federal government, our national banking act was passed, which provided for the creation of institutions, a portion or all of whose capital should be invested in government bonds. While these institutions were designed to be commercial banks, the clauses of the law which described their powers were so worded as to leave the doors wide open for investment banking opertions from one person to another, and if the ations. The tying up of a portion and in some cases of all of the capital of these institutions in government bonds, however, leaves them small margin for investment banking operations. For this purpose they can only safely use such portion of their capital as is not invested in bonds, their surplus funds and their savings accounts; partly because of ignorance of the consequences and partly because of pressure, they are, however, constantly overstepping these bounds.

"The fact that circulating notes, supposed to be adequately protected by government bonds deposited with the comptroller of the currency, are put into their hands and are regarded both by them and by the general public as money, which, under ordinary circumstances, will not need to be redeemed, they are tempted to exchange them for investment securities, or at least the harm of such a procedure is obscured.

"The laws pertaining to our state banks also encourage the confusion of these two departments of banking. Some of these laws place no limit whatever upon the amount of investment such banks may make in real estate and mortgage securities and in other cases the limits prescribed for such investments do not depend in any respect upon the capital, surplus and savings funds which they possess. Indeed, in country towns these banks are encouraged to loan their funds to farmers on mortgage security and for the purpose of assisting them, not in the transfer of their crops to consumers or in the transformation of seed into crops, but for the purchase of their lands, the construction of their buildings, the equipment of their farms with drainage, irrigation works, cattle, machinery, etc. Thus they are tempted, and in some cases almost forced, to transform investment securities into checking accounts, and thus to over expand credit and to create conditions which result in forced liquidation and crisis.

"Our reserve system contributes to the same end. It compels banks to keep locked up in their vaults in cash a certain percentage of their deposit liabilities. A larger percentage is usually kept on deposit with banks in reserve cities, and since they must be held subject to call these funds flow to New York City, where they are invested in call loans on the stock exchange. The fact that under ordinary circumstances the loans of a broker when called can be transferred from one bank to another and that the securities deposited as collateral can be readily sold upon the stock exchange, has created the impression that these loans are really liquid. As a matter of fact they are not liquid in any proper sense of the term. The sale of a bond or of a certificate of stock on the New York stock exchange is not liquidation. It is merely a transfer of obligapressure for realization upon call loans is great, these transfers cannot be made in the ordinary manner, and crisis ensues.

"The third part of our reserves takes the form of high class bonds listed upon the exchanges. Banks call these their secondary reserves and ordinarily feel quite safe when they have large quantities of them in their vaults. In this case also they are deceived by the fact that ordinarily, when everything is running smoothly, such bonds can be turned into cash, and they are accustomed to call these securities liquid on that account, but they are no more liquid than are the call loans based upon them, and pressure to realize on this portion of our reserves, if it be great, is forced liquidation, and in extreme cases also results in crises.

"So far as the danger of confusing commercial and investment banking is concerned, in many respects the worst of our banking practices still remains for discussion. I refer to the basis on which lines of credit for ordinary bank customers are established and administered. It is customary for a business man to arrange with his banker for such a line and too often in determining how much it shall be the banker takes into consideration the man's total possessions rather than the volume of commerce which he transacts. The line once determined the customer expects that the bank will carry him for that amount and usually resents too close inquiry into the way in which he employs borrowed funds. Though the banker usually insists that his customer's paper shall be drawn for short periods of time, both expect that this paper will be renewed at maturity. Indeed both the customer and the banker is apt to regard the amount fixed in the line of credit as a part of the former's permanent working capital. The practice of demanding carefully drawn statements of a customer's business is fortunately growing, but it is still very far from common. The correct interpretation of these statements when they are drawn is even less common.

"On account of this practice a banker rarely knows to what extent the paper in his portfolios represents commercial and to what extent investment processes. Until the test of forced liquidation actually comes, he does not know how large a percentage of his resources are really liquid. Under these circumstances it is not surprising that the line between investment and commercial banking is frequently crossed, and that at frequent intervals liquidation is forced throughout the country with the accompaniment of business depression and too often of commercial crisis. The fact that the paper of customers is drawn for thirty, sixty, ninety days, four or six months, enables the banker to force this liquidation process upon customers, but this fact does not protect the country from the consequences of such liquidation. Sacrifice of property, fall in prices, commercial failures on a large scale, and a general readjustment of commercial and industrial relations cannot thus be avoided.

"In our efforts toward banking reform these conditions should be kept constantly in mind. Genuine reform must bring about such conditions that a banker will know with practical certainty how large a proportion of his total deposits are savings and what commercial balances. He must be able to draw with accuracy the line between commercial and other forms of securities, and must know how much and what particular pieces of the paper in his possession belong to the one class and what to the other.

"In this connection it is worth while to consider the bringing back into common use of the old commercial bill of exchange. For the purpose of distinguishing commercial from investment operations that form of document has great advantages over promissory notes. It contains in every case the name of at least two parties, and a banker who is familiar, as most are, with his constituents, can easily surmise from these names the nature of the operation which the bill represents. When such bills are accompanied by warehouse receipts, bills of lading, etc., as many of them may be, he knows absolutely that they are commercial in their character. With a promissory note, however, he is entirely at sea regarding the use to which the funds have been put. He knows simply that the person whose name is signed to the note is under obligation to him for a certain amount, but what commercial, investment, or industrial process that note represents he does not know.

"Genuine banking reform must also provide us with a national market for commercial paper, and to this end we must have some kind of a central institution with authority to issue notes against commercial securities. We must also introduce here the banker's bill so widely used in all the countries of Europe, and that means the introduction of a new form of bank credit, namely, the acceptance. Only in this way can the paper of individuals, not widely known beyond their own home territory, be made available for purchase and sale on the markets of the nation and for foreign countries.

"Our reserve system should be entirely transformed. The cash portion of it should be centralized, or at least co-operatively administered, so that it can be economically used and made equally available to all sections of the country and to all classes of financial institutions. The remainder of it should take the form of commercial paper which can be instantly transformed into cash or bank notes either at home or abroad.

"The passage of the Owen-Glass currency bill or of some measure drawn on lines similar to that, or to the Monetary Commission's bill introduced into the preceding congress, will go far toward making the necessary reforms in our commercial banking machinery. It will need to be supplemented, however, by a careful educational campaign before these disastrous practices which I have mentioned can be entirely eliminated. The average banker at the present time does not comprehend in all of its bearings, and indeed in its most essential bearings, the distinction between commercial and investment banking. Still less do his customers. The campaign of education should be continued until this distinction in all of its essential bearings is a part of the common knowledge of the entire country. Then it will be comparatively easy for bankers to get from their customers genuine commercial paper,

The New Banking and Currency Bill

The new banking and currency bill known as the Federal Reserve Act, now under consideration in Congress, is of vital interest to every banker.

It is necessarily technical in its nature and therefore hard to understand.

We have prepared a Digest of the bill, concise, compact, and so arranged as to enable the busy man to grasp its essential features in a few minutes. A copy of this Digest will be sent to anyone on request.

the first essential of the conduct of commercial banking on a sound basis.

"Only after such a reform has been brought about can investment bankers properly perform their functions. Changes in the machinery by which this branch of banking is now carried on in this country are doubtless desirable. The facilities for the distribution of the capital of the country are not complete. It moves much more readily to certain industries than to others. I believe that agriculture does not receive its proper share.

"Reform is also needed in our stock exchange methods, but a campaign of education must come first. Too many of our people are prejudiced against these exchanges; think of them only as gambling dens, and utterly fail to appreciate the absolutely essential role which they play in our national economy. A line between the investment and speculative business which they conduct must be more carefully drawn and they should be subjected to a kind and degree of supervision which has hardly yet become a subject of discussion in this country."

CONDITION OF CHICAGO BANKS

The growth of savings deposits in Chicago is reflected in continued gains by the state banks. In their reports to the state auditor twenty-one institutions show an aggregate increase of $2,996,746 in deposits from August 1st to October 22nd. In the same interval these banks increased their loans by $4,968,332. Their cash resources on October 22nd totaled $36,803,449, a decrease of $2,463,338 since the August call.

Deposits of Chicago national banks in the same period increased $14,220,875; their loans and discounts increased $1,342,056, and cash resources increased $14,018,608. Taking state and national banks together, deposits increased $7,217,621; loans and discounts increased $6,000,388, and cash resources increased $11,555,000.

ST. PAUL BANK REOPENS ON BOND

The First State Bank of North St. Paul, whose cashier, A. E. Nelson, disappeared after his enforced resignation October 2nd, closed temporarily to allow an examination of its assets, was allowed to reopen for business this week after wealthy stockholders had given a bond to the state superintendent of banks to protect depositors. After Nelson's disappearance, according to Kelsey S. Chase, superintendent of banks, it was discovered that a large amount of paper in the bank's possession was either forged or worthless. The amount the bank will lose is not divulged, but the stockholders, leading manufacturers of North St. Paul, have already been called on for a 100 per cent assessment.

FORGAN RAPS CURRENCY BILL

David R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank, bitterly assailed certain features of the currency bill at a luncheon given Wednesday by the Chicago Association of Commerce. The government, declared the speaker, has confused two entirely different branches of banking, and proposes to make the national banks suffer for abuses with which only a few have been connected. He said the bankers favor the bill as a whole, but object to certain parts of it.

J. V. Farwell, who also spoke, indorsed the bill as a whole.

DAIRY INTERESTS CONVENE

Col. W. E. Skinner, general manager of the National Dairy Show at the Union Stockyards, brought about a round table conference at the Saddle and Sirloin Club Monday noon. About 200 gentlemen representing the various elements concerned in the milk industry attended the luncheon and took an active part in the discussion that followed. Dr. Favill, the noted Holstein breeder, presided. B. F. Harris and W. G. Edens represented the Illinois Bankers Association. Mr. Harris spoke briefly, urging intelligent co-operation that would bring about improved conditions for all connected with the industry, and consequently benefits for not only the producers but the general public as well.

A permanent national organization was effected. The records show that twenty-eight different bodies were represented in the conference.

Investment Bankers' Convention

Second annual convention of the Investment Bankers Association of America was held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week at the Blackstone hotel and was largely attended by representatives of investment banking houses all over the country. The program provided was excellent and many expressions of commendation were heard from those present.

The first official session was called to order Tuesday morning by President George B. Caldwell, and after the annual address of the president, the secretary and the treasurer reported. Meetings of standing committees were held in the afternoon. At 2:30 p. m. there was an automobile ride for visiting delegates and ladies and at 5:30 a meeting of the board of governors was held.

The first part of the Wednesday morning meeting was devoted to committee reports. There were addresses on municipal financing by Edmund D. Fisher, deputy comptroller, city of New York; "Investment vs. Commercial Banking," Prof. William A. Scott, University of Wisconsin; "Some Covenants Which Every Trust Deed Should Contain," Silas H. Strawn, Chicago lawyer; and "Postal Savings Bonds," by a representative of the postoffice department. In the evening there was a theater party at the Garrick.

Thursday Samuel Insull, president of the Commonwealth Edison Co., talked on electrical securities and Delos A. Chappell of Los Angeles spoke on the financing and development of hydro-electric power. John E. Blunt, Jr., vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust of this city, discussed railroad bonds, and public utility and timber bonds were respectively taken up by John E. Oldham, Merrill, Oldham & Co., Boston, and Clark L. Poole of Clark L. Poole & Co., Chicago.

The convention was concluded by a banquet Thursday evening in the Gold Room of the Congress, at which there were addresses on railroad financing of the future by James J. Hill; "The Effect of the Proposed Banking Legislation on Corporation Securities," F. A. Vanderlip of New York; "The Effect of Proposed Monetary Legislation on General Business," George M. Reynolds, and "The Best Investment," by the Rev. John Cavanaugh, president Notre Dame University.

President's Address

President George B. Caldwell in his annual address reviewed briefly the activities of the association during the past year, and told of the work of the various committees.

Speaking of the Glass-Owen bill as it relates to investment banking, Mr. Caldwell said:

"In the discussion of the Glass-Owen bill, which has passed the house, it has been brought out that fifty-two banks, located in three central reserve cities will pay out over $500,000,- 000 to the federal reserve banks, which represents about five-sixths of the total payments, and that they will be obliged to liquidate this amount, temporarily at least, in the contraction of their resources above the cash reserve they now hold of twenty-five per cent. Hence, there must follow the payment of a large amount of bills receivable held by banks, or the sale of a large amount of bonds and other securities, or both. Under this forced readjustment, the question of banking and currency reform is brought home to us in a way we cannot avoid if we would. Moreover, by the removal of this large deposit from the national banks, where it is now available for loans upon stocks and bonds as collateral, to a federal reserve bank, where it is not thus available, we face the loss of this amount of money, not temporarily but permanently, and its consequent direct effect upon the business of investment banking. As bond dealers, we are also interested in the effect any new legislation will have upon the market for government bonds. Faith in the government will certainly be put to a test if the circulation privilege is not continued against all outstanding two per cent bonds, and other issues, until redeemed at par, or surrendered voluntarily for exchange into new three's. Certainly the moral responsibility on the part of the government to safeguard the public credit is more necessary to-day than ever, considering the volume and kinds of credit now in existence, and if repudiation of a debt by a municipality or a corporation is a crime and detrimental to future credit, and it is, it is certain the government should pass no banking and currency legislation that does not at all times and under all circumstances protect holders of its credit. The second objection is that the attitude of the administration as reflected in the proposed bill is unfair toward bonds, by restricting the basis for currency to be issued to commercial paper alone. This is, it seems to me, unfair alike to the dealer and investor. To-day, government and municipal bonds are accepted as security for government deposits, while commercial paper is not. True, commercial paper is short time and liquid—so are some bonds—but it is also true that commercial paper fails in comparison with government and municipal bonds in point of safety. I would like to see the law, when passed, permit the use of both, and especially should this be so if any large number of state banks and trust companies are to become members and congress keeps itself clear of the criticism of passing discriminatory class legislation."

FAVOR GOOD LEGISLATION

The investment bankers are heartily in favor of good legislation along regulatory lines, and oppose that which is ill-advised. Allen G. Hoyt, of New York, chairman of the legislative committee of the association, announced complete sympathy with the enactment of laws designed to prevent the distribution of "wildcat" securities by unscrupulous dealers. The association, however, does not favor poorly drawn, paternalistic measures to interfere with the legitimate business of responsible dealers in high grade securities." A bill-drafting department in which there would be trained men was advocated for each state.

Wednesday, Prof. William A. Scott of the University of Wisconsin, and Edmund D. Fisher, deputy comptroller, New York City, approved the underlying principles of the Glass-Owen bill. Prof. Scott urged education as a means of eliminating bad banking practices. He termed the entire banking reserve system as "an invitation to confusion." Edmund D. Fisher, in discussing "municipal financing," told the delegates that he believed a period of increased wealth and new opportunities would follow the passage of the currency bill.

"The Glass-Owen bill will not prevent the investment bankers from borrowing money on securities during the time they are in his hands for placement with the ultimate investor," said Mr. Fisher. "It will remove the tendency to stimulate prices through a plethoric money market. There will be a broadening demand for investment and municipal bonds will again take the place they once held in the market."

"European cities," said Mr. Fisher, "have a higher credit than American cities, because their standard of citizenship is entirely different. Americans are more subject to the whims of political sentiment."

Board of Governors' Dinner

Tuesday evening the board of governors met at an informal dinner at the Blackstone. There were brief talks by Andrew M. Lawrence of the Examiner and Edmund D. Fisher, deputy comptroller, New York City. Afterwards the diners attended the "get-together" smoker and vaudeville in the ball room.

Silas H. Strawn, Chicago attorney, enumerated a number of covenants which trust deeds should contain. Epitomizing his remarks the speaker said:

"Therefore, answering in a word the question, What covenants should every trust deed contain? we may say those covenants which under the law fully and clearly express the intention of the parties interested, and guarantee to the purchaser of the securities every protection consistent with the ability of the borrower to so conduct his business under the covenants of the deed that he can faithfully and promptly keep and perform the obligations to which he has committed himself."

REYNOLDS ON CARELESS LEGISLATION

At the big I. B. A. banquet George M. Reynolds said: "Panics are not so much the result of a defect in the banking system as the public's fear that the system cannot meet the demands upon it. Legislation to be good must be of such a nature that it will not cause people to become fearful. A law that might be good if it could be put into effect might be so revolutionary as to destroy confidence before it could take effect, and the proposed currency bill is revolutionary."

POSTAL SAVINGS AT HUTCHINSON

According to T. R. Campbell, cashier of the Postal Savings Bank at Hutchinson, the government depository seems to be losing in deposits. The women, he says, are drawing out their money in large quantities and during the first two weeks of October the bank lost in deposits about $500.

OFFICIALS OF NEW BANK RESIGN

Orville E. Mabey, vice-president and a member of the board of directors of the Progressive State, Winfield, Kan., and Jess Shakelton, a director, have sold their holdings to L. P. King, president of the bank. Their places are yet to be filled and an election will be held soon.

Edwin Blakeslee, former state senator and for several years chairman of the state board of pardons has been elected president of the Commercial National, St. Joseph, Mich., to succeed James M. Ball, one of the founders of the institution.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

Illinois friends of William B. McKinley, president of the Illinois Traction System, former congressman from the Nineteenth district and at different times a large stockholder in many central Illinois banks, will be interested in reading a brief notice of the Illinois financier published in a Japanese newspaper. Mr. McKinley's friends will remember that he is now making a trip around the world in company with his two nieces, the Misses Mary and Julia Mattis, daughters of Ross R. Mattis, president of the Trevett-Mattis Banking Company of Champaign. The Japanese paper gives part of a page to news printed in English and has some interesting comment to make on Mr. McKinley. His picture is given as well as the same item in Japanese which, under the heading, "An Interview with Mr. W. B. McKinley of Illinois, U. S. A.," is as follows:

"Our reporter interviewed Mr. William B. McKinley of Champaign, Ill., U. S. A. With his nieces the Misses Mattis, Mr. McKinley is making a tour of the world. Mr. McKinley is a business man and has been here investigating the agricultural interests of Japan and also particularly our tremendous business development of the past ten years. Naturally he is very much impressed with our wonderful success. Mr. McKinley will spend a month in Japan, making as thorough an investigation as the time will allow and from here will go to Korea and thence to China."

Charles C. Craig of Galesburg

Charles C. Craig, president and a director of the Bank of Galesburg, who was last week elected associate justice of the Illinois supreme court, is a well-known banker, attorney, farmer and public man. Mr. Craig has been a director and attorney of the Bank of Galesburg for many years and is now its president. His father, the late Alfred M. Craig, also a member of the state supreme court, was one of the large stockholders and a director of the Bank of Galesburg. The Craig family have been large land-owners in Knox and surrounding counties and C. C. Craig gives considerable of his attention to the care of his farms and to the advancement of soil improvement and other agricultural matters.

Mr. Craig was educated in the public schools, Knox College, Notre Dame University and the United States Naval Academy, being a graduate of the latter institution. He later studied law in the offices of Stevenson & Ewing of Bloomington and graduated from the law department of the Illinois Wesleyan University, finishing two years' work in one. He has been for twenty-three years in active practice and the success which he has attained has been due to his merit and ability. He has been counsel in many important cases tried in Knox and surrounding counties and has enjoyed a large practice in the state courts of Illinois and other states.

He has been a prominent worker in the democratic party for many years and has devoted as much time to its cause as his varied business and legal interests would permit. He was a member of the forty-first and forty-second general assemblies of Illinois; was chairman of the committee on agriculture of the Illinois commission at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition held in St. Louis in 1904, and was nominated as democratic candidate for judge of the Illinois supreme court in 1909 and was defeated by only a small majority. He has also devoted much time and attention to military affairs, having served for several years as captain of Battery B of the First Artillery, Illinois National Guard; has also served as lieutenant-colonel and ordnance officer on the staff of General Kittleson of the Third Brigade and as instructor and supervisor of rifle practice of the various companies in the north-western part of the state. He is now serving on the staff of Governor Dunne.

Important Bank Change at Rockford

One of the important news items of the week is the announcement that the Winnebago National of Rockford will soon be succeeded by the Winnebago Bank and Trust Company. A permit has been issued to William T. Robertson, Chandler Starr and Edward Lathrop by State Auditor Brady for the incorporation of the business as a state bank and its capital will be $250,000.

The Winnebago National has been for many years one of the largest as well as one of the oldest banks in northern Illinois. It has had a continuous existence for sixty-five years and has been in the same building for sixty years.

The bank was established in 1848 as that of Robertson & Holland, which name was followed by that of Robertson, Coleman & Co. in 1851, which was again changed to that of Robertson & Starr in 1863. In 1865 the bank was nationalized as the Winnebago National. The institution has always been closely associated with the Robertson and Starr families. Officers of the Winnebago National have been William T. Robertson, president; Edward Lathrop, vice-president; Chandler Starr, cashier; Arthur Robertson, A. McGregor Huffman and Carroll H. Starr, assistant cashiers. The correspondents are the Hanover National of New York and the First, Continental and

The bank carries upon its published statements a large picture of an Indian chief, thereby emphasizing the fact that the bank bears one of the old historic Indian names of our country. It is indeed a fortunate matter if banks can seize upon such historic names and thereby assist in preserving our wealth of Indian and other historic memories.

Bank of Palmyra Fails

The Bank of Palmyra, a private institution, located in a town of the same name thirty miles southwest of Springfield, closed its doors Saturday, October 25th. The bank had capital of $10,000 and the liabilities are said to approximate $180,000.

Henry Hamilton, president of the State Bank of Girard, has been named receiver for the closed bank. The failure was due, according to L. P. Smith, president, to inability to collect on notes, mortgages and other accounts and to the short crop in the vicinity this season. The institution was owned by L. P. Smith, the president; C. F. Mahan, the cashier, John W. Duncan and Henry Horton. It is said that the bank will pay its depositors dollar for dollar, but it will be weeks before any settlement can be made as the liabilities of the bank are very heavy.

Illinois Notes

Hardy Dice, cashier of the Farmers State Bank of Veedersburg, Ind., was married a few days ago to Miss Onda Spencer of Neoga, Ill.

A copper cornice on the sixth floor of the Illinois National Bank building of Springfield was dislodged by workmen who were lowering an electric sign of the Marquette Life Insurance Company. Though the sign fell to the sidewalk at the busy hour of 2:30 in the afternoon no one happened to be struck by the falling cornice.

Tazewell county voters have voted, after one of the most spirited elections ever held in that county, to bond the county for $250,000 to build a new court house at Pekin.

The Sangamon County Farmers Congress desires a county soil adviser and wishes the supervisors to appropriate $5,000, which sum is now legal and authorized, toward the expenses of county soil improvement. William G. Eckhardt, soil expert of DeKalb county, the first to begin work in Illinois and who has addressed a number of bank association meetings, recently addressed the Sangamon County Farmers Congress on "A County Soil Adviser."

The Ridgely farms near Auburn, the last of the undivided estate of the late Charles Ridgely, well-known banker of Springfield, were sold at auction to members of the family. The lands comprised 1,495 acres and sold for approximately $160 an acre. Two farms were sold to Franklin Ridgely, one to Edward Ridgely and one to William Barrett Ridgely.

The second National of Monmouth has been awarded the entire city hall bond issue of that city at the figure of $49,065, which is but $935 below par. The bank was the highest of nine bidders. The Monmouth Trust and Savings Bank was second highest among the bidders. Six Chicago bond houses figured on this issue of bonds.

L. K. Evans, assistant cashier of the First National of El Paso, was elected treasurer of the Illinois Baptist Association at its recent convention held in Chicago.

Miss Mary Hannah Colegrove, a sister of John B. Colegrove, president of the bank of John B. Colegrove and Company of Taylorville, is dead.

L. A. Goddard, president of the State Bank of Chicago, was chosen grand treasurer of the Illinois grand lodge of Masons of Illinois at the recent grand lodge meeting held in Chicago. Mr. Goddard is one of the best known Masons in the state. Formerly he resided down-state and held many of the presiding chairs of the various Masonic bodies.

E. I. Fisher, formerly a banker at Homer, Champaign county, died Saturday, October 25th, at his home in Indianapolis. He was interested in various business enterprises in the Indiana capital, among them being the Capitol Paper Company.

The Building Association League of Illinois, which has just held its annual convention in Springfield, decided to meet next year in Moline. A most interesting program was presented to the building association men and the various financial problems of the work were discussed. Officers elected were: Mark D. Rider, Chicago, president; Albert Wachowski, Chicago, vice-president; O. W. Walkup, Galesburg, second vice-president; L. W. Sanborn, Galesburg, treasurer, and B. G. Vason, Quincy, secretary.

TWO STATE BANKS FOR PALMYRA

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 29th.—Following the failure last week of the Bank of Palmyra, a private institution, two state banks are to be organized at Palmyra, Ill. A permit for the First State Bank of Palmyra, which will take over the business of the Bank of Palmyra, was issued to-day to W. C. Martin, J. B. Duncan, C. S. Mahan, Henry Horton and R. D. Martin. The capital stock will be $25,000. A permit for another bank was issued to Allen Range, R. T. Ross and C. R. Van Winkle. The institution, which will be known as the People's State Bank of Palmyra, will be capitalized at $25,000. This bank was formerly the People's Bank, a private institution.

NEW GEORGIA BANK

The new Empire State, Atlanta, Ga., will take over the assets of the City Savings, which closed its doors on March 27th, according to L. F. McClelland, receiver. The new bank will be operated by an entirely new directorate. McClelland had planned to request the court's permission to pay a dividend to depositors in the City Savings, but this was abandoned when it was decided to reorganize. The Empire State will be operated by an entirely new directorate and with outside capital, it is said.

OHIO BANK CLOSED

The Crown City (Ohio) Bank was closed last week by order of state bank examiners, who claim the institution has not been making money. Depositors will probably be paid in full, but stockholders will lose.

WHAT "TAX FREE" MAY MEAN

W. S. Miller, attorney for the Northern Trust Company says: "If a corporation, having issued bonds with the tax-free clause, failed to pay the income tax, it would theoretically be subject to the penalties of a default."

NEW NEBRASKA BANK

The Elkhorn Valley Bank, Stanton, Neb., opened for business recently with a capital stock of $25,000. Charles McLeod is president; Erwin Nye, vice-president, and Frank Beebe, cashier.

The Traders National, Lowell, Mass., was closed last week by order of the comptroller of the currency.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

Small change in the money situation in Milwaukee was indicated by national bank returns to the call of the comptroller of the currency on October 21st. A steady, if slow, advance is shown since August, although the figures are still below the high point reached on June 4th of this year, when loans and deposits were about $1,500,000 larger than at the present time. Deposits have advanced $1,182,000 since August and loans increased $321,458. In terms of percentage loan and discount figures advanced about 1 per cent, deposits 2 per cent, cash resources 4 per cent, and total resources 2 per cent. Good deposit gains are shown by the First National, National Exchange, and Marine National.

"Business conditions are well up to normal," said the vice-president of one bank. "Trade is just as busy as usual at this season of the year. Bankers have loaned out their money at good returns and business men have nothing to complain of. The prospects for fall and winter trade are at least fair."

Discusses Currency Legislation

"Proposed Currency Legislation," was the subject of an address by Prof. W. A. Scott of the University of Wisconsin at the annual meeting of the Junior Bank Officers Association last Friday night. Officers elected are: President, A. W. Bogk; vice-president, G. B. Prentice; secretary-treasurer, J. M. Hays.

Pays Bet With Savings Account

Henry Winkler, deputy clerk of the office of the clerk of courts, who wagered $5 each with three friends that the Brewers would not win the pennant race, has taken the novel method of paying his bet by opening a savings account for each of the friends in a bank.

Dallas Bank Robbed

After cutting all telephone wires leading into the town, six yeggmen broke into the bank of Dallas, Barron county, Monday night and got away with $3,500 currency, making their escape in a waiting automobile. The gang appeared at Hillsdale Monday afternoon and approached the scene of the robbery on a handcar stolen at the former place. As soon as the wires had been cut, Carl Anderson, a lineman employed by the telephone company started out to locate the trouble. He encountered the gang, who bound and gagged him and left him a prisoner in the bank.

Group Five Elects

New officers of Group 5, W. B. A., elected at the meeting in LaCrosse last week are: President, H. L. D. Adkins, Elkhorn; vice-president, L. A. Nichols, Lake Geneva; secretary-treasurer, L. A. Anderson, Edgerton. The next meeting will be held at Rice Lake. The attendance at the group meeting reached the 100 mark on the second day. S. M. Smith of Janesville spoke on the new mutual burglary insurance company; Charles Hawkes of Horicon spoke on "The Bank Clerk;" A. J. Frame of Waukesha gave an effective report on the recent "Doings at Washington" regarding currency legislation; C. M. Host, Milwaukee, discussed taxation of bank stock, and E. L. Luther, Rhineland, reported on the activities of the association agricultural committee.

Wisconsin Notes

M. C. Clarke has been appointed cashier of the First National of Madison, succeeding the late Wayne Ramsey, and H. L. Mosley has been elected director to succeed his father, the late James E. Mosely. Mr. Clarke's promotion comes after sixty-three years continuous service, he having entered the bank's employ in 1860.

Returning this week from Washington, W. M. Wing, vice-president of the Batavian National of LaCrosse, declares that while there Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo assured him that the Owen-Glass currency bill would be amended to satisfy the demands of the country bankers. Mr. Wing condemned some of the attacks on the bill at the Boston convention as "hysterical" and doing more harm than good.

The Mount Hope State Bank has purchased the old postoffice site, and plans to erect a new building in the spring.

W. A. Stanton, Union City, Mich., who has been fighting the Farmers National of Union City, in circuit court, in an attempt to get his several thousands of dollars from the directors of the defunct institution, has succeeded in getting $6,934.28. Thomas Carpenter, cashier of the bank, is now serving a term of five years in Leavenworth for making false statements to the bank examiner.

¶ This Bank, being at the logical center of Wisconsin banking activity, and having an exceptional list of State and Foreign correspondents, offers its services to conservative Banks with the assurance that such a connection will be of mutual advantage.

NO NEW EASTERN TRUNK LINES

James J. Hill at the closing convention banquet of the Investment Bankers said: "There never will be another trunk line railroad between New York and Chicago. From Thirty-sixth Street to the Harlem River it would cost $200,000 a mile for the right-of-way alone, and no railroad could ever earn more than one-half of one per cent on the investment.

"Credit has been abused and the country is water-logged with bonds. If the present abuse of credit continues an abyss of possible suffering and financial distress opens before us."

FARNSWORTH ADDRESSES FARMING CONGRESS

Frederick E. Farnsworth of New York, general secretary of the American Bankers Association, told the dry farming congress at Tulsa, Okla., this week why the bankers are working with the farmers for the betterment of agriculture.

"The country banker," he said, "is interested in farming because of his close relation to it, the city banker because of his relation to the country bank, and all bankers are interested in agriculture because they realize it is the country's most fundamental and important industry.

"They know that the soil is the country's greatest bank and that their own banks are, as one man has put it, 'simply warehouses where the wealth that comes from the products of the soil is stored in the form of money and credit.'"

Mr. Farnsworth told of the activities of the various state bankers' associations in behalf of improved agricultural methods and of the satisfactory results which have been obtained as a result thereof.

"The motives of the bankers were sometimes questioned at first," said Mr. Farnsworth, "by those who failed to understand their relation to farming and the value of their business knowledge in developing it, but the results of their work have been so obviously worth while for all concerned that co-operation has dispelled criticism. The man who accuses the bankers of having 'something up their sleeves' is apt to be the man who would exhaust the soil fertility of his farm by short-sighted methods of cultivation, buy another, and repeat the process so long as money can be made from the increase of land prices due to a growing population, rather than to land values due to proper conservation. If prosperity is to be permanent, neither the banker nor the farmer can profit to himself alone, nor at the expense of industry as a whole.

"In working together in this agricultural movement, the bankers and the farmers have found the true nature of their personal and public relationships. Only when they have extended their mutual activities to national needs, of which their respective work is but a part, will they realize the full significance of such co-operation."

JOSEPH R. PARROTT DEAD

Joseph R. Parrott, a vice-president of the Florida National, Jacksonville, Fla., died at his summer camp in Oxford, Me., on October 13th. Mr. Parrott was born at Oxford in 1859 and removed to Florida in 1885. From 1885 to 1888 he was attorney for the Jacksonville, Tampa and Key West system, and general counsel for that road from 1888 to 1892. He became vice-president of the Florida East Coast Railway in 1892 and later became its president. Mr. Parrott was prominently identified with the business interests of his community and was largely interested in the formation of the first public library in Jacksonville. His death came as a distinct shock to his many friends throughout the entire country.

OFFICIALS OF BANK PAY LOSSES

The officials of the defunct Bank of Sturgis, Sturgis, Miss., from the president down to some of the directors, last week mortgaged their lands and homes for the purpose of paying every cent indebted to the depositors. The case was settled by an agreed judgment in favor of H. P. Castles, receiver of the bank, for $15,750, which was paid over to the attorney for the receiver. The case involved no charges of embezzlement or moral turpitude against any of the officers or directors, but was based entirely upon heavy losses resulting from mismanagement and inexperience. The Bank of Sturgis was organized about six years ago with a capital stock of $15,000. All the creditors and depositors will be paid in full, or approximately so.

The Bi-Metallic Bank of Colome, S. D., has amended its charter to raise the capital stock of the institution from $5,000 to $10,000.

"JOKER" IN STATE BANK LAW

Attorney Frank E. Shaw of Grand Rapids, Mich., says he has detected a joker in a Michigan banking law that has existed for nearly three years. The "joker" exists in the Public Acts of 1913, No. 129, an act to amend Act No. 205, Public Acts of 1887 as amended. In drawing up the section regulating the capital stock of banks to be organized, the legislators ordained that in cities having not less than 110,000 inhabitants the capital stock should be $100,000 and in cities having over 110,000, the stock would be $250,000. In a city or village the population of which does not exceed 20,000 inhabitants it is provided that the capital stock shall not be less than $100,000. Thus, all banks established in cities having upward of 20,000 inhabitants must be capitalized at not less than $250,000 because the $100,000 provision applies only to cities having not less than 110,000 inhabitants.

REWARD OFFERED FOR BANK ROBBERIES

Rewards totaling $3,500 have been offered for the arrest and conviction of the men who broke into the Addison State Bank at Addison, Ill., shot and killed Edward Rotermund, assistant cashier, and escaped with approximately $100.

H. E. Otte, vice-president of the National City Bank, Chicago, will on Friday, November 7th, deliver an address to the members of the Coles County Bankers Federation on the subject, "Currency Legislation." The meeting will be held in Mattoon and will be followed by a banquet at Hotel Byers.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

The good condition of St. Louis banks and their abundant reserves, despite the fact that the crop moving period is at its height, were revealed last week by the call of the comptroller of the currency for statements of condition at the close of business October 21st. Figures of the thirteen largest banks and trust companies indicate that since the last previous call on August 9th the cash and exchange items of these banks have increased by more than $9,000,000. Deposits have grown by more than $4,500,000 and there has been a contraction of loans amounting to about $4,250,000. The total cash and exchange of the thirteen largest banks on October 21st amounted to $93,341,128; deposits, $248,604,247; loans and discounts, $188,341,218 as against $192,560,273, a contraction of $4,219,055. The total resources of the banks aggregated $339,377,611 as compared with total resources of $336,489,286 in August. St. Louis bankers believe that the action of the government in assigning $3,500,000 of its crop moving fund to St. Louis institutions helped to make the good showing. The banks included in the above summing up are the National Bank of Commerce, Third National, Mechanics-American National, St. Louis Union Trust, Mercantile Trust, Mercantile National, Merchants-Laclede National, Boatmens Bank, State National, German Savings Institution, Mississippi Valley Trust, Central National and Commonwealth Trust.

C. H. McMillan Resigns

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Mercantile Trust last week, C. H. McMillan, vice-president, resigned to be effective to-day. Mr. McMillan intends to rest awhile and take a trip around the world. He had been connected with the trust company since its organization in 1899 and was secretary until about four years ago when he was elected a vice-president. His duties have been largely in connection with the company's real estate business.

New York Company Sues St. Louis Bank

The Equitable Trust of New York is suing the National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis, for $150,000, which it alleges is the balance due on a loan of $250,000 indebtedness which was secured by stock of the Iola Portland Cement Company. The money was borrowed, according to the bank's answer, not by the institution itself, but by a depositor who wished to finance the Iola Portland Cement Company. The money was to have been used for the purchase of the common stock. The original note was held by the Bowling Green Trust of New York, of which the Equitable Trust is the successor.

Earnings of Laclede Gas on Increase

A report of the earnings of the Laclede Gas Light Company for the nine months ended September 30, 1913, shows an increase in nearly every branch. The gross earnings for 1913 were $3,299,600.52, an increase of $74,867.21 over the gross of 1912, which were $3,224,733.31. Operating expenses, including maintenance and taxes, were $1,616,438.28, an increase of $30,576.91 over the figures of the preceding year. The net income was $1,683,162.24, against $1,638,871.94 for the year before. An increase of $5,292.39 is shown in depreciation figures, the amount for 1912 being $193,228.61, while for the period of 1913 it was $198,431. The net earnings of the present period were $1,484,731.24, as against $1,445,643.33 for the same period last year. Interest and preferred dividends amounted to $880,- 346.35, against $850,927.01 for last year. Net for common stock was $604,384.89, giving a per cent of 5.65 on common, against a common net last year of $594,716.32, with a per cent of 5.56. The total assets and liabilities are given as $36,520,711.96, an increase of $779,448.55 over the corresponding period last year.

County Bankers Meet in Joplin

Members of the Jasper County Bankers Association, at a joint meeting with the Joplin Clearing House Association in Joplin recently, discussed the new currency bill in its present form. Those who took prominent parts in the discussion were A. H. Waite, president of the Joplin National; J. A. Cragin, president of the First National, Joplin; William Houk, president of the Conqueror Trust, Joplin; Joseph E. Garm, cashier of the Joplin National and president of the Joplin Clearing House Association. It was the consensus of opinion that if proposed amendments to the bill are made the measure would be given the endorsement of the bankers of southwest Missouri.

Firm Carries $250,000 on Banker

E. C. Stinde, a special agent of the Northwestern Mutual, last week wrote a $100,000 corporation insurance policy for J. E. Franklin, president of the Bankers Trust, St. Louis, completing $250,000 on his life. The company is to be the beneficiary. This is said to be the first time a St. Louis banking institution has taken out corporation insurance on its chief.

Ozark Bankers Meet

A conference of Ozark bankers, business men and officials of the Frisco development department, was held in Springfield recently to perfect arrangements to induce farmers in middle western states to settle in southern Missouri. It was decided to send representatives into Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota, and Illinois for the purpose of inducing farmers to locate in that part of Missouri.

President Freeman gave as the cause of the discontinuance insufficient deposits to effect a revenue. Every depositor will be reimbursed to the full amount of his account. The Drovers Bank was organized about two years ago and was capitalized at $25,000.

Group Ten, Missouri Bankers Association, will meet at Lamar November 14th.

Warrants were issued on Saturday of last week against John Cunningham, president of the Old Pemiscot County Bank, Caruthersville; Frank Cunningham, vice-president; A. C. Tindle, cashier, and S. P. Reynolds, director, on information charging them with having received deposits when the bank was insolvent. All have been arrested except Tindle, who is in Youngstown, Ohio. The men, with J. S. Wahl, were directors in the bank when it failed. The informations, in eleven counts, allege the directors received certain deposits while knowing the bank was about to fail. The accused officials said in defense that at the time the deposits were alleged to have been received the deputy bank commissioner was present and that he advised them to receive the money, that all the money was repaid shortly afterward to the persons making the deposits. In May the Pemiscot County Bank, capitalized at $75,000, was found to be in a serious condition. It was alleged that the cashier was short and the institution was closed. Tindle, the cashier, turned over all his property to J. A. Cunningham as trustee for the bank officials, the proceeds to be used in returning the missing funds as far as possible. The officials supplied funds for the payment of the depositors and a run on the bank was avoided. In July Tindle was arrested on seventeen indictments and placed under $8,500 bonds.

President David Schmid of the St. Louis County Bank, Clayton, returned recently from a four months' trip to Germany. Mr. Schmid was greatly benefited by his stay at the famous watering places in the Fatherland.

James Heyle of Rockville has accepted the position of assistant cashier of the Montrose Savings Bank. He is a son of W. E. Heyle, cashier of the Bank of Rockville.

The interior of the banking house of J. S. Hughes & Co., Richmond, is undergoing some extensive improvements.

State to Sue Bank Owners

The Oklahoma state banking department is preparing to bring suit against former stockholders in the Columbia Bank and Trust Company, Oklahoma City, on the liability provisions of the laws in an effort to reimburse the guaranty fund for its loss in the bank's failure. The fund still is out $600,000 because of the failure. It has been four years since the trust company failed. The guaranty fund has $15,000 on hand and more than $600,000 outstanding warrants against the fund.

Texas Banks

A statement published by Commissioner of Insurance and Banking Collier of Texas shows that there are now 809 state banks and trust companies in operation, the total capital stock, $31,879,500; total assets, $133,546,900; surplus, $6,352,750; undivided profits, $3,578,700; deposits, $91,735,950. The total liabilities, excluding capital stock, surplus and profits, is $91,735,950. The average ratio of capital stock and surplus to liabilities is 41.6 per cent. The statement shows there are 444 state banks with capital stock of less than $25,000 and the total liabilities, excluding capital stock, surplus and profits, $20,363,390; total assets, $28,194,900.

There are 118 banks with capital of $25,000; sixty-seven of over $25,000 capital and less than $50,000; ninety with capital of $50,000; twenty-five with capital of more than $50,000 and less than $100,000; sixty with capital of $100,000 to $500,000 and five with more than $500,000 capital.

AN ALLY OR A RIVAL

The second annual convention of the Investment Bankers of America has been not only a revelation to the skeptical but a complete vindication of its founders as to whether or not there is a field for such an organization. The "Blue Sky" epidemic gave point and emphasis to the work of the association from the outstart. It was good fortune to find such a virile issue at the very beginning and banking interests were well served that the wave of restrictive legislation was effectively and vigilantly contested. What organization of size and importance is there that so surely won its spurs in the first year of its existence?

Without reflection upon the past efforts of any in the convention field, it is doubted honestly if a more successful program ever has been offered to the financial interests of the country than that of the Chicago convention, held this week. There were no transgressions upon the currency question at the formal sessions. Two eminent bankers, representative of eastern and western sentiment, did discuss the issue at the banquet. This was a tasteful, tactful disposition of the whole subject which was so effectively disposed of at Boston by the American Bankers Association. In the main the papers treating of investment banking problems were in the hands of experts who made them of general as well as special and technical interest. The entertainment features were of a high order. Two banquets, one general and one by the board of governors, were outstanding events on the social side. The theater party and the tour of the parks gave variety to the splendid week of social amenities.

The association has been particularly fortunate in its official staff. Unity of action has been its religion. No individual does things, but always it is the association, which has aroused a degree of loyalty and affection in the membership and in the worker's ranks, quite rare indeed. The beginnings of the association were quite modest. Timidly they who read the future needs of the craft knocked at the door of the American Bankers Association asking that it create a section to care for the investment banking houses and the growing bond departments of the member banks of the organization. The request came unfortunately at a time when constitutional revision and a "taming of the sections" were being agitated in the big association. Some of the radicals made a noise about "new sections, etc.," and the investment bankers' proposals were postponed. Some were afraid that it would "let in" undesirable promotional enterprises and thus drag the ermine of the parent association in the dust of advertising and adventurous projects. Were they downcast? Not in the slightest degree. They believed in their course and organized an association truly a world beater for the period of its incubation. It has been kept clean, with most unusual success. Admissions have been guarded more carefully than in the early days of most other associations. Its methods of work are open, legal and fair. Its activity has been in essentials only and not for "glory." Its spurs have been won. Probably it never again will ask admission as a section of the A. B. A., but it could be invited in with that fine spirit which the older association always has shown toward allied institutions. The income tax situation alone would make of the I. B. A. an able and industrious, if not indispensable, division. Membership, power and initiative are the qualities which it would bring. Is it to be an ally or a rival?

CONTINUATION SCHOOLS IN GERMANY

All America is interested in the future of her boys. Germany has gone further in looking after hers however. Her continuation schools are one of the advance posts of the age. The U. S. government has issued through her bureau of education a bulletin on "Prussian Continuation Schools," drawing upon consul reports for the information. In Magdeburg boys completing the common school are assisted by the school authorities in securing desirable situations, and are required to attend the continuation schools while employed. There are classes for bakers, butchers, barbers, waiters, painters, decorators, blacksmiths, tailors, cabinetmakers, and in fact, for any other occupation in which it is practicable for a boy to engage. Even if the boy does not aspire to be a skilled workman, but is content to become a street cleaner, house servant, messenger, or to engage in any other form of unskilled labor, he is nevertheless required to spend three years in the continuation school. In Erfurt and other Prussian cities employers are compelled by law to excuse their employees for the lesson hours without loss of pay, for four to six hours a week. Furthermore, the employers pay the tuition fees in these industrial schools, amounting to about $1.50 per year for an apprentice or $1 for unskilled workers. The main financial burden is met by the municipality, with some aid from the state. The state makes its appropriation contingent upon compulsory attendance, with the result that compulsory continuation schools are gradually replacing the optional type. Barmen has a continuation school with an attendance of nearly four thousand. The pupils are divided into 131 classes. There are classes in textiles, lace making, machine-tool making, art forging, plumbing, electric installation, furniture and weaving loom making, house carpentry, house painting and decorating, shoe-making, saddlery, upholstery, tailoring, gardening, printing, bookbinding and book making, lithographing and engraving, baking and candy making, as well as for butchers, barbers, wig makers, messengers, and helpers. Instruction in these continuation schools is by no means confined to technical branches. Besides definite vocational training, the pupils receive instruction in certain branches designed to aid them as citizens—civic affairs, trade history, and community welfare—in addition to composition and arithmetic based chiefly on the vocational work. Numerous attempts have been made to adopt trade or continuation schools here. Interference has been partly trades union and denominational but always effective. To many minds modern continuation schools and improved farming methods are the confronting problems in the further progress of American civilization.

DANGER IN HOLDING FREE STOCK

In some states and as late as 1912 bankers and other influential men have been "quietly" accepting free or bonus stocks for the use of their names. The promoter handed out the shares for the use of influential names to induce legitimate sales for cash. Many of the corporations so floated were of the New Jersey type, but the custom is to disappear. Prospective free stockholders under even the liberal laws of New Jersey have received a solemn warning from Chancellor Walker, and in the future will have to be more circumspect when subscribing to new stock or allowing their names to be placed in a stockholders' list for purposes of assisting the sale of the stock. The court of errors and appeals has practically made the new ruling into law, and henceforth any stockholder who holds unpaid shares in a New Jersey company that goes into bankruptcy can be made to pay the entire amount of par value of his stock to the creditors of the company. The ruling was made to stop the practice of promoters of getting the names of prominent men for use in selling stocks. The decision will get into the courts of all states by precedent, and it hereafter will be well to avoid unpaid shares no matter how plausible the promoter may be.

Group Six, Kansas Bankers Association, will meet at Liberal on November 20th. C. E. Woods is chairman of the group and Frank Summers, secretary.

MY BOY AND I

Mrs. Christine Terhune Herrick has written a book for mothers—for mothers of girls as well as boys. It is a timely and interesting book on a deeply important subject. At the present time when Women's Clubs, Mothers' Associations, etc. are so deeply interested in the problem of the home and the children, this little book, a comparatively personal narrative, by a well-known American authoress, should have a wide appeal.

The problems and perplexities that confront the average mother of sons and daughters in this complex age are enough to daunt the most painstaking and careful parent. Mrs. Herrick is too well known to need an introduction to the average American mother, and anything she has to say on a subject of this nature will assuredly be listened to with a great deal of pleasure and profit.

A careful reading of this book cannot fail to be of great assistance and value to all parents, guardians, teachers, and others who have to do with the bringing up of boys and girls. The volume sells at one dollar at all book stores. The publishers are Dana Estes & Co., Boston.

OMAHA CHAPTER ELECTION

The first annual meeting of the Omaha Chapter, American Institute of Banking, was held recently. J. B. Owen of the Stock Yards National, South Omaha, was elected president; F. W. Thomas, Live Stock National, South Omaha, vice-president; W. H. Dressler, City National, Omaha, secretary, and W. O. Liljentalpe of the United States National, Omaha, treasurer. Second prize was won by Mr. Brown of the United States National. The first prize on the Burroughs machine was won by Mr. Schlecht of the United States National, his time being four minutes and twenty-three seconds; the second prize by Mr. Moore of the Omaha National. The contest was for both speed and accuracy.

This committee was authorized at the last meeting of the bankers association. The agricultural committee also will co-operate with this special committee and the farmers.

BUY MORE LIVE STOCK

Forage in silos to be good security for Kansas farmers upon which to borrow money from Kansas banks, to restock not only farms with cattle, but to buy more live stock, is the proposition which Charles M. Sawyer, state bank commissioner of Kansas, is going to put up to the county bankers' associations throughout the state. It is Mr. Sawyer's idea that if a farmer will provide forage for stock he won't have trouble to get money with which to buy cattle.

"That the silo is necessary for the raising of cattle as insurance against droughty and crop destroying season is an idea that this summer has thoroughly proven," said Mr. Sawyer. Along with that, where needed, is the building of ponds to conserve the rainfall. Kansas needs more cattle. The banks will be ready to help farmers in restocking and enlarging the number." Mr. Sawyer said that this matter would be taken up with every county bankers association in Kansas and he believed that the plan would make Kansas the cattle state it should be five years sooner than if left to work itself out. "Kansas farmers should not depend wholly on one type of farming, the one-crop idea," said Mr. Sawyer. "If his crops fail and he has cattle, he is assured of a living. There won't be any trouble on that score. What he must do is to provide certain feed for his cattle, and he can do that easily and successfully by growing and conserving forage in silos. He is sure of feed for his cattle, can keep them through bad seasons and fatten them the same way as if the season was good. He won't have to sell them at a time when he doesn't want to if he adopts the forage-silo plan. I believe that this is the solution of the cattle supply of Kansas."

BANK OF IRONWOOD DIVIDEND

A dividend of 10 per cent was paid to the creditors of the estate of Fritz Karste, Bank of Ironwood, on Wednesday of last week. The disbursement was made from the proceeds of the sale of the bank building, from funds turned over to W. S. Baird, the administrator, and from money collected by Mr. Baird from debtors of the estate. The total disbursement amounted to $44,000. This is the first dividend that the estate has paid since the closing of the Bank of Ironwood on May 28, 1912.

Charles Stuart Miller, cashier of the Drivers and Mechanics Bank, Baltimore, died recently. Mr. Miller was fifty-six years old and had been a cashier of the bank's force since he was a youth of eighteen, when the institution was founded.

Cleveland

Central States News Letter

Cincinnati

Deposits in all Cleveland banks during the period from November 10, 1912, to October 21st, this year, have increased more than $23,000,000. In the same time deposits in Cleveland savings banks and trust companies have risen more than $19,000,000. Total deposits in these institutions are approximately $316,000,000. There are twenty-four savings banks and trust companies and seven national banks in operation within the limits of Cleveland. This is an increase of one, the First Trust and Savings Company, begun only last spring and already with deposits of $4,109,793. From August 1st to October 25th, or less than three months, 148 corporations for profit have organized with headquarters in Cleveland. In all Ohio for the same period 459 companies for profit were formed, so that the Cleveland total is about one-third of that of the whole state. In this period thirty-eight companies were formed in Cleveland to do manufacturing. Thirty-five corporations of all kinds have increased their capital stock, thereby enlarging their facilities for doing business by construction of new buildings, increase in stocks of merchandise or merely enhancing their financial ability.

To Sell U. S. Bonds Free of Charge

An over-the-counter system of selling government bonds to individual investors, advanced by Albert W. Atwood in Harpers Weekly, as a means of fixing their actual worth, has been approved by Cleveland bankers. Col. J. J. Sullivan, president of the Central National, has declared his willingness to serve as selling agent without commission or cost to buyers. The bankers believe that the enactment of the Owen-Glass currency bill, pending in congress, will cause readjustment of government bond values. It provides for the retirement of the present national bank note circulation and the redemption in 20 annual 5 per cent installments of about $720,000,000 government 2s held by banks as security for their circulation. In exchange for the government 2s, banks will be given 20-year 3s, which will not have the "circulation" privilege. The new note circulation will be issued by the federal reserve bank. "Many bankers fear enactment of the Owen-Glass bill will suddenly depress bond values," said Mr. Sullivan. "No actual loss will be sustained unless investors rush to sell when the banks' holdings are thrown on the market."

Private Bank Resources

The total resources of the 213 private banks in Ohio are $45,615,930.07, according to the statement issued recently by the state banking department. This report, which is the first ever published, showing completely the condition of the privately owned banks, gives the assets and liabilities of each. Of the total resources, $7,796,000 is loaned on real estate and $3,368,641 on collateral. Another item among the resources is that of private loans, amounting to $18,887,244, not included in other loans. The statement as issued shows: Assets—overdrafts, $713,973; state county and municipal bonds, $1,214,000; other bonds and securities, $1,931,000; banking houses, furniture and fixtures, $985,000; other real estate loans, $1,051,000; due from other than reserve banks, $796,401; cash items, $202,126; due from reserve banks, $6,514,849; cash, $1,804,331. This shows a reserve of cash and in reserve banks of upwards of 20 per cent of the deposits. On the liability side the following items are found: Capital stock paid in, $2,589,607; surplus fund, $1,553,- 086; undivided net profits, $754,892; deposits, $39,584,768; notes rediscounted, $134,000; borrowed money, $278,000.

Bid for Bank Building

There was no sale of the Columbus Savings and Trust Company building on Thursday of last week, the time appointed for such transaction by Judge E. B. Kinkead. When the hearing opened, the depositors' committee put in a bid of $642,000, which was $1,000 higher than that of T. C. Willard, a Cleveland real estate operator. The court, however, was not prepared to close the sale until Judge Kinkead had satisfied himself that the plan of the depositors was a feasible one and that all the signatures to pledges presented by the committee were bona fide and represented actual claims against the bank. He will take the matter under advisement. After the depositors had left, the Willard bid was increased $1,000, equaling that of the depositors. The depositors at a meeting the day before unanimously voted down a resolution holding the committee to a bid of not more than $700,000 and instructed the committee to go to the limit in bidding for the building.

Ohio Bank Closed

Another case of the failure of a state bank which had made heavy loans to stockholders was reported by State Superintendent of Banks and Banking S. W. Lattanner, when he announced last week that the Crown City Bank, Crown City, had been closed. W. B. Rogers of Washington Court House was appointed special deputy to liquidate the bank. When it closed the bank deposits were about $45,000 and its cash on hand only about $1,100, with a small amount in other banks. The reserve was only about half of the 15 per cent required by law. The bank's losses are said to be due to promotion enterprises in which it assisted. The capital is $25,000 and the surplus and profits about $1,100. Loans will amount to between $25,000 and $35,000. The depositors, it is said, will be paid in full. W. J. Murray is president; S. W. Williams, vice-president, and S. W. Collins, cashier. The bank was organized in 1910.

Ohio Notes

At a meeting of the directors of the Second National, Warren, S. C. Iddings, who for many years has been cashier, was elected president to succeed the late Chas. A. Harrington, and E. J. Boyd, who was assistant cashier, was appointed cashier.

James N. Wolfinger, former cashier of the Cuyahoga Falls Savings Bank, from which he is alleged to have embezzled $1,200, last week was sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary and later paroled. Wolfinger has paid back the money which he was alleged to have taken from the bank. The attorney for the defense gave as the reason for Wolfinger's wrongdoings his desire to maintain a standing in the community which was impossible on the salary which he received. He was with the Cuyahoga Falls bank for five years, and then resigned and went to Cleveland, where he was employed as an automobile salesman. It was there that he was arrested when bank examiners found a shortage.

D. F. Griffith has been elected president of the Orville Savings Bank to succeed the late S. M. Brenneman. The office of the vice-president, vacated by Mr. Griffith, will be left vacant until the annual meeting.

Maryland Banks Merge

The National Cecil Bank of Port Deposit, Md., was organized last week with $50,000 capital. S. C. Rowland was elected president; W. W. Hopkins, vice-president, and J. T. C. Hopkins, Jr., cashier. The directors are, besides the officers, J. B. Ramsey, R. P. McClenahan, E. V. Stockham, E. H. Rowland, M. Acker, W. H. Cole, Jr., R. K. Rawlings and John P. Kimble. The bank, which succeeds the Cecil National and the National Bank of Port Deposit, opened for business to-day.

New Pennsylvania Bank

The Shenango Valley Building and Loan Association, Sharon, Pa., was organized last week. Francis E. Norris was elected president; John Fitzpatrick and J. G. Marshall, vice-presidents; Chester Lewis, secretary, and F. S. Fish, treasurer. The directors are F. E. Norris, John Fitzpatrick, Joseph Goldberger, Mark Speizer, A. W. Phillips, J. B. Roux, D. J. Lewis, Chester Lewis, J. G. Marshall, F. S. Fish, August Mann.

The articles provide that the Marion County State shall act as trustee.

Floyd E. Davis, president of the Lincoln National, Washington, D. C., said last week, in reference to a reported merger between the Lincoln National and the National Bank of Washington, that a proposition to such an end had been submitted by officers of the National Bank of Washington, but that it had been declined.

Building operations on a big addition to the National Savings and Trust building, Washington, D. C., will be begun about January 15th. The addition will be five stories in height and will cost more than $300,000.

Andrew J. Conlon, one of the founders and for many years president of the Border State Savings Bank, Baltimore, Md., died last week of heart disease.

It has been announced that the Backus Bank, Pottsville, Mich., will make the first payment to depositors not later than December 15th.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by F. C. Redmond

Minneapolis banks, in response to the call of the comptroller of the currency, surpassed every previous record in both commercial and savings bank figures. The combined deposits on October 21st were $119,832,821, an increase of $12,054,106 over the deposits on the date of the last call, August 9th, when the total was $107,778,715.42. Compared with the call of nearest date last year, which came November 26, 1912, at which time the former high record of $115,938,318.79 was reached, last week's showing represents a gain of $3,894,503. All the state and national banks have big reserves, well above the legal requirement. The Northwestern National has deposits of $29,498,481.17 and a cash reserve of $10,973,609.84; the First National, deposits of $26,407,830.31; cash reserve, $12,797,416.45; Security National, deposits, $21,105,531.84, cash reserve, $8,864,877.61. The proportion of the legal reserve shows approximately 42 per cent of assets of the three larger banks promptly available, against a requirement of only 25 per cent. The four Minneapolis savings banks show a gain of $653,134.96 in the period from August 9th to October 21st. In loans and discounts the banks of Minneapolis show totals of $68,065,360.67 compared with $63,625,369.30 in the August call, a gain of $4,439,991.37; and compared with the $67,490,505.57 of November 26, 1912, the increase in loans and discounts is $574,855.10.

Record Gain in St. Paul Banks

The best bank statement in the history of St. Paul was made last week. Deposits in the four national banks and the Scandinavian-

American Bank aggregated $56,740,573.54, a gain of $8,448,119.42 over those of August 9th, the last call. This is the first time the deposits in these institutions have exceeded $50,000,000. It is estimated that the trust companies, savings banks, insurance companies and other institutions have $25,000,000 more, which makes St. Paul deposits about $80,000,000. E. H. Bailey, president of the First National, St. Paul, said last week that St. Paul, situated in the heart of a rich producing section, is one of the most prosperous cities in the Union to-day. "It has been a very good year," said Mr. Bailey, "and things should continue to be prosperous here. The farmers had a very fair crop and are getting fair prices for their products. There is a tendency to hold back wheat, but it is not serious."

Start Razing of National German-American

The razing of the old National German-American Bank, St. Paul, was begun on Monday, and its destruction will mark the passing of St. Paul's skyscraper of thirty years ago. The building will give way to the Merchants National Bank building, which will be started as soon as the debris is out of the way. Donald S. Culver, president of the Merchants National, which was merged with the National German-American a year ago, says that the new structure will be ready for occupancy about January 1, 1915.

St. Paul Chapter Holds Banquet

St. Paul Chapter of the American Institute of Banking held its first dinner and meeting of the season Tuesday at the Commercial Club. Kelsey Chase, state superintendent of banking, gave an address on "Country Bank Examinations," and E. O. Nordstrom, president of the chapter, gave a short talk on the work of the club and some of the plans proposed for the future. L. C. Hodgson also spoke. The St. Paul Chapter has about one hundred fifty members.

Third Dividend From Defunct Bank

The third dividend of 20 per cent will be paid to the depositors of the defunct State Bank of Commerce, Winnebago, Minn., within a week or two, according to M. C. Dalton, the special bank examiner, who is winding up the affairs of the bank. This will make 60 per cent in all, and it is thought that at least 10 per cent more will be realized, as the stockholders' liability has yet to be collected. Harry Parker, the vice-president of the bank, who is blamed for the failure, is serving a term in Stillwater prison.

Ely Bank Opens in New Building

The First National of Ely, Minn., began business in its new building last week. The new building is of brick construction and cost about $13,000. The interior is finished in dark oak. This is the oldest financial institution in Ely and has over $450,000 in deposits. L. J. White is cashier.

Austin Bank in New Hands

The controlling interest in the stock of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Austin, Minn., has passed to an Iowa syndicate. The purchasers are J. F. Koch, president of the Citizens Bank of St. Ansgar, Iowa; O. H. Koch, St. Ansgar; R. F. Dorow and K. J. Johnson of Osage, Iowa; C. H. Niller, St. Ansgar, and H. L. Brandt, Springfield, Iowa; H. W. Hurlbut, Al M. Smith and Alex S. Campbell of Austin have retained a portion of their stock. The new officers are: President, D. H. Koch; vice-presidents, R. F. Dorow, A. S. Campbell; cashier, Al M. Smith; assistant cashier, H. L. Brandt; other directors, J. F. Koch, C. H. Miller, H. W. Hurlbut. The capital has been left at $25,000.

North Dakota Bank Reopened

Under a plan of reorganization effected Saturday of last week the Savings Deposit Bank of Minot, N. D., was reopened Monday, after being closed a week by order of the state bank examiner. Officers and directors of the Second National brought about the reorganization, with James Johnson as president, succeeding Grant Youmans. The demand for deposits on Monday was light, the depositors being satisfied with the new arrangement. No losses will result to depositors and the plan is approved by the state banking board.

New Bank Building for Bismarck

Bismarck will have one of the finest banking institutions in the West when the new building for the First National, which is under course of construction, is completed. Early in the summer the lower floor of the present building was torn out, together with the drug store building next door to the bank, making the bank about twice the size it was formerly. The new fixtures are being placed and consist largely of large marble slabs. Col. C. B. Little is the president.

Six New South Dakota Banks

Six new state banks were authorized to do business by the South Dakota banking department last week. They are: Bank of Newington; Peoples State, New Effington; Farmers Security State and First International, Rosholt; Claire City Bank, Claire City; Farmers State at Veblen. These banks are along the line of a new railroad from Fairbault to Veblen and are in a well settled and prosperous portion of the state. The new road within three miles of completion and the towns laid out along the line are in a booming condition. Farmers all have their granaries full of grain and are waiting for the completion of the road to place their crops on the market.

Pipestone, Minn., on November 15th will offer $5,000 worth of sewer bonds to citizens by public subscription. The bonds will be issued in the amount of $100 each and will run for a term of ten years, bearing interest at a rate of 5 per cent.

St. Cloud, Minn., banks, in response to the call of the comptroller of the currency last week, showed deposits of $3,233,312.95. This against $2,779,167.34 a year ago, a gain of $454,145.61 and a gain of approximately $175,000 over the deposits of three months ago.

A bank is being organized at Lawlor, Minn., with J. C. Hallam of Minneapolis and O. C. Hall and Mr. Ligard of Northfield, to be capitalized at $12,000. Mr. Ligard will be the cashier.

Arthur Henkelman of the Market State of Minneapolis has gone to Krem, N. D., to take position as assistant cashier in a branch of the Market State established there.

Transit Department of the Northern Trust Company, Fargo, N. D., showing Burroughs Transit Machine in use. This machine saves more than half the time required to write transit letters numerically, and more than 75 per cent of the time required to even abbreviate them in the old way

77-4

Northern Trust Co., Fargo, N.D.

It takes two seconds to write Northern Trust Company, Fargo, North Dakota, numerically, on the Burroughs Transit Machine.

It takes more than four times that long to write the same name and address on a typewriter, numerically.

The A. B. A. has given every bank and trust company in the United States a numerical name, and the saving shown above applies to every name.

Touching the tops of six keys on a Burroughs Transit Machine writes the longest numerical bank name and address in the United States.

The system reduces the number of characters to be written by shortening every name and address to a "numerical designation" of not over six figures. The machine entirely eliminates the necessity of writing spaces and ciphers.

For instance, instead of writing Farmers State Bank, Morocco, Indiana, or an abbreviation, The Northern Trust Company writes "71-600"—the transit operator touches the tops of only three keys, the ciphers printing automatically.

The average transit item contains about 74 letters, figures, and spaces. It can be written numerically on a Burroughs Transit Machine with an average of from four to twelve motions.

Just figure the time you could save on the above basis, in your own bank on a dozen average items. Then apply the same saving to all your transit work. The saving will pay big dividends on the cost of a machine and will leave the machine available part of the time for any other kind of work.

Let us send a man to explain to you how banks are saving time and money writing transit letters. No cost or obligation.

Snidow as vice-president, the latter having disposed of his interest in the bank and moved to Missouri to make his home. Mr. Dove relieves Edwin Smith, cashier for a number of years, who resigns to become assistant cashier of a bank in Georgia of which his father is president.

A bank at Stanchfield, Minn., is contemplated. John Engberg of Cambridge is named as the cashier.

C. L. Hanson, cashier of the First National, Thief River Falls, Minn., who for some time has been mentioned for the senate, has consented to become a candidate.

The First National, Williston, N. D., has moved into permanent banking rooms. These rooms, which were occupied by the Citizens National before the consolidation, have been entirely remodeled in the interior and an addition built on the rear.

J. Ulland, president of the Fergus Falls (N. D.) National, and G. L. Strobeck of Delamere have purchased the Cogswell (N. D.) State. Mr. Ulland will be president and Mr. Strobeck will be vice-president and resident manager. H. E. Shearn, the cashier, will retain his stock and will remain in his former position.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the Citizens State of Bloomingdale, S. D., with a capital of $10,000. The incorporators are Frank Manlove, H. T. Robinson, W. S. Robinson, all of Vermilion.

Des Moines, October 30.—An important ruling involving the First National of Gladbrook has been handed down by the acting comptroller of the currency at Washington. The bank refused to give the list of its stockholders to the county assessor. A special attorney was named by the county in which Gladbrook is located and he took the case up with the comptroller. The latter held that the county was in the right and that the bank should not decline to give up the information. The comptroller will furnish the information for the current year and for past years as well.

Honesty of Des Moines People Proven

Des Moines bankers are laughing over an experience of an out-of-town financier who drove into the city in his automobile a few days ago to get some currency. He secured $2,500 and placed it in a bag. He then tossed the bag into the bottom of his machine. After dinner it was decided to remain over for the theater. Accordingly the banker took in a show, and not until after the performance did it occur to him that the $2,500 in the sack had not been removed from the machine. Of course he made haste to get to his car and discovered the money undisturbed. Which goes to show that people in Des Moines are honest.

Deposits Decline

Bank deposits fell off somewhat as shown by the October statement of the Clearing House Association, comparing the figures with those for September. The deposits for September were $32,113,691 and the October showing was $30,936,046, a decline of $1,177,000. Bankers say that the falling off is to be expected at this time of the year. One banker advances the theory that the purchase of winter clothing and supplies is to a certain extent responsible for the showing.

Fraud Alleged in Connection with Stock Sale

Arthur Reynolds has filed a suit in the district court at Des Moines in which he asks $40,000 damages from Mrs. L. C. Rawson, Wilmot Harbach, her son-in-law, and Albert M. Johnson, president of the National Life of the U. S. A. at Chicago. Mr. Reynolds held fifty shares of stock in the Des Moines Life Insurance Company, which was taken over by the Chicago company some months ago. He parted with the stock for $200 per share upon representations which, he says, were not in accordance with the facts, and the defendants sold it for $1,000 per share. Mr. Reynolds says he should have had $50,000 instead of $10,000 for his stock. Other suits have been filed by other stockholders setting up similar conditions.

One of the daughters, the wife of Roy White, formerly a well-known state university athlete, was in the Philippines at the time of her father's demise.

Iowa Notes

The Boone State at Boone is being rapidly put in shape for business. Tile floors are being laid and arrangements will shortly be made for the location of the various offices, desks, etc. It is stated that the structure is going to be a distinct credit to Boone.

Howard Snyder, a director in the First National at Mount Pleasant, died last week of a sudden attack of heart trouble. He was well known in business and financial circles.

Mrs. Jacob Blackman, wife of the cashier of the First National at Stuart, died after a prolonged attack of acute peritonitis last week at her home in Stuart. She was a daughter of John Herriott, former lieutenant-governor and well known in Iowa politics for many years.

The bankers of Clay county are taking an active interest in the crop improvement movement in that county. They offered a beautiful living cup to the boy or girl raising the best ear of corn. There are fifty contestants who will receive the trophy. Classes have been formed also in sewing, cooking, gardening, canning and poultry growing.

Talk of reorganizing the local chapter of the American Institute of Bank Clerks is floating around the Des Moines bankers. The chapter was in a flourishing condition once upon a time, but it was disbanded, and since then perennial efforts to reorganize have failed nothing.

Will Fouke has resigned as receiving teller of the Security National at Sioux City.

B. D. Hellscher has become identified with the Keokuk County State at Sigourney.

E. W. Kint of California, formerly cashier of the Iowa Savings at Oelwein, will return to that city to become president of the institution. He was elected by the directors to succeed E. C. Belt, who was forced to retire because of failing health.

Valter T. Robinson is the new assistant cashier of the Citizens National at Hampton.

One of the big real estate deals of the year at Davenport was the taking over of the J. H. Whitaker estate property, Third and Brady, by P. T. Walsh. The Scott County Savings Bank's three stores are included in the property.

The Citizens Trust and Savings is the name of a new institution at Perry.

B. F. Perkins, declared to be a professional check raiser, has been busy in Iowa and several banks have been buncoed by him. Perkins' intent is to sell territorial rights for a certain kind of cement fences. He gets $50 for his information, raises the check to $250 and escapes. Secretary P. W. Hall of the I. A. B. sent out a warning against him.

Percy W. Hall, secretary of the Iowa Bankers' Association, thinks that Iowa did herself credit at the Boston convention. More than 100 from the Hawkeye state were in attendance and, according to Mr. Hall, they were in the fore front at all times. The train which went through from Chicago is declared by Mr. Hall to have been first class in every respect. Many of the bankers took advantage of the situation to see the Giants and Athletics play bats. Notably among these is John Morgan, cashier of the German Savings, Des Moines, who stopped off to see the games and returned to tell envious Des Moines fans why Philadelphia won and New York lost.

Investment Banking

The whole question of investments is a subject not thoroughly understood by the majority of people who have money for investment.

It would be to the advantage of every investor, large or small, to keep in close touch with some investment banker of thorough responsibility, in order to avail himself of experienced counsel.

Among the well established investment banking houses there is none that has a more complete organization for the investigation of securities, or which can better advise their customers what investments are best suited to fit each individual need than the

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Last year's successful experiment in bringing Pacific northwest fruit growers, bankers, transportation experts and business men together for a series of conferences on marketing, financing, storage and by-products, will provide the central idea in the Sixth National Apple Show and Fruit Products Congress to be held in Spokane November 17th to 22d.

The conferences a year ago resulted in the organization of the North Pacific Fruit Distributors, a co-operative non-profit company owned by the growers themselves and controlling 60 per cent of the fruit tonnage of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana this year. This work will be strengthened and extended by another series of conferences.

At these meetings various problems confronting the growers will be threshed out. Among the subjects announced for discussion by James S. Ramage, chairman of the board of trustees, are the following: the standardized pack; utilizing the lower grade fruits in by-products (with practical demonstrations); storing the fruit for market; financing the fruit crop; co-operative marketing and its vital necessity to the individual grower and to the future of the apple industry. A number of men of national fame are to be brought to Spokane to lead the discussion of each of the foregoing topics.

Education is the keynote of the show. To make the name more truly indicative of the scope and purposes of the show it has been changed this year to the Sixth National Apple Show and Fruit Products Congress.

Following the show the best apples in each class will be displayed for one week each in 100 large cities of the East and South.

Forecasts made October 1st by the United States department of agriculture credit the Pacific northwest, comprising Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, with a wheat production of 102,890,000 bushels, as against 108,658,000 bushels in 1912.

City Auditor J. Anthony Smith, after announcing the addition of another interest payment to the city's nest egg, known officially as the general sinking fund, says that the first bond issue to be paid from the fund in five years, amounting to $50,000, will be cared for in 1914. The sinking fund has grown to $138,000, which is invested in city warrants at 6 per cent interest and is compounded each year. The present sinking fund has been growing since 1909, when it was wiped out to pay a $70,000 bond issue. After 1914 no more bond issues mature until 1918, when an issue of $300,000 of funding bonds falls due, and by careful nursing of the sinking fund and the addition of a small donation each year from taxation the city auditor thinks this issue can be met at that time. This week a Spokane banker applied at the auditor's office for $10,000 of city warrants at par, but was informed that none was available, as only $20,000 in warrants remained in the hands of the treasurer and these will soon be taken up by the sinking fund. As the city retires its warrant debt inroads are made on the sinking fund securities, until after awhile it is thought the sinking fund will be required to purchase municipal improvement bonds to keep its balance working. Improvement bonds draw 6 per cent interest and by bringing the price to par the investment by the sinking fund not only will be of service to itself, but also will help to tone up the bond market.

"There is not the remotest possibility of any money shortage in the Pacific northwest due to the failure of congress to make adequate appropriation for the movement of gold from the assay offices to the mints," states Thomas H. Brewer, president of the Fidelity National bank, referring to reports sent out from Seattle and Helena of an apprehensive nature. "This has occurred before, so it's nothing new. The usual appropriation for this purpose is $25,000, and is now only $10,000. That means that after that amount is expended gold can be shipped from the assay offices to the mints only at the cost of the owner of the gold."

Arrangements are under way for a meeting of the agricultural and farm education committee of the Washington Bankers Association in Spokane next week. The exhibition of the Washington Boys' and Girls' Agricultural and Industrial Association, in which the committee has taken an active part, will be held in Spokane October 28th to 30th and several of the committee will be in attendance. George P. Wiley, cashier of the Bank of Waterville, is chairman, and other members are N. B. Coffman, Chehalis; C. A. Brewer, Tacoma; J. L. Dumas, Pullman, and W. D. Vincent, Spokane. Mr. Wiley and Mr. Dumas are on the program of the boys' and girls' association, and Mr. Wiley writes Mr. Vincent that the committee will meet in Spokane probably October 31st or November 1st to discuss general matters pertaining to its jurisdiction.

W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National bank, returned to Spokane this week from Boston, where he attended the convention of the American Bankers Association. Before returning he visited New York and Washington, D. C.

METCALF PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Edward P. Metcalf pleaded not guilty on Thursday of last week to three additional indictments alleging misapplication of funds and conspiracy to defraud the defunct Atlantic National, Providence, of which he was formerly president. He had previously entered a plea of not guilty to the original indictment charging the misapplication of $200,000 of the bank's funds, and the bail of $50,000 given at the time was allowed to stand for the four indictments. He has been given ten days to change his plea. November 3rd was set as the date for a preliminary hearing. The surety company which gave bond for $20,000 toward the bail on the original indictment was released and this amount was put up by relatives of the defendant.

SPECIAL ADDING MACHINES FOR BANK WORK

Burroughs Adding Machine Co. of New York is sending out an article describing the growing use by banks of specially designed machines for taking care of special bank figure work, which has resulted in a great saving in time and labor. The First National of Chicago has 114 machines, nearly half of which are of special design. Among the types used are those having special keys for printing at one stroke transit designations, such as "No-Pro," for no protest; "T. N. P." for telegraphic non-payment; "Bl/att," for bill of lading attached, etc. Another feature is the style of machine which automatically marks overdrafts. All of the machines contain time and labor saving devices.

BANKERS HONORED BY KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

At the meeting of the grand lodge of the Illinois Knights of Pythias, held in Decatur last week, two bankers were elected officers for the coming year. Millard F. Dunlap, president of the Ayers National of Jacksonville and also head of the well-known firm of Dunlap, Russell & Co. of that city, was named grand master of the exchequer. W. G. Edens of Chicago, assistant secretary Central Trust Company of Illinois, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, was re-elected supreme representative for a third term. Mr. Edens is now senior member of the finance committee of the national body and in all likelihood will be made chairman of that committee before the expiration of his present term.

DISCUSSES INCOME TAX LAW

F. J. Lisman of F. J. Lisman & Co., New York City, attended the convention of the investment bankers this week at the Blackstone. In discussing the income tax law he said: "The regulations of the income tax were framed to accomplish two purposes—one for the benefit of the companies and the other for the benefit of the treasury department. Under the law corporations pay 1 per cent on their net income, regulated by certain conditions. Included in the net income is the interest on whatever bonds might be held by the corporation. Supposing some bank or university held $100,000 worth of the United States Steel Corporation bonds. The steel company has agreed in its deed of trust to pay its interest charges free of the income tax. Unless it were furnished with a list of its bondholders it could not possibly know who is receiving its payments, and as the government always takes the benefit of the doubt the steel corporation would pay the 1 per cent on all of its coupons. Under the new regulations it would unquestionably be discovered that one-half of these coupons are being collected on behalf of corporations who need not pay the tax themselves, and, therefore, the steel company need not pay the tax on behalf of such corporations owning its bonds. This provision of the treasury regulation therefore, relieves the companies to a very large extent of paying their income taxes."

ST. PAUL CHAPTER MEETS

The St. Paul Chapter of the American Institute of Banking held its opening meeting of the season at the Commercial Club Tuesday night. A banquet was held at 6:30. The feature of the evening was an address by Kelsey Chase, state superintendent of banks, on "Country Bank Examinations." President E. O. Nordstrom gave an address on the work of the club and its future plans.

K. B. Cecil of Catlettsburg, Ky., has been appointed a national bank examiner.

WARRIOR FRAME secured a notable victory this week over Warrior Moehlenpah in a joust at Wisconsin Group Five meeting.

MR. FRAME had introduced his famous preamble and resolutions on the currency bill. Moehlenpah was opposed. The contest was interesting but the victory was with Mr. Frame decidedly.

THE whereases were a yard long and full of "pep," but the whole ginger jar was included in one short resolution which read:

THAT we earnestly ask congress to so amend the present bill to the end that it calls for cash not to exceed 2 per cent of deposits from country banks, 2 1/2 per cent from general reserve city banks, and 5 per cent from tree central reserve city banks, which will provide, with capital paid in, $300,000,000, covering ample cash to relieve distress.

COMMERCE MONTHLY," which operated for a time as a house organ for the National Bank of Commerce in St. Louis, has been rechristened "The St. Louis Banker."

THE Wait brothers and G. E. Burkholder are given out as the new owners, the banking interests having retired.

THE Murray City, Ohio, private bank, after S. P. Soliday had scheduled all of his private property, still was short $28,000 on the deposits. Banking commissioner is in charge.

OHIO has 213 private banks now under a mild form of state supervision. They claim "resources" of $45,615,930.07. Loans on real estate and collateral total $10,000,000.

THE new Farmers State Bank has succeeded to the private banking business of E. Litchfield & Co. at Flanagan, Ill. E. Litchfield is president; J. H. Linneman, vice-president, and V. Parker, cashier.

THE new Brighton State Bank has taken over the business of Blodgett Bros. & Co., Brighton, Ill. Charles L. Boren is president; John Baker, vice-president, and B. F. Dyse, cashier of the consolidated bank.

FINIS E. MARSHALL hasn't given up "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" as yet. He still expects to be the next comptroller.

J. A. LEWIS tells us that a professional convention manager was the real man behind the guns at Boston. And a professional convention reader should read every report, motion, amendment, etc., at the Richmond meeting. The big political parties all do it.

REED FULLER, receiving teller of the private banking institution of Alex Pate at Wellington, Ill., at the time of its suspension, is reported to have been arrested on the charge of having received deposits from customers after he knew the firm was insolvent.

ALABAMA BANKERS ASSOCIATION'S committee on agriculture is offering corn prizes with the customary free trip to Washington as the chief objective for the boys.

GEORGE D. BARTLETT, secretary to the Badger bankers, was at the investment bankers' convention this week. He reports that 100 bankers made the complete round trip on his sight-seeing tour to the Boston convention.

W. D. VINCENT has stirred up the high schools at Spokane with prizes in mathematics. The chief winner will get a big silver cup.

BERT L. HASKINS, cashier of the Chat-ham and Phenix, is a "bug" on farming. He has one all his own, over in Connecticut, where he spends vacations and Sundays.

HE doesn't raise wooden nutmegs, either. At least he says he doesn't.

SULZER is being lionized in the New York East Side district, chiefly because he was so successfully tigerized at Albany recently.

JIM O'LEARY tells us he attended a currency conference recently, laying odds of two-to-one that none of the speakers knew what he was talking about. He won every bet, proving each case by all the other speakers.

TWO well-known Illinois bankers were elected to "grand" positions by the K. P.'s at Decatur. They are Millard F. Dunlap and W. G. Edens.

CHICAGO drinks 300,000,000 bottles of beer a year, the Association of Commerce reports. Forty-three breweries are kept busy here and eleven companies with their plants in other states have representatives in Chicago.

HOWARD ELTING, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, invited President Wilson to appear before that body at his own convenience to discuss currency legislation.

Albion township, Calhoun county, Mich., had over $6,000 deposited in the Albion National when it went to the wall January 1, 1912, following the discovery of the defalcations of H. M. Dearing, the cashier. The township has now started a suit against the receiver, Frank L. Irwin, to recover the money, part of which has come back in dividends.

SANDS SPRINGS BANK REOPENED

With a new directorate composed entirely of Tulsa business men, the Bank of Sand Springs, Okla., which recently was closed, has been reopened with a capital stock of $20,000. T. W. Spillman, absconding cashier of the bank, who is charged with a shortage of nearly $15,000, still is missing. Spillman's reckless deals in "high finance" are alleged to have been the only cause for the failure of the bank.

SAVINGS FUNDS IN STATE BANKS

Commissioner of Insurance and Banking Collier of Texas has issued a condensed monthly statement of the condition of the savings departments of the twenty-five state banks maintaining savings departments at the close of business on September 30th. The statement shows the total resources to be $2,814,155, of which $2,040,543 is on first mortgages on real estate. The liabilities show $2,789,257 due depositors and $24,897 undivided profits. The required cash reserve is $418,277 or 15 per cent of the total deposits and the actual cash on hand is $556,085.

Another man who did not believe in banks buried $10,000 in the ground near Shipman, Macoupin county, (Ill.) Before his death he told his brother of the whereabouts of the money. After the funeral the brother found the money. Part of the money had been buried in 1863 and he had buried money at various times since the Civil War.

TETER ATTACKS CURRENCY BILL

If the Owen-Glass currency bill becomes a law, a large number of the country national banks will surrender their national charters and take out state charters, according to Lucius Teter, president of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company, who spoke Tuesday night on currency legislation at the Hamilton Club.

"The country national banks will be required to deposit their entire reserve fund with the federal banks," said Mr. Teter, "and as they now keep their reserve in their own banks in the city, it will have the effect of putting down the deposits in the city banks.

"One difficulty in the law is the control of the reserve banks. Three of the nine directors will be appointed by the president. Three will come from among the bankers and three will be appointed from the public who are not bankers. This puts practically six of the controlling force under political influence and depositors will object to having their money in banks which can be politically controlled."

FILES BILL TO COLLECT ASSIGNMENTS

A petition of the National City Bank of Chicago asking permission to collect assignments totaling $180,000, due the O'Gara Coal Company, was filed before Federal Judge Mack this week. The largest item in the list was $87,100 owed the coal company by the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad.

The assignments are for coal bought by the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad and other railroads and corporations prior to the bankruptcy proceedings which were instituted against the O'Gara Coal Company several weeks ago. With these assignments the coal company went to the National City Bank and offered them as collateral on loans which the company made from the bank. The assignments are now due, and it is the desire of the bank to collect them.

Judge Mack granted the petition and ordered the O'Gara company to answer as to whether the company had any objection to the bank's collecting on the assignments.

NEBRASKA BANK CLOSED

First National of Sutton, Neb., closed its doors Tuesday and is in the hands of the national banking department. Capitalized at $5,000, the bank had surplus of $80,000 and from $100,000 to $125,000 in deposits. It is said that the resources of the institution were impaired as a result of unprofitable investments.

CHICAGOANS GET BANK PERMIT

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 4.—State Auditor Brady issued a permit to-day for the organization of the Division State Bank of Chicago, which will be capitalized at $200,000. The permit was issued to Bernard F. Clettenberg, Edward J. Brundage, Benson Landon, Robert L. Holt and John B. Freiechtel.

SELL BONDS OVER COUNTER

Chicago this week tried the experiment of other cities and sold its bonds over the counter. The first day of the sale twenty $1,000 bonds were sold. The bonds pay 4 per cent interest.

At the recent conventions held in Connecticut and Oregon, O. H. Brothwell and W. L. Thompson were respectively elected to head the state bankers associations. The former is cashier of the First National of Bridgeport and the latter president of the American National of Pendleton. It is confidently expected that the good work which has been accomplished heretofore will be kept up under the new administrations.

HARRIS TRUST OFFERINGS

The Harris Trust and Savings Bank has just purchased $100,000 Madison, Wis., sewer 4½ per cent bonds, maturing serially from 1914 to 1933 inclusive; $135,000 Decatur, Ill., waterworks 5 per cent bonds, maturing from 1914 to 1933; $100,000 Decatur, Ill., school district straight 20-year 5 per cent bonds, and $100,000 Astoria, Oregon, Improvement 5 per cent bonds, due from 1923 to 1953 inclusive.

MINNESOTA BANKER DIES

Long Prairie, Minn., Nov. 5.—Albert Rhoda, president of the First National, died yesterday. He was the first superintendent of schools of Todd county, coming here forty-seven years ago. He was afterwards elected county auditor, which position he held sixteen years. Then he organized the Merchants State Bank, now the First National. He was an old soldier, serving in a Wisconsin regiment as lieutenant.

LECTURES ON INCOME TAX

H. A. Dow, assistant secretary and head of the trust department of the Harris Trust and Savings, delivered an address Tuesday evening on the income tax at the LaSalle Extension University.

OFF THE AGRICULTURAL COMMITTEE

As was surmised in a former issue of this publication, B. F. Harris, the founder and able former chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the Illinois Bankers Association, will not serve as a member of the committee under Chairman John M. Crebs of Carmi. He's too busy with other features of the service as chairman of the Agricultural Section of the A. B. A. and of the famous "Conference" founded by Joseph Chapman. This means that practically the whole Illinois committee will be new to the business.

CHANGE AT HUTCHINSON

G. H. Welsh, formerly president of the State Exchange, Hutchinson, Kan., on November 1st left for his home on the Pacific coast. F. W. Cooter succeeds Mr. Welsh as president and F. C. Kath has taken Mr. Cooter's place as cashier.

FROM the context we should judge that in a few cases James J. Hill would have us call some of them "guilt" edge railway bonds.

FIRST NATIONAL of Casey, Ill., will shortly move into temporary quarters while their old building is being removed and a thoroughly fireproof structure erected and made ready for their permanent home.

A. HUTTON and W. F. Reid, farmers at Casey, "topped the market" in Chicago this week selling yearlings at 9.25 and 9.35. The Hutton calves brought $95.18 per head and those of Mr. Reed $135.05—total $9,480.

THE secretary of agriculture has announced a new plan of publication work of the department. There has been an independent series of bulletins and circulars in each of the thirteen publishing bureaus, divisions, and offices of the department.

THESE have been discontinued and will be superseded by the Journal of Research for printing scientific and technical matter, and a departmental series of bulletins, written in popular language for selected and general distribution.

BY this plan the confusion that has resulted from the multiplicity of series of publications will be avoided, and the saving of a considerable sum will be effected annually.

SECRETARY HOUSTON has announced that hereafter the department of agriculture will send a weekly letter to its 35,000 township and 2,800 county correspondents giving the latest agricultural information of value to the farmer.

THE lobby of the new offices is furnished in Tavernelle marble, the officers' quarters paneled in Circassian walnut and the directors' room is brown mahogany. The vaults, both cash and safety deposit, are the largest in Detroit—the safety deposit vault having capacity for 6,000 boxes.

THE record of the Ford Motor Company of Detroit, for its fiscal year to September 30th, is expected to show a gross overturn of $100,000,000, the first time that any automobile enterprise has attained such an impressive volume of gross sales.

SECOND NATIONAL of Toledo has moved to its new home on Madison Avenue, a new twenty-one story building, the first floor of which is devoted exclusively to the business of the bank.

OLD COLONY TRUST, Boston, has sent out booklets on "Federal Income Tax Law" and "Coupons and the Income Tax Law."

OLD COLONY started in 1890 with four clerks. It employed 500 at the time of the Boston convention. Part of its present rank as "second largest outside of New York" came from absorbing the City Trust in 1910.

ITS beautiful new building is on Court Street, which was once Prison Lane, then Queen's, and is one of the older streets of Boston, taking its present name from the old court house recently razed to make room for the city hall annex now in course of construction.

THE site is one of considerable historic interest. In 1719 James Franklin, publisher of the New England Courant, had his office here, where his brother, Benjamin Franklin, served as an apprentice and learned the printing trade.

OVER Franklin's office was the headquarters of the Long Room Club of revolutionary fame. Daniel Webster first practiced law in an office on this site. These facts are commemorated by the "Franklin" and "Webster" rooms on the third floor of the present structure.

NATIONAL RESERVE BANK, New York, sends its statements out in a fibre document envelope weighted to go for one cent postage. Looks good.

LOANING to American farmers must be a safe business, for one Chicago house claims to have loaned farmers $80,000,000 without loss to a single client.

ON Sunday, November 9th, the Y. M. C. A. will dedicate a fine new building at the University of Illinois with appropriate ceremonies.

THE new building will not only furnish a general religious and social center for the activities of a large number of women students, but will also help to relieve the pressing need of residence halls at the university.

GEORGE WOODRUFF tells us he never said the new currency bill would "crack the money trust" for he doesn't believe there is "any sech animal" as "the money trust."

WHEN a man gets to be 77 years of age (if not long before it) he usually is retired. When a bank director reaches that number of years it is a mark of distinction.

THE handsome fall issue of "The American Bank Reporter," issued by the Stuerer Publishing Company, New York, is in its 77th year of successful publication. It grows in interest, perfection and size each year.

THIS year it includes the new A. B. A. numerical designation system of numbers. This gives it a double value and stamps it as immaculately up-to-date.

THE maps are in a clear neutral tint, void of disconcerting colors, and printed in clear readable type on good paper. For this give thanks.

WG. EDENS and other bold spirits forsook the bright lights early this week for a tour of the Missouri group meetings. For most of them it will be the farewell appearance for the season.

NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL at Bel-lingham, Wash., is using a quotation from James J. Hill on its folders to good advantage. The veteran financier said this:

"IF you want to know whether you are destined to be a success or a failure in life, you can easily find out. The test is simple and it is infallible: Are you able to save money? If not, drop out. You will lose. You may think not, but you will lose as sure as you live. The seed of success is not in you."

THE same institution recently quoted Andrew Carnegie to the same purpose as follows:

"THE man who does not and cannot save money cannot and will not do anything else worth while. The best way to accumulate money is to resolutely save and bank a fixed

A BANKING THEME

Commenting editorially on the interest taken by the bankers in improved agricultural methods and good roads, the St. Joseph (Mo.) Gazette in its issue of November 5th said:

When Banker William G. Edens of Chicago talks to-day to the members of Group Three of the Missouri Bankers Association on the subject of "Agriculture and Road Making," he will be discussing two very important phases of banking.

Edens probably would not have been on the program of such an occasion a score of years ago. Certainly he would not have been asked nor expected to handle the theme which he will to-day present to the St. Joseph gathering of northwest Missouri men of finance. And because of this state of affairs twenty years ago northwest Missouri had poorer roads than now, and agriculture was not the important nor remunerative industry which in later years it has become.

Banking and good roads—to be sure they go together. Banking and agriculture—one could not exist in this country without the other. A section rich in agricultural resources, properly developed, and with fine highways, could scarcely have a bank failure. So successful farming and the same sort of operations present a splendid case of cause and effect.

The banking interests of Missouri have of recent years seen this truth with a clearness which has caused former laxness of interest on their part in good road making and agricultural development to be more than atoned for. Every banker is now a worker in the cause of better highways. So is he eager for the highest development of agricultural undertakings. Indeed, the present movement for county farm advisers could not have reached its successful stage but for the fact that the banking interests of the country were back of it.

ADDRESSES COMMERCE CLUB

Declaring that bankers generally believe with President Wilson that the currency system of the country needs revision and are ready to stand behind him in his efforts to revise it, Graham G. Lacy, vice-president of the Tootle-Lemon Bank, St. Joseph, Mo., delivered an interesting address at the noonday luncheon of the Commerce Club. Mr. Lacy asserted that the clause of the Owen-Glass bill, which provides for twelve reserve banks, is not popular among bankers, who would prefer a single reserve bank. Stringent contraction of currency and a rediscounting and reissuing of notes will probably follow the passage of the bill in its present form, he said.

SELLS BANKING INTERESTS

J. M. Moore, president of the First National, Bay City, Tex., and one of the best known and successful bankers in that section of Texas, sold his interest in the bank recently to M. Thompson, cashier. Mr. Thompson has been elected president of the institution, creating a vacancy in the cashier's department which still is unfilled. Mr. Moore also disposed of his interest in the Citizens Loan Company of Bay City and retired from the presidency. Fred S. Robbins is the new president. Mr. Moore is heavily interested in lands and irrigating companies and will continue his interest in the Moore-Carter lands and as the active head of Markham Irrigation Company. He will continue to reside in Bay City.

Eugene Sidney Howard, assistant secretary of the Louisville Trust, has resigned his position to become president of the Von Allmen Preserving Company, one of the largest concerns of its kind in the South.

Education for National Efficiency

Dr. George E. Vincent, president of the University of Minnesota, strongly urges the need of intelligent, concerted effort in coping with problems of national importance

"When one talks to an American of his national purposes," says H. G. Wells, "he seems a little at a loss. If one speaks of the national destiny, he responds with alacrity." This brilliant Englishman is right. We have too long deluded ourselves with the idea that we are the children of fortune; we have intoxicated ourselves with rhapsodic rhetoric; we are now facing the cold realities. Public lands have been occupied, natural resources have been appropriated by individuals, corporations and government. Population is increasing. Exports of foodstuffs are declining. There was something ominous in the recent arrival of that Argentine beef. The truth is being pressed home that the days of traditional agriculture, of easy-going industry, and a wide-margin commerce are numbered. The new tariff will put many of our industries on their mettle. If we are to maintain even our present standard of living we must change our methods.

There is a fashion in phrases. Every period provides its own catchwords and shibboleths. For Emerson America spelled Opportunity in capital letters. The country was a vast arena for individual struggle and achievement. It would be a disaster to drop this stimulating idea from the national lexicon, but just now it is "efficiency" that is being put in italics, if not in capitals. The call for efficiency is a summons to awake from complacent dreams of national destiny and to organize work and teaching under the guidance of a national purpose. We must learn to practice economy, to obey the dictates of science, to value expert knowledge and specialized skill. We must exalt moral and spiritual forces. We must train and inspire our children to take their places in a well-organized and loyal national life.

In the earlier years we were isolated, self-contained and protected from rivalry with other nations. Now we must compete in a world-wide struggle. We must strive for markets, for power, for prestige. We must reckon with peoples, who, under serious natural disadvantages, have attained forms of efficiency that may well give us pause. We have no need to fear, but we may no longer rely upon destiny. We must have purpose and policy. This competition not only forces us to organize our activities, but it tells us what we need to teach our youth. A conscious adjustment to new conditions and a reorganization of education go hand in hand. So it comes about that we are seeking a more scientific exploitation of our natural resources, a more economical organization of our commerce, a better understanding among our citizens, and higher social and political ideals. At the same time we are attempting to adapt our education to those needs of the national life.

National efficiency demands the distribution of ability into many professions and callings rather than concentration upon a few. We probably have too many lawyers, insurance agents, real estate dealers, brokers, shopkeepers—possibly even too many bankers; too few expert general farmers, fruit growers, dairy men, gardeners and highly skilled artisans in many industries. Efforts to magnify these industrial pursuits have been so far largely futile. City men's sentimental praise of rural life does not send people to the farm. Unctuous talk about "the dignity of labor" does not cause men to flock into shops and factories. The influences which draw men into callings are social esteem, economic reward, a technique which challenges mental ability, a sense of mastery, and a corporate pride in one's vocation.

Our problem, then, is to widen our ideals of worthy and dignified work, to exalt many kinds of service. This is a slow process. The standards of society change gradually. This has been true, for example, of agriculture. It is trite to say that this industry is fundamental. We know, too, that our agricultural methods and results have until recently been almost a national disgrace. We are trying to make farming scientific and effective. As one means to this end we seek to increase the attractiveness of rural life. Agricultural education itself has drawn people away from the countryside. We are making a conscious effort to change in the minds of Americans the ideas and feelings they have about farming as a career. It is quite as important to do this for townspeople as for farm folks. For city-made ideas and standards tend to dominate the countryside.

By way of illustration, let us review briefly what Minnesota is doing to increase the efficiency of farming itself, to change the popular estimate of rural life and to adapt the educational system to these two aims. Every element of Minnesota activity may be found somewhere in the United States. Nowhere, however, have these elements been so completely combined and co-ordinated. The state government and the state institutions, the federal government, voluntary associations, corporations, private institutions and individuals are working together to make farming successful and country life worth while.

There is first of all a system of distributing information and affording supervision. The agricultural experiment station of the university is the chief center around which this is organized. Printed bulletins are well, but if they are to be useful the demand for them must come from the farmers. Institutes play a part in the earlier stages of the campaign, but these pioneer revivalistic agencies must gradually merge into more permanent and practical efforts. The next step, therefore, is the establishment of a personal relation between the experienced expert and the farmer on his farm.

The Minnesota plan involves the following features: The division of the state into seven districts, each with its own experiment station; the appointment of district agents (two already in service) in charge of these divisions; the employment in each county of a resident agricultural agent (twenty-five are at work) appointed by the dean of the department of agriculture in the university and supported jointly by local subscription, a county appropriation, a state subsidy and a federal grant; the co-operation with these agents of 150 teachers of agriculture in state-subsidized high schools; the active support and co-operation of farmers' clubs, development associations, commercial clubs, bankers' committees, good roads associations, stock breeding organizations; daily conferences between county agents and individual farmers concerning crop rotation, pure seed, drainage, live stock, diseases of plants and animals, farm accounting, marketing, credits, etc.; assistance by the county agents and station experts to co-operative creameries; selling associations and other community enterprises; the multiplication of demonstration farms (twenty-five now in operation) owned and operated by regular farmers, who, without any subsidy, agree to follow the instructions of the experiment stations and to make daily reports.

Next come the agencies for interesting the public in rural affairs. The chief of these are: certain extension activities of the university, the farmers' institutes, farmers' clubs, commercial clubs united in a state federation, the State Federation of Women's Clubs, good roads associations, improvement societies. These organizations hold public meetings and conventions at which a wide variety of rural topics are discussed. The farm papers play an important part in supplying their readers with information and reports. The co-operative creameries and similar undertakings exert a marked influence. The railway companies by their demonstration farms, their distribution of literature, and especially by co-operating in the sending out of demonstration trains, are doing much good. The state and county fairs are more and more coming to be educational in character and influence.

To this gathering it is a pleasure to mention the work of the bankers of the state, who have shown a gratifying interest in the farm problem and in the readjustment of the educational system. A central committee is in relation with district committees under which subcommittees on special activities are organized. The county agent plan, subsidies for vocational subjects in the schools, improvement associations, cattle importing projects, etc., have had the hearty and effective support of these committees. A good many bankers are buying dairy herds, are operating farms and by demonstrations are giving aid to the cause. It is confidently believed that the bankers will improve the conditions of farm credits by relying more and more upon the reports of the county agents as to the efficiency of individual farmers and their economic right to loans on favorable terms. Whatever the outcome of the demand for a new system of farm credits, it is important that nothing should stand in the way of stimulating efficiency by putting a premium on sound methods and good management.

The adjustment of the educational system to the new situation deserves more detailed description than the time permits. Out of the state treasury this year Minnesota will pay $5,150,000 for the maintenance of common schools, high schools, normal schools and the university. Of this, $200,000 is for special subsidies to high schools which teach agriculture, domestic science and manual training. These state subsidies involve more than an equal contribution from local boards. Of the 210 high schools, 150 provide the vocational subjects and maintain special teachers. Agriculture is not taught merely as a book and laboratory subject, but in connection with demonstration plots and farms in the vicinity. The school is a center for agricultural extension, and by means of association with surrounding districts becomes an integral part of a system which includes village or town and the country. The teacher of agriculture is the expert adviser of the farmers in his territory. In winter the school holds a one-month "short course" for farm people. The agricultural extension division supplies speakers and lecturers, sends out literature, organizes industrial contests among school pupils, supplies monthly bulletins on agricultural subjects to rural school teachers. The university department of agriculture offers four-year courses for the training of teachers of agriculture and of domestic science. Summer schools for rural teachers are provided. The university also conducts three schools of agricultural technology to train boys and girls for country life. Eighty per cent of the graduates are now on the farms or in closely allied pursuits. The college of agriculture trains young men and women for expert, managerial and teaching service. Consolidated rural schools are increasingly used not only for agricultural education, but as centers of rural neighborhood life.

Certain features of this Minnesota education plan may be emphasized. It is democratic. Children are not prematurely assigned to special vocational or trade schools. Aristocracy may for a time at least secure efficiency by making its masses obedient servants. But democracy cannot accept what Lincoln called the "mud-sill" theory. It must seek ability wherever it may be born. No stigma is attached to agriculture or domestic science by segregating the pupils who pursue these subjects. Indeed they are not vocational so much as they are educational. Experience shows that the introduction of them stimulates all the work of the school. The plan recognizes the fact that all children are to be citizens as well as specialized workers. Up to a certain point the education should be common to all, with a measure of specialization in accordance with aptitude, but within the social unity of the same school.

So much for the program and policies of a state which is finding itself. No one center or authority is dominant. All activities are organized into co-operation by a common spirit. The situation is typically American. State institutions, voluntary associations, corporations, individuals, are working together without any sense of governmental paternalism or weakening of personal initiative and responsibility. The movement makes for mutual understanding and good will. Farmers and bankers, school teachers and storekeepers, professors and politicians, club women and farmers' wives, are drawn into comradeship. Perhaps, however, we ought to say that the millennium has not dawned in Minnesota. Human nature has undergone no sudden change. There is apathy to be counteracted, prejudice to be overcome. Suspicion concerning disinterested citizens like bankers, for example, has not been entirely dispelled. But a real beginning has been made. The air is full of hope and determination. One is not to be blamed for feeling that it is good thing to live in a region that is awakening to a purpose and is organizing its efforts.

It is to be feared that this long description has obscured the principle to be illustrated, namely, that national efficiency demands a great diversity of specialized pursuits and an education which must stand the test of national need and welfare. Naturally an agricultural state turns its attention to farming. Predominantly, industrial and commercial sections must seek to make its many vocations respected and attractive and to adapt its education to these pursuits. Here, too, premature decision as to children's future work is to be avoided. The general common education must not too soon give way to trade training. At the same time this preliminary preparation must have some bearing upon future vocations, and above all not discriminate against manual employments as in the past.

This then is the national task—to work out a system of education which shall aim at making the United States an effective competitor in the world's arena. Efficiency must be secured, however, through and not at the sacrifice of our fundamental institutions. It must be a progressive efficiency, in that it gives scope to individuality and experiment. It must be an expert efficiency, which recognizes the authority of tested scientific truth and verified experience. It must be a social efficiency, arising not from coercion of the many, but from their loyalty to a common ideal and purpose. It must be a moral efficiency, inspired not by mere hope of material gain, but by a genuine desire to make our country a potent influence for social justice and for world welfare.

Cicero H. Graves, for the past eighteen months active vice-president of the First State Bank and Trust Company, Waco, Tex., has resigned, his stock in the bank having been purchased by Vice-President J. H. Lockwood, who will take Mr. Graves' place.

NATIONAL BANK REPORT

Washington, Nov. 2.—Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane to-day announced that during the month of October, 1913, nine applications to organize national banks were received. Of the applications pending four were approved. There are now 38 applications pending which have been approved, but organizations have not been completed. In the same month six banks, with total capital of $270,000, were authorized to begin business, of which number four, with capital of $120,000, had individual capital of less than $50,000, and two, with capital of $150,000, had individual capital of $50,000 or over.

On October 31, 1913, the total number of national banks organized was 10,457, of which 2,943 had discontinued business, leaving in existence 7,514 banks, with authorized capital of $1,068,534,175, and circulation outstanding, secured by bonds, $740,063,776. The total amount of national bank circulation outstanding was $758,899,709, of which $18,835,933 was covered by lawful money of a like amount deposited with the treasurer of the United States on account of liquidating and insolvent national banks and associations which had reduced their circulation.

WICHITA BANK SUES

A suit growing out of alleged questionable business operations of W. W. Brown, former cashier of the Stockyards State, Wichita, Kan., has been filed in the district court. The Stockyards State sues the Merchants State for $3,500 which, it is alleged, Brown, as cashier of the Stockyards State, borrowed from the Merchants State to cover a shortage, giving his personal note. The petition states that when the Merchants State presented the note for collection, Brown, without authority of the other bank officials or directors, paid the $3,500 out of the funds of the Stockyards State.

OMAHA BANK DEPOSITS LARGE

In response to the call of the comptroller of the currency, statements issued by Omaha national banks show that deposits were $1,859,077 greater on October 21st this year than last year and $500,890 greater than the last call, August 9th. The deposits total $61,184,070. Loans increased $487,683 over those of August and decreased $817,280 over those of last year.

REPORTS GOOD BUSINESS

L. L. Bacchus, vice-president of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings, says that general business is excellent for this time of the year and recessions in trade are entirely normal.

Deposits of the La Salle Street Trust now are $5,058,586 as compared with $2,728,426 last February.

EXPLAINS MONEY BILL

Wm. J. Gray, vice-president of the First National, Detroit, explained the essential points of the new currency bill and reviewed some of the bankers' objections to the measure at a luncheon of the Detroit alumni of the University of Michigan at the Edelweiss café on Wednesday of last week. The most serious objection raised by the financiers, said Mr. Gray, is that federal reserve notes ought not to be issued by the government, experience having shown that the issue of notes should be turned over to private parties under stringent regulations. "I agree," declared Mr. Gray, "that fiat money ought not to be issued and it may be, if the government now starts with the issue of notes, secured by banks, it will be but an entering wedge and notes will later be issued without any security behind them."

The school board at Des Moines has asked the German Savings, Des Moines, to file a bond equal to twice the amount of the school funds which School Treasurer John Hogan keeps on deposit there. This is in accordance with the new school law which also requires Treasurer Hogan to make monthly reports of the banks in which the school funds are kept.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By R. A. ALBERTSEN

Relates to administrative and department matters interesting to our readers

Results of the elections held this week are being taken by many as an endorsement of the policies of the Wilson administration. Particularly is this true in New Jersey, where Governor Fielder, the personal choice of the President, was re-elected. The defeat of Gov. Foss of Massachusetts is construed by the democrats as evidence that the new tariff is acceptable to the voters of the Bay state, while the election of a democratic senator from Maryland is, it is believed, an indication of confidence.

The opinion is that the president will use this endorsement as a means of securing the enactment of legislation along lines which he favors.

The statement was made Wednesday by a member of the senate banking and currency committee, in confidence to another senator, that within a week or ten days the committee will report a currency bill providing for a single central reserve bank, and the fight on the proposition will thereby be forced out into the open on the floor at once.

The president is much disturbed about the situation. Those close to him say that he would feel it very deeply if the committee should report adversely on the administration bill, and they expect that strenuous methods will be adopted to force the recalcitrant democratic members of the committee into the line.

At its meeting Wednesday the committee recorded itself on another vote looking to the ultimate adoption of the central bank plan.

By a vote of seven to five it was decided that when the final details of the bill are agreed to one-half of the gold reserve required to be kept by the member banks in the regional banks shall be deposited by the regional banks with the federal reserve board in Washington. Nelson, Bristow, Crawford, McLean and Weeks, republicans, and Hitchcock and Reed, democrats, supported this plan.

This is a modified form of the central bank, government owned and controlled, with branches throughout the country, as suggested by Senator Reed a week ago.

Senator Reed brought it up again Wednesday in a resolution requiring the segregation in Washington of a percentage of the reserves and the establishment of twenty-four regional reserve banks throughout the country. This was disapproved by certain senators upon whose votes the Missouri senator counted, and in the afternoon he submitted the straight proposition to segregate one-half the reserves in Washington.

After discussion the motion was put and lost on a tie vote, Senator Hitchcock voting with the administration democrats. Chairman Owen had not recovered from his smile of triumph before Mr. Hitchcock, without offering any explanation, changed his vote and affirmative action was recorded. To-morrow Senator Owen will attempt to reverse the action of the committee.

The proposed segregation of 50 per cent of the reserves will create a fund of between $250,000,000 and $300,000,000, from which the federal board can ease any strained situation by shifting these reserves and requiring any regional bank to put up paper for the funds advanced to it.

In this way the funds of the regional banks will not be disturbed and no regional bank will be called upon to aid another. It also would have authority to issue notes upon the reserve and otherwise provide for disturbed monetary conditions.

Under the administration of the income tax law corporations for the first time will come to know the identity of the owners of their coupon bonds. Each coupon, when presented for collection, must be accompanied by a certificate showing the owner's name. Thus the corporaions will obtain a complete list of their bondholders.

This new knowledge may have important consequences. It will bring corporations in closer touch with their bondholders. In cases where reorganizations become necessary, the work will be simplified by the ease of communicating with owners of bonds concerned.

When bond issues mature it gives the debt corporation an opportunity to make a direct offer to the bondholder of a new bond in exchange for the old, if the maturing issue is to be refunded.

Such lists of bondholders will be much sought after by dealers in bonds, as selecting lists for circulars descriptive of new bond offerings.

PHILADELPHIA BANK IN NEW QUARTERS

The Bank of Commerce, Philadelphia, last week moved into its handsome new quarters 713 Chestnut Street. This institution is one of the youngest in Philadelphia. It was organized in 1904 as a state bank with a capital of $200,000, which later was increased to $500,000. The late Isaac Blum, who chiefly was instrumental in the foundation of the institution, became president and held that office until his death. He was succeeded by Nathan T. Folwell. The bank now has deposits of $900,000, surplus of $140,000 and undivided profits of $56,540. Nathan T. Folwell president; Lewis W. Wister, vice-president; John P. Kolb, cashier; Edward Ristine, assistant cashier.

MISREPRESENTATION IS CHARGE AGAINST BANKERS

An echo of the failure of the bank of Flat Rock, Mich., in March, 1912, is heard in a suit begun by Dennis Dunivan, charging that Maynard A. Losee and G. H. Retan induced him and others to deposit $2,800 in the concern, which, he says, was represented to be a regularly organized private bank, whereas, he alleges, it was only a clearing house. Losee was a stockholder in the concern and Retan was cashier. The bank books and all papers showed D. H. Power as president; J. W. Losee, vice-president, and G. H. Retan, cashier, and F. H. Losee and M. A. Losee, stockholders, all from Pontiac. Mark Hearn, a Detroit attorney, was made receiver of the bank. His report for the year ending March 4, 1913, showed that few of the notes and papers of the concern were collectable, money having been loaned on poor securities. The books show $85,000 due creditors.

DETROIT COMPANY ELECTS OFFICERS

Charles T. Hird has been elected president of the new Detroit Avenue Savings and Banking Company; Dr. W. K. Mock, A. L. Ehrbar and Charles U. Davis, vice-presidents; U. W. Hird, secretary, and Joseph H. Wenneman, treasurer. The company has taken a ninety-nine year lease on the southwest corner of Detroit Avenue and W. 65th Street and will begin construction of a building this winter. It is planned to begin operations April 1st. The original capital stock was $50,000, but this was heavily over subscribed and will be increased to $100,000.

COUNTY BANKERS MEET

The semiannual meeting of the Tricounty Bankers Association of Maryland met at Snow Hill on Wednesday of last week. Mayor Marion T. Hargis welcomed the visitors and the response was made by Leonard Wailes of Salisbury. In the absence of President William Spiva, Bank of Somerset, Princess Anne, Samuel A. Graham presided. John C. Faulkland, assistant cashier Franklin National, Philadelphia, discussed the national currency bill as it affects the country banks. George M. Upshur spoke on the object to be obtained by the national currency legislation as proposed. In the evening a banquet was given at Purnell's hotel. John W. Staton acted as toastmaster. Membership in this association includes bank presidents, cashiers and their assistants, and directors of all banks in Somerset, Worcester and Wicomico counties. Samuel Graham, Salisbury, was elected president for the ensuing year; George M. Upshur, Snow Hill, vice-president; E. C. Fulton, Salisbury, secretary, succeeding Coleman Byrd of Pocomoke; Edward H. Taylor, Stockton, treasurer, and an executive committee consisting of William L. Holloway, Berlin; Robert Duer, Princess Anne; W. C. Gordy, Salisbury.

RETURNS FROM NEW YORK

John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust and Savings, returned this week from New York. Mr. Mitchell says that leading financial interests in Wall Street are of the opinion that intervention by the United States is necessary in order to quell the disturbances in Mexico.

"The feeling in New York," said Mr. Mitchell, "is that the time has come for the United States to act. It would not require a large expenditure of blood or money to march a body of soldiers from Vera Cruz to Mexico City large enough to restore order and 'police' the city. This would give the leaders of the various contending factions in Mexico courage to assert themselves and make possible an election with some semblance of fairness. The leading merchants, bankers and business men would welcome such interferences, as they are heartily disgusted with the bushwhacking tactics that have long prevailed in their country."

NEW MICHIGAN BANK

The Michigan state banking commission has approved the application of the Clarkston State, Clarkston, capitalized at $25,000. Clarkston has been without a bank since the failure of the E. Jossman State in August.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

S. W. Straus, president of the mortgage and bond banking house of S. W. Straus & Co. of Chicago and New York, is the chairman of the committee on organization of the American Society for Thrift. Others on the committee are Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, president of the Illinois Equal Suffrage Association; Mrs. Celia Parker Wooley of the Frederick Douglas Center; Charles E. Piper of the National Fraternal Congress; Lyman E. Cooley; W. B. Sloane, auditor Inland Steel Company, and Professor Henry Kinsey Brown of Valparaiso University. The purpose of the organization is to promote thrift in the American people by inquiry, education and discussion. The society is not organized for profit and is soliciting no funds. Mr. Straus is a well-known banker and finds time away from his busy duties to aid in this great work of promoting thrift and economy in the minds of American people who are, in many cases, rightly accused of being too extravagant.

The society has been divided into six sections devoted to press and publishers; banks and bankers; schools and colleges; churches and church bodies; charities and philanthropies, and commerce and industries. The society has collected a number of quotations from world famous men as follows: "Tis hard for an empty bag to stand alone"—Franklin; "Men know not how great a revenue is in frugality"—Cicero, and "Saving goes before security, happiness and good citizenship."—Bismarck.

Mr. Straus says of the preliminary work of the organization: "The American Society for Thrift has only recently been organized, but I believe it has a vast work to do in this country and that the good it can accomplish will never be measured in dollars and cents."

First State Bank of Chester

One of the newly improved bank buildings in the southern part of the state is that of the First State Bank of Chester. The interior of the bank has been entirely remodeled and refitted and the room is one of the best equipped and most comfortable in that part of the state. The vaults are also equipped in the best approved way and the bank has an electric safety alarm device. The vaults are massive and every protection possible is afforded from fire and burglary. Safety deposit boxes are provided in great quantity and a customer's room amply provided with chairs and tables is at the disposal of patrons of the bank.

The floor is of mosaic tile, the wainscoting around the counters and room being of polished Italian marble with a verd antique marble base skirting the lower portion. The fixtures are of genuine mahogany, surmounted with solid brass grills in dull finish, while the ceiling of the room is of steel of pleasing design and crossed by massive beams which give a panel effect. The color scheme was most carefully selected and the interior of the bank is as near perfection of beauty, convenience and solidity as money can purchase. In short, the newly remodeled room of the First State Bank of Chester is one which ranks with the most beautiful banks in the state, and the officers are justly proud of it.

The bank occupies the corner of the First State Bank building, and a number of rooms are leased to other parties, the entire building being the property of the bank. The bank was organized in 1888, and its correspondents are the Chatham and Phenix National of New York; the National Bank of the Republic of Chicago, and the National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis. W. R. MacKenzie is the president; A. A. Short, vice-president; Maurice A. Mudd, cashier, and E. D. Meredith, assistant cashier. The bank has capital of $25,000 and a surplus fund of $5,000. The officers feel that with their new equipment their already successful business will be greatly improved and they view their future growth with great confidence.

Death of Charles Anthony

Charles Anthony formerly a well-known banker of Peoria, died recently at his home in Los Angeles. He was born in Washington, Ill. in 1846 and was interested at different times in various Illinois banking and loan houses. In the early eighties he was one of the organizers of a bank at Chatsworth and for some time was head of a large loan and mortgage business in Washington, Ill., in which he was associated with Henry Denhart, the well-known Washington banker and president of the Bank of Henry Denhart & Company of that town. Mr. Anthony later organized the Anthony Loan and Trust Company of Peoria, of which he was the president, his brother, Clifford M. Anthony, vice-president, and Henry Denhart was a member of the firm. In 1886 Charles Anthony retired and removed to Los Angeles where he has since resided. His brother, Clifford M. Anthony, still resides in Peoria.

A. W. Bragg, the president, is a large stock-feeder and farmer, and annually feeds and markets many cars of cattle. Mr. Bragg is deeply interested in soil improvement and is one of the best known banker-farmers in central Illinois. The firm is also interested in three other banks in the vicinity of Tuscola. The Bank of Pesotum, of which A. W. Bragg is the president, has recently erected one of the best modern bank buildings of the village type to be found in the state.

The firm of Bragg & Jeffers of Camargo and that of Bragg, Helm & Company of Garrett are both doing a good banking business in their respective villages. H. D. Blake, formerly with Mr. Bragg at Pesotum, is now in charge of the work at Camargo.

Grover R. Helm, assistant cashier of the bank at Tuscola, is chairman of Group Six of the Illinois Bankers Association and is deeply interested in association work. He has many friends in the Group. Mr. Helm is an interested reader of THE CHICAGO BANKER. Officers of Bragg, Helm & Company of Tuscola are A. W. Bragg, president; N. G. Ervin, vice-president; A. T. Bragg, cashier, and Grover R. Helm and B. M. Van Voorhees, assistant cashiers.

Banking Strength of Illinois Cities

The current issue of the Bankers Review gives a list of twenty Illinois cities outside of Chicago arranged according to the strength of their total resources. The cities are arranged in the following order: Peoria, Springfield, Quincy, East St. Louis, Rockford, Moline, Rock Island, Joliet, Decatur, Bloomington, Aurora, Galesburg, Elgin, Jacksonville, Danville, Kankakee, Alton, Ottawa, Freeport and Champaign. The figures for the loans, discounts and investments give the cities substantially the same rank as does the list for total resources, although there are a few variations.

Merchants National of Aurora

The Merchants National of Aurora is this year celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of its founding, growth and development. The bank was organized in March, 1888, by a number of prominent business and professional men of Aurora. N. C. Simmons, one of the best financiers of the city, was the president from the incorporation until a year or two ago, when he retired in favor of W. C. Estee, who had been with the bank as cashier from its incorporation. Mr. Estee had previously served as cashier of the Old Second National of Aurora. W. W. Armstrong was cashier of the Merchants National for a few months and January 1, 1913, retired to become associated with the well-known bond house of Howard, Simmons & Company of Aurora, where he is now vice-president and treasurer. Mr. Armstrong was succeeded by Frank J. Knight, formerly of Wheaton, who was for seventeen years in the county treasurer's office of DuPage county, serving part of the time as county treasurer. H. L. McWethy, the vice-president, has been a director since the organization of the bank. The present officers are W. C. Estee, president; H. L. McWethy, vice-president; F. J. Knight, cashier, and W. V. Slaker and R. N. Stolp, assistant cashiers. The directorate has included many prominent names in the business life of Aurora.

In February, 1907, the Merchants National of Aurora occupied its elegant new banking home, which is one of the best equipped and most convenient banking houses in northern Illinois. The building is two stories in height, is of the monumental type, and very striking in its appearance. There are more than thirty offices in the building outside of the bank rooms. The vaults are most complete in every detail, providing ample security from fire and burglars. One section of the vault is for cash, another for books, and a third for the safety deposit boxes of the customers, which are provided for with great care. The Merchants National of Aurora is one of the progressive banks of Illinois and is keeping pace with the growing industrial and business life of the busy city of Aurora. The deposits are over one million dollars. The capital is $100,000 and the surplus and undivided profits total $147,922. The correspondents are the Hanover National of New York and the Continental and Commercial Corn Exchange and National City of Chicago.

Illinois Notes

The Merchants National of Peoria is expected, from changes which are being made in down-town real estate in that city, to erect a new building next spring, which will rank with the First National, the Central National and a number of other modern banking structures of Peoria.

The work of the Tazewell County Farm Bureau has been attracting wide attention from the agricultural papers, and considerable publicity has been given to its activity.

Harry F. Atwood, field representative of the Chicago Association of Commerce, was a speaker at a recent "get-together" banquet of the Springfield business men, speaking from the topic, "Team Work Service and Business Building."

J. K. Segrave of Litchfield has been named chief clerk of the banking and building and loan departments of the state auditor's office.

Figures for Peoria's building operations for October, 1913, total $273,750 as compared to $46,875 in October, 1912, and $102,903 in October, 1911. Business is good in Peoria and banks and business houses as well as the building trades have enjoyed a good year.

NEW GALVESTON BANK

The American Bank and Trust Company is the name of a new banking institution at Galveston, capitalized at $50,000. It has offices on the ground floor of the American National Insurance Company building and is the second to be organized in Galveston within the past few months under the state bank guaranty fund law. The officers are W. L. Moody, Jr., president; W. L. Moody, III, vice-president; C. W. Clawson, cashier. The directors of the institution are C. E. Witherspoon, J. W. Keenan, C. N. Markle, L. H. Collier and W. L. Moody, Jr.

DYNAMITE BANK SAFE

Two bandits attempted to rob the vault of the Shelby (Miss.) Bank on Friday of last week but escaped after dynamiting the outer door and leaving fully $50,000 inside. A negro boy was returning from a dance and, hearing the explosion of the bank, asked who was inside. This frightened the burglars and they ran from the building.

Cashier W. F. Eckes and other stockholders of the National Bank of Wahpeton, N. D., have about completed the organization of a land and loan company with an authorized capitalization of $100,000, of which $40,000 already has been paid.

L. E. Parsons, cashier and a director of the Citizens State, South Haven, Mich., died recently after several weeks' illness.

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

The attitude of Milwaukee bankers toward the provisions of the federal income tax law, which went into effect Saturday, is unanimous. They call it an imposition. At a meeting of the Milwaukee Clearing House Association Friday afternoon it was decided to refuse interest coupons on bonds for deposit and to accept the coupons only for collection except on government and municipal bonds, which are exempt. The coupons are being accepted for collection, payable after the banks have received assurance from the companies issuing the bonds that the income tax requirements have been met by them or else will be met by the investor. The vast amount of work which would be thrown on the banks should these coupons be accepted for deposit is such that the banks would not care to assume, it is emphasized.

"There is but one thing I can call this new law in its complexity, and express my feelings," said J. W. P. Lombard, president of the National Exchange Bank and of the Milwaukee Clearing House Association; "that is imposition. We have studied it from beginning to end and are not sure that we have found either head or tail since the proceeds of the payment of interest on bonds cannot be definitely credited when presented to receive the coupons for other purposes than collection of the amount due on interest." According to Herman Wolf, vice-president of the Wisconsin National, about 75 per cent of the bondholders are guaranteed against tax by the corporations issuing the bonds.

May Adopt Finger Print System

Milwaukee bank officials of late have been undergoing some of the emotions of the criminal being Bertilloned. Under the instruction of an expert they ruthlessly plunge their hands into a black oily compound and transfer the impression to a card. It is the result of the introduction of the P. A. Flack finger print system of identification as protection against forgeries. While the system has not yet been adopted in general, N. Vaughn Hardy, formerly teller in a Lincoln, Neb., bank, who is tutoring the Milwaukee bankers on its use, is enthusiastic in its possibilities. "For the depositor as well as the banker," says Mr. Hardy, "this is the greatest protection against any forgery that can be used. For the illiterate depositor it is a material help in that he is able to transact his own business, does not need identification or a person to witness his 'mark.'"

Insurance Company Begins Business

Secretary George D. Bartlett of the W. B. A. stopped activities in his office long enough Saturday to issue 265 policies in the new Wisconsin Bankers Mutual Casualty Company, of which also he is secretary. Herman L. Ekern, state insurance commissioner, issued the license to the new company Friday and it is now embarked in business. Officers are, president, S. M. Smith, Janesville; vice-president, F. W. Humphrey, Shawano, and secretary-treasurer, Mr. Bartlett.

Second Ward Officer Resigns

August O. Paunack has resigned as assistant cashier of the Second Ward Savings to return to his former position of cashier in executive charge of the Commercial National of Madison. Mr. Paunack has been with the Second Ward Savings for over a year and in that time has won for himself a place of high regard both in Milwaukee banking circles and throughout the state where a large portion of his work has been.

Joseph U. Lademann and Hugo Kiel have been appointed assistant cashiers. Mr. Lademann is an old employee of the bank and is at present manager of the Ninth Ward branch. He will continue in this capacity with the added title. Mr. Kiel is manager of the North Side office. He was formerly cashier of the First National Bank of Port Washington.

Wisconsin Notes

Nelson D. Jay, manager of the bond department of the First Savings and Trust Company, elected last week a director of the Investment Bankers Association of America at the national convention in Chicago, has been with the Milwaukee institution six years and manager of the bond department four years. His election is looked upon by Milwaukee commercial bankers, among whom he holds a prominent place, as an honor to those interests in the city which he represents, as well as a well deserved personal honor.

DYNAMITE BANK SAFE

A well planned bank robbery, similar to that of the Bank of Harrietta, Mich., seven weeks ago, was successfully pulled off at Falmouth, Mich., on Friday of last week, when the Bank of Falmouth was blown and about $3,000 and all else of value in the safe was obtained by two supposed yeggmen. While one was working on the inside the second, safely barricaded behind large piles of grindstones and rolls of wire, stood guard in front of the bank door with a gun. The inside of the bank was reduced to kindling. A. J. Bunning, president of the bank, was awakened by the explosions and reached the bank in time to see the robbers running towards McBain. Pursuit was started but the robbers have not yet been found. The Bank of Falmouth is capitalized at $100,000.

Statements published by the five national banks and four state banks of Dallas, Tex., show total deposits of $30,988,199.80, $25,061,41.38 of loans and discounts and $2,243,781.29 of cash on hand or due from banks. J. Howard Ardrey, cashier of the City National, said, in commenting upon the showing by the Dallas banks: "The bank deposits are relatively good for this year and this season of the year, and particularly good when the condition of the crops and the late marketing of the crops are taken into consideration. Although the deposits may not have increased much, the balances are good."

BANK OPENS IN NEW QUARTERS

The Cotton Belt Savings and Trust Company, Pine Bluff, Ark., opened for business in its new home in the Hotel Pines building last week, having removed from West Barraque street, where it had been located for the past ten years. The new home of the bank is said to be one of the finest in the state.

BANK ROBBER CAPTURED

Mount Vernon, Ill., November 5.—Fourteen hundred and twelve dollars was stolen and recovered a few minutes after a daylight robbery at the Jefferson State Bank here yesterday. While one of the robbers acted as lookout the other, with a revolver, forced the cashier, his assistant and the bookkeeper into the vault and turned the combination. The robbers then fled with all the cash in sight. While a posse gave chase, Dr. L. C. Morgan, president of the bank, released the men imprisoned. One robber, who had the money, was caught by a crowd of citizens and beaten before he was turned over to the sheriff. The lookout escaped.

PHILADELPHIA BANKER DIES

Arthur H. Christy, vice-president of the County Savings, Scranton, Pa., died recently after an illness of several months. In 1879 he was elected cashier of the County Savings, serving continuously in that capacity until June 1, 1912, when, upon the death of O. S. Johnson, he was elected vice-president.

Its properties were financed by the defunct bank. The liabilities and assets are each half a million.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

Bank clearings for the month of October showed a gain of 5 per cent over those of the corresponding month last year, showing that business at the financial institutions was larger than that of last year for the same period. Money from the country is beginning to come in to a fair extent. The demand for money during the past week was fair, with rates unchanged at and around 6 per cent on all kinds of loans.

Clearing House Reports on St. Louis Banks

The complete returns of the forty-four banks and trust companies reporting to the St. Louis Clearing House Association, given out last week, show an increase of $6,579,996 was made in the cash and exchange between August 9th and the latest call, that of October 21st. The aggregate cash and exchange of St. Louis banks and clearing houses on the latter date was $101,289,228, as compared with only $94,709,232 in August. The gain amounts to 6.9 per cent. The total deposits under the latest call were $304,634,567 as against $299,195,627 on the previous call, thus showing an increase of $5,438,940 or 1.8 per cent. The new statement shows a total of $233,911,466 under the head of loans and discounts as compared with $237,064,211 in August. The decrease amounts to $3,152,744 or 1.3 per cent. The total resources under the call are $406,392,876 as compared with $402,361,408, or an increase of $4,031,467. This amounts to 1 per cent.

A. A. Busch Heads Bank

At a special meeting of the board of directors of the South Side Bank of St. Louis, August A. Busch was elected president, succeeding his father, the late Adolphus Busch. A. C. F. Meyer, heretofore second vice-president, was elected first vice-president; Henry Menzenwerth, heretofore third vice-president, was elected second vice-president, and Charles Schroeter, president of the Schroeter Coal Company, was elected third vice-president. No other changes in the list of officers were made.

New Method to Enter Bond Coupons

When a bondholder presents bond coupons with checks and currency at the receiving teller's window of all the St. Louis banks hereafter, the amount of the coupon will be entered on the last page of his pass book. The page will be headed "collections." The banks will send the coupon to the corporation issuing it and to the trust company in charge of the particular series of bond presented. On the return of the coupon's value the amount will be credited to the depositor. When the latter next brings his pass book, the sum will be entered to his credit on the line following the new deposit. United States, state and municipal bond coupons will be entered as credit.

W. C. Redfield in St. Louis

William C. Redfield, secretary of commerce, was in St. Louis on Saturday of last week and Sunday. On Saturday morning he was the center of a conference between bankers and business men and a luncheon in his honor was given at the St. Louis Country Club at noon by John F. Shepley, president of the Commercial Club. On Saturday night he was the guest of the Commercial Club at a banquet at the St. Louis Club, where he delivered an address on "Ideals of Commerce." Sunday afternoon, at the residence of Tom Randolph, president of the National Bank of Commerce, whose guest he was while in St. Louis, a reception and entertainment were held, that he might meet many of the financial and business men of the city. Mr. Redfield has been touring the South and West in line with the policy of the Wilson administration to get in touch with trade conditions, and the commercial bodies of the cities where he has appeared have given him enthusiastic receptions.

Bankers Trust Wins Suit

The Bankers Trust of St. Louis will have to pay to the city of St. Louis only $21,946.42 personal taxes for 1912 instead of twice that amount, following the filing of Circuit Judge Cave's court last week of a stipulation for judgment in the suit of Edmond Koeln, city collector, against the trust company. The company also has agreed to pay $438.93 collector's fees and $1,097.34 attorney's fees. The trust company, in its 1912 tax return, assessed its personal property at $2,000,000, of which half was capital. The company claimed a 50 per cent exemption. The state board of equalization allowed the exemption, but Koeln subsequently doubled the assessment. The bank declined to pay and was sued.

Condition of Kansas City Banks

The condition of the banks of Kansas City, as revealed by the statements called for on October 21st, shows no conspicuous departure from the condition shown by the last report except in the matter of deposits in national banks. These show a falling off of about $4,500,000. Cash and sight exchange are about $700,000 greater than on August 9th, while the loan item is about $800,000 smaller, and total resources show a decrease of about $600,000.

Houston, secretary of agriculture, has been invited to be one of the guests of honor at the annual Missouri farmers' week to be held by the State Board of Agriculture and the College of Agriculture at the University of Missouri January 12th-16th, and it is believed that he will accept. After a New Bank

Attorney J. J. Lewis, who is trustee for the Security Bank of Ravenden Springs, Ark., is lending his efforts to get another bank established there. The people are in need of a bank and owing to the crop shortage last year and some overdrafts, the bank had to suspend business, but from reports of the trustee none of the depositors will lose any money in the failure. W. P. Rice, capitalist of Pennsboro, Mo., and Mr. Lewis held a business meeting at Ravenden Springs with the business men of the town and arrangements were made to establish a new bank with a capital of $10,000, the citizens of Ravenden Springs putting up $5,000 of this amount and Mr. Rice furnishing the other $5,000.

Editorial Comment

VANDERLIP'S ERRONEOUS CONCLUSIONS

Not any of the many things said by F. A. Vanderlip in his banquet address in Chicago, before the investment bankers and their guests, was so promptly and earnestly combated as the charge that the government contemplated the issue of fiat money under the Glass-Owen bill should it become a law. His central bank platitudes were taken with indulgence and no suspicion whatever that they seriously would "confuse legislation" at Washington, which he said was not his intention.

The general and special definition of "fiat" money in this country is paper currency of government issue which is made legal tender by fiat, or law, and does not represent or is not based upon specie and contains no promise of redemption. It isn't thought that Mr. Vanderlip meant anything more offensive in his intimations than this, although many persons place "fiat" and "wildcat" currency in the same class and hold the terms to be synonymous.

To a careful student of the bill Mr. Vanderlip's conclusions would appear to be wrong. There is nothing of a fiat nature in the notes which may be issued under the administration bill. Under the plan the notes, which are termed federal reserve notes, will be issued by the government through the federal reserve board and the federal reserve agents at the various reserve banks. But these notes can be issued only to the banks when the latter shall have deposited in the federal reserve bank at Washington approved commercial paper worth to the amount of the note issue. The banks through which the notes are to be put out must have as a reserve at least 33⅓ per cent of the amount in gold, held as additional security, and when those notes are issued they become the obligation of the bank using them, in addition to being the obligation of the government. In other words, they are secured to the extent of 133 per cent. These notes, unlike the old United States notes, will be receivable by the government in payment for public taxes and custom dues and all other government credits. One of the best provisions in the bill is that these notes, if they are received in the course of business by the other regional banks, must be immediately returned to the bank from which they are issued—indicated by the number which must be placed on every note, and offered up for cancellation. No other reserve bank can keep them except on the payment of a 10 per cent tax. This means that when the notes have done their work they are immediately taken out of circulation, which is one of the true functions of real currency.

The federal reserve notes provided in the pending currency bill are redeemable in gold or lawful money and consequently have full promise of redemption. They are not a legal tender except in payment of government dues and they are secured by 100 per cent of commercial paper, a 33⅓ per cent reserve of gold, or lawful money, and are in addition a first lien on all the assets of the federal reserve bank paying them out. They are better than national bank notes in that they have much more security, and no one considers a national bank note "fiat" paper.

Provision for the note issue is made in section 17 of the pending bill, which any banker can read in complete refutation of the "fiat" charges brought by Mr. Vanderlip.

THE JEWS AND MODERN CAPITALISM

Werner Sombart, Germany's greatest research economist, has given to the world a volume of strict importance. The 400 page production is entitled "The Jews in Modern Capitalism," and is written in a lucid, flowing style. Sombart is an artist as well as a scholar. He has combined reason with imagination evidencing a true gift not often found among the German professors. In Germany from 50 to 75 of all those engaged in any kind of commerce are Jews. In many of the leading cities of Europe it is the same. It has been claimed by many writers that half the Jews in Berlin have gone over to the Christian faith, and even Dr. Werner, a rabbi in Munich, places the number at 120,000. Dr. Sombart in fixing the place of the Jew in modern capitalism disregards baptisms and intermarriages. He cites many cases where men appear on the scene as Christians yet in reality are Jews. The author attributes to the Jew the fact that northern Europe succeeded southern Europe as the center of economic life. He traces the parallelism between the wanderings of the Jew and the economic development of nations. His attempt to show relationship is interesting and convincing. It was they that introduced trading upon a large scale in England, at Leipzig and in the Levant. New commodities almost always had first introduction at their hand. To the Jew is ascribed the predominating influence in gold producing countries. Always they were keen colonial settlers, as in India, Australia and America. Considerable space is devoted to show why America owes much of her development to the race. Dr. Sombart credits the Jew as a leader among purveyors, financiers, and to have originated securities as such and established the business of buying and selling them. Many names of those who lead in these fields, together with their accomplishments, fill the pages. To a Jew it ought to be the most interesting and instructive reading in the world. The aptitude of the Jew for modern capitalism has many fine examples also. The author explains his ideas of capitalism and the function of the capitalistic undertaker. He treats of their linguistic ability and shows how they have profited in all nations by being aliens at important times. The Jewish religion and characteristics are treated comprehensively, as is the race problem.

Another valuable work on the same subject is Dr. Ruppin's "The Jews of To-day." Ruppin believes, contrary to Sombart, that "the structure of Judaism, once so solid, is crumbling away before our eyes." The reader should have both books to arrive at the candid truth. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York, publish Dr. Sombart's work at $5.00 and Henry Holt & Co. publish Dr. Ruppin's.

POSITION OF THE BANKERS

It seems to be the purpose of some to convey the impression that the banking interests are unalterably opposed to the Owen-Glass currency measure. It is difficult to conceive of anything farther from the truth. It even has been intimated in some quarters that the bankers do not favor any legislation along currency lines at this time.

The last charge is so utterly absurd as to render serious discussion of it unnecessary. The position of the majority of financiers is that the currency measure is fundamentally sound and that the serious defects of the present system will be taken care of by the enactment of the bill into law. Certain features of the measure, of course, require amendment in order to make the plan acceptable, and the consensus of opinion among those who have given the matter close study is that these changes will be made and that the ultimate result will be fairly satisfactory to all concerned.

The ill-advised statements which have been circulated concerning the attitude of the banking fraternity towards the proposed law are most unfortunate, for they have had a tendency to engender public prejudice against the banks and to give the idea that the government is hostile to the moneyed interests. This is an erroneous impression which should be corrected at once.

The administration is endeavoring to pass a banking and currency law which will fit the needs of the country and in this effort has evidenced a willingness at all times to listen to the advice of men trained in financial matters, a fact which ought effectively to dispel any notion that the government has a grudge against the bankers.

OBJECTS TO METHODS OF WALL STREET WHOLESALERS

John E. Blunt, Jr., vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust, in his report as chairman of the investment bankers' committee on railroad bonds, registered a protest against the methods employed by big Wall Street bond wholesalers. He said:

"When corporations reach the size of our great railroads they feel that there are only one or two, or at most three or four investment houses or institutions in this country where their large financial requirements can be taken care of.

"I want to say that in the main I have a high opinion of these large institutions; they have performed, and do perform, a most valuable public service, but as a distributor of bonds, coming in contact as I do with the actual investor, I must repeat that the present method of handling railroad bonds is far from satisfactory from our point of view.

"I should mention as one of the chief objections the great haste in getting out these large bond issues. To illustrate:

"We receive a telegram from the issuing house that it has bought 10, 20, 30 or more million bonds, as the case may be, of a well-known railroad company. The maturity and price of the bonds are given, possibly as much information as to the security as can be contained in the balance of a fifty or seventy-five word telegram. Nothing is said as to the actual cost or value of the property, and it is practically offered on the name of the issuing company or guarantor. We are beginning to feel, however, that no matter how good a name may be to-day its value at maturity of these bonds, forty, fifty or one hundred years hence, is a serious question, and in proof of this we have only to point to the change in the credit standing of some of our greatest railroads in the past few years.

"Yet an immediate answer to this telegram is requested. We sometimes learn in an indirect way that the bonds are already 'commanding a premium,' and we must 'get in quick.' I might say, however, that this premium frequently vanishes by the time the bonds are ready for delivery. In most cases delivery is made in the form of temporary certificates and oftentimes the mortgage has not been drawn when the bonds are sold. We feel that in justice both to ourselves and our clients we ought to know something about the real value of the security before purchasing, and snapshot decisions are not conducive to this end.

"I think that an effort should be made to get away from what might be termed the 'stock exchange influence on bonds,' which looks principally for a quick turn. Rather, everything should be done in placing an issue of bonds to insure a satisfactory investment to the ultimate purchaser, and not the temporary success of the loan as far as the issuing houses and their immediate friends are concerned."

DEFUNCT BANK TO REOPEN

Complete rehabilitation of the Palo Alto (Cal.) Building and Loan Association, the corporation which failed ten months ago through the manipulations of former State Senator Black of Palo Alto, who now is serving a term in the state prison for his embezzlement, has been effected, according to the statement of an expert San Francisco accountant. The association again has been placed on a sound basis and a 7 per cent dividend has been declared on the installment stock. The following board of directors has been re-elected to manage the institution: Professor C. H. Gilbert, James Frazer, Professor J. O. Griffin, C. O. King, Professor Arthur B. Clark, Miss C. S. Stolenberg, W. C. Thoits, James S. Hutchinson and George W. Mosher. The directors have brought the total assets of the association up to $511,000, which makes the Palo Alto association one of the ten largest and most prosperous building and loan associations in California.

ATLANTA BANKS SHOW GAIN OF FIVE MILLIONS

Deposits in Atlanta (Ga.) banks on October 25th reached a high-water mark, exceeding those of the corresponding day a year ago by more than $5,000,000. The deposits aggregated the enormous sum of $34,896,667.93 as compared to $29,426,074.97, the total deposits on Saturday, October 26, 1912, making the gain exactly $5,470,592.93. It is believed that this year's bank deposits and clearings will break all previous records. The marked increase of deposits is accredited to the early marketing of the cotton crop, which is one of the largest in years. Movement of the staple has just started at a good price and there is every indication that this year's crop will net a tremendously large sum. Other crops also are good and the season is one of great prosperity.

AMENDED BILL FILED IN BANK SUIT

An amended and supplemented bill was filed Tuesday in the circuit court by John Frederick Wallach and other minority stockholders in the defunct Chicago National Bank, one of the banks which went down in the 1905 crash, which swept away a number of the so-called John R. Walsh institutions. Cornelius K. G. Billings, banker, and a director in the bank, is the principal defendant in the proceedings, which were begun originally to enforce his liability and that of the other directors for their alleged failure to exercise vigilance in their capacity as directors.

KANSAS CITY BANKERS CLUB MEETS

The Bankers Club of Kansas City held a dinner at the Hotel Baltimore last week at which the members of the Kansas City Chapter, American Institute of Banking, were the invited guests. P. W. Goebel, president of the Commercial National and of the Kansas City Clearing House Association, gave some wholesome advice to the young bankers. He also told of the reforms which had been accomplished by a revision of the entire constitution of the A. B. A. and continued:

"There have been more false reports about the discussions of the association and its resolution concerning the currency bill than anything I ever saw. The papers, some of them, said that the association 'denounced the bill, called it socialistic' and 'charged the administration with repudiation.' Mr. Hepburn did say, 'If it can compel you, a private corporation, to invest 20 per cent of your capital in a reserve bank, or some other institution, it also can compel you to invest your whole capital, which is socialistic in its tendency.' But does that denounce the government? The American Bankers Association did not and does not denounce it. It is as patriotic as any other organization in the country or any citizen. The association had no idea of criticising the government. We believe that the step is in the right direction. We may differ as to its effect, but if it becomes a law, and is so declared by the courts, we cheerfully will bow to it and obey it."

Beside the Kansas City Chapter, the members of the "Bankers Transit Entertainment Association of the Great Southwest," an organization which was formed on the special train en route to Boston, were invited guests. W. J. Bailey of Atchison, Kan., who acted as president of this moving association, made a brief speech detailing the social side of the trip. J. D. Covey, president of the Arkansas Bankers Association, and several others from adjoining states, made brief remarks. Joseph C. Jordan, president of the Kansas City Chapter, outlined the work of the organization for this winter while C. W. Allendoerfer, assistant cashier of the First National, who is a member of the executive council of the national body, spoke of the work of the annual convention in Richmond, Va., last September. H. L. Larson made a report on the work of the convention at Richmond and W. H. Potts told of the social features which abounded on the trip and during the convention.

Cashier Bob Love of the State National, Guthrie, Okla., now is cashier of the First National, Will Wilson, the former cashier, having entered a line of commercial business. No successor has yet been named for Mr. Love.

Cleveland

Central States News Letter

Cincinnati

William Ganson Rose addressed the members of Cleveland Chapter, American Institute of Banking, at their meeting in the Rose building on Tuesday evening of last week. "The Profession of Business" was the subject of Mr. Rose's talk. "In no previous century has business assumed so important a place in life," he said. "Never before has it been the object of so much respect and study. Never before has it so strongly influenced government, education, religion and culture. To make progress to-day, the business man must know a good deal, not only about his own business, but about everything in general." Mr. Rose said the nation's ideal was the business man, and in his opinion the ideal man was not one that could do four men's work, but one that could keep forty men busy. He declared the world workers are divided into two classes, the active and the passive. "Do not wait for opportunity to knock at your door, but knock at the door of opportunity. The day is past where experience and length of service figure in your promotion. To-day your success in the business world depends on your executive ability," declared the speaker. He pointed out the benefits derived from team work in a business organization and advised all to work together both for their own and their employers' welfare. He prophesied that in a few years all political positions would be filled with trained business men. Talks on "Short Cuts in the Paying Teller's Cage" were made by H. F. Pratt, H. W. Penning and F. M. Horton. C. L. Corcoran of the Central National, president of the chapter, presided at the meeting.

Cincinnati State Banks Present Good Showing

The statements of the state banks and trust companies of Cincinnati, under the call for condition at the close of business October 21st, show the state banks in fine condition.

Since the September 4th call the state banks on the same capital stock investment have increased their surplus and undivided profit accounts from $6,713,373 to $6,866,241; reserve funds from $9,949,701 to $10,282,749; total assets from $79,248,910 to $79,959,945; deposits from $60,234,945 to $60,734,707; loans from $33,992,626 to $34,153,128; stocks and bonds from $24,768,956 to $27,319,658. Since the call of November 26, 1912, surplus and undivided profits increased $123,731, reserves $546,112, assets $2,877,819, deposits $2,146,586 and stocks and bonds $5,007,194, but loans decreased $1,256,772.

Percentage of reserves against deposits compare as follows: October 21, 1913, 17.07 per cent; September 4, 1913, 16.52 per cent; November 26, 1912, 16.65 per cent, and shows the banks in a better reserve position than on either of the other dates. The required reserve is 15 per cent. The combined statements of national and state banks of this city on October 21st, this year, shows capital invested, $29,347,300; surplus and undivided profits, $16,496,256; reserves, $25,216,838; total assets, $182,480,478; deposits, $127,407,089; loans, $87,610,821. The per cent of reserve of national banks was 26.75; required 25 per cent.

Governor Cox Addresses Private Bankers

Governor Cox of Ohio addressed the convention of the Ohio Private Bankers Association at Columbus last week. Regarding the Warnes tax law, he said that it would search out hidden wealth and make old-time dodgers carry their just proportion of public expense

In speaking of the supervision of private banks, Governor Cox said that the demand of the age was for effective supervision, and he defended and approved the supervision of all banks, claiming every honest and solvent banker should welcome "the certificate of solvency and honesty" that was issued by the state after the bank had been inspected. The state was interested in the development of legitimate enterprises and no solvent banker had or would have any reason to fear the careful scrutiny the state was planning to give. He said the incorporated state bank rose to the dignity of a national bank when the state began inspection and the same would be seen in the case of the private banker. The legislation of the past year, he asserted, had met in a practical way the demand of the people, had helped quiet their uneasiness and had not harmed or impaired the interests of a single legitimate business enterprise in the state. The legislation was designed to conserve, not to destroy. Other speakers were State Bank Superintendent Emery Lattanner, Judge H. W. Harter of Canton, and retiring president, J. L. Lewis, of Harpster. The following were elected officers for the ensuing year: President, Fay Baldwin of Greenfield; vice-president, W. A. Blicke of Bucyrus; secretary-treasurer, J. A. Williams of Nevada.

Bank Building to Go at Public Sale

Pointing out the irregularities and mistakes in the bid of the depositors' committee, which rendered it impossible of acceptance by the courts, and asserting a desire to do justice to all concerned, Judge E. B. Kinkead of the county court on Tuesday of last week threw out all the bids for the Columbus Savings and Trust building, Columbus, and ordered a public sale of the premises at not less than two-thirds of the appraised value, at a date to be fixed. Considering the debts of the bank, the court did not believe the depositors had enough pledges signed to meet the demands which it believes will come. Judge Kinkead also believes that there is some question whether a corporation with nominal capital will be able to borrow the amount the depositors expected to borrow and use in paying off the claims of the depositors who would not enter the scheme.

Ohio Notes

H. E. Small of Lima, Ohio, who has been an assistant in the state department of banking with headquarters in Cleveland for the past three years, has been named as an examiner in western Ohio by State Superintendent Lattanner.

The Amherst Bank Company, which decided on a voluntary liquidation last July, paid its first dividend of 70 per cent last week to almost 1,000 depositors. State Senator Carl D. Frieholin, in charge of the liquidation, claims the depositors will get 100 cents on the dollar and may get 6 per cent interest.

The directors of the German Bank (building) Company and the German National, Marietta, by joint conference, have made a contract for an additional elevator for occupants of the building, the public, and also for the patrons of the safe deposit department of the German National, which will be constructed on the second floor of the building, thus placing it entirely above flood level.

Group Three, Ohio Bankers Association, met at Delta on Tuesday of last week. The program included addresses by Governor James M. Cox of Ohio; Emery Lattanner, state superintendent of banks; A. D. Welton, general secretary of the National Citizens League of Chicago, and S. B. Rankin, secretary of the Ohio Bankers Association.

Richmond Bank Deposits Increase Two Millions.

Deposits in Richmond (Va.) banks since the last government call for a statement on August 9th increased more than $2,000,000. Bumper crops with high prices, especially in the tobacco section and the high standing of the larger Richmond banks with out-of-town depositors, are given as the chief reasons for the increase.

New President for Buffalo Bank

Clifford Hubbell, for many years cashier of the Marine National, Buffalo, N. Y., has resigned to accept the presidency of the Central National, succeeding George F. Rand, who resigned that he might devote his entire time to the affairs of the Marine and Columbia National banks. No changes in the other officers of the Central National is contemplated, but in the Marine National Henry J. Auer, who for over thirty years has been connected with that institution, was elected a vice-president, and Norman P. Clement, son of the late S. M. Clement, was elected cashier in place of Mr. Hubbell. Percy W. Darby, who for some years has had charge and been manager of the Marine National's safe deposit vaults, was elected assistant cashier. The resources of the Marine National on October 21st were nearly $40,000,000, which is by far the largest in the bank's history. The new Marine building, now nearing completion, will be ready for occupancy, it is expected, around the holidays.

$93,000 Judgment Against Glazier

A judgment for $93,622.22, was given the Title Guarantee and Surety Company, Ann Arbor, Mich., against former State Treasurer Frank P. Glazier by Judge Kinne last week, is the largest judgment ever recorded in the county. The amount represents what the surety company paid to the state as the result of Glazier's defalcations while state treasurer, this company having furnished bonds to the extent of $150,000. Of this amount, the company paid the state $7,590.46 as its share of the $685,000 of Glazier's indebtedness. The company sued for $120,000, including interest to date, and the $15,000 of liabilities which other surety companies had turned over. Glazier did not appear.

Central States Notes

Louisville bankers met on Friday of last week to hear a discussion of the application of the new income tax to be made by L. W. Botts, vice-president of the Fidelity and Columbia Trust.

Everett L. Augustus, who recently was elected by the board of directors of the American National, Louisville, as assistant to the president, Logan C. Murray, and credit auditor, assumed his duties recently. For the past three years he had been assistant clearing house examiner and assistant national bank examiner with Percy H. Johnson.

The report of the Postal Savings Bank of Detroit, shows deposits of $440,408, a gain of $189,655 over those of last year.

The Hamilton National, Fort Wayne, Ind., will erect a sixteen-story office and bank building next year.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by F. C. Redmond

Minneapolis police have begun an investigation into what they believe may be an international bank swindling scheme, following the finding of a packet of sixty checks, drawn on the Imperial Bank of Canada, for amounts totaling more than $2,500. The checks were found by J. T. McGowan, a bartender, in the Log Cabin, a saloon of G. T. Grover. They were turned over to the police. The checks were all made out in the same handwriting and were signed "D. P. Lawton," in a round flowing hand. Thirty of them were filled in for amounts ranging from $72 to $85. It is suspected the packet was dropped by a man or group of men who contemplated putting in operation a bank swindling scheme. Police say the checks bear every evidence of forgeries.

New Cashier North St. Paul Bank

John Kalscheuer has bought an interest in the First State Bank of North St. Paul, which was closed for a few hours on Tuesday of last week following the disappearance of A. E. Nelson, cashier, and has assumed active management. Mr. Kalscheuer has been in the retail piano business in St. Paul, and prior to coming to St. Paul, sixteen years ago, was in banking affairs for many years. All the old officers and directors will remain as heretofore, except Mr. Kalscheuer, who now is cashier and manager of the bank in place of A. E. Nelson.

School Children to Learn Saving

St. Paul is to adopt the school savings system as a means of stimulating thrift among pupils, according to an announcement made last week by T. F. Chapman, of the States Savings Bank, who will have charge. "We expect to begin work next week," said Mr. Chapman, "and to operate it indefinitely. On certain days, as arranged by the school board, we will go to a specified school and open a temporary savings bank for a few hours. The children will be invited to purchase savings bank stamps in small amounts. A book of these stamps amounts to $5. When this sum is reached the deposit begins to draw interest at the rate of 3½ per cent, and after that is handled as a regular savings account. We will endeavor to encourage each child to save for some definite purpose—such as a vacation trip, and to make some sacrifice to accomplish this end.

Income Tax in Effect

St. Paul banking houses are now working under the provisions of the new income tax law by deducting and withholding from payment 1 per cent of all interest on mortgages, bonds, deeds of trust, etc. E. J. Lynch, collector of internal revenue in St. Paul, believes that from corporation sources alone the state of Minnesota should turn over to the federal government through this tax about $1,250,000 during the next year. This is based on the returns from the old corporation tax law.

Duluth Clearings Smaller

Bank clearings in Duluth for October were $6,126,655.24. For October, 1912, there were $9,077,732.34. Officials of the clearing house credit the difference to the grain movement, which was very heavy in September this year, but light in October, while in 1912 the conditions were reversed.

Organize Bank at New London

The Farmers State, New London, was organized recently. The new institution is to be a branch of a system of banks under the control of the Sterling Security Company with offices at 333 Andrus building, Minneapolis. The company retains the bank stock in trust and in lieu issues its own stock to the local shareholders, making the whole line of banks a profit sharing system. James J. Wise, president of the Sterling Security Company, was elected president of the new bank; Nels Quam, vice-president, and Mr. Anderson from Mankato, cashier. The board of directors are Messrs. Wise, Quam, Anderson, Griffith of Minneapolis, Oliver Larson, Wm. Peterson and D. J. Price. A new building will be erected in the spring. For the present the company has leased the Paulson building for one year and will open for business as soon as the fixtures are installed.

F. Lemmon, president of the First State, Lemmon, S. D., since the establishment of the institution with the birth of the city, has sold his entire stock interest to J. C. Kinney of Wibaux, Mont., and has ceased to be identified with it in any way, the change taking effect immediately. Mr. Kinney is president of the First National of Wibaux, holding the position since the bank's organization eight years ago. He also is connected with the Glendive State, which he organized subsequent to the incorporation of the Wibaux institution. Although he still retains his Montana bank interests, Mr. Kinney will make Lemmon his home much of the time and will have direct charge of the bank's management.

Northwest Notes

Jerome W. Wheeler, president of the Capital Trust, St. Paul, is among those mentioned to succeed Eli S. Warner as president of the Association of Commerce next month. His name has been presented to the nominating committee.

A. E. Nelson, former cashier of the First State of St. Paul, who disappeared more than a month ago, is being sought in Chicago by the American Surety Company, by which he was bonded for $10,000.

The $300,000 road bonds for the chain of highways to be built throughout Itasca county, Minn., were sold at the meeting of the county commissioners last week to the Duluth Security Company at 4½ per cent, and a bonus of $10,750.

The Merchants Bank of Crookston, Minn., has installed a large clock at their corner which will be a great convenience to the citizens.

N. F. Banfield, First National, Austin, Minn., who was in Washington recently representing the country bankers, urged the senate banking and currency committee to change the bill so that farm mortgages running five years could be taken by banks as security for loans. The bill now limits such mortgages to one year and the amount of such loans to 25 per cent of a bank's capital and surplus.

A. E. Reese on November 1st became assistant cashier of the First National, Biwabik, Minn., succeeding Anton Kovarth, who resigned and will leave for southern points.

BIG PLANT TO BE OPENED

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 7.—A considerable gathering of financial men, others identified in various ways with hydro-electrical development in this country, as well as the secretary of war, senate committee on commerce and house committee on rivers and harbors, is expected here November 13th. Their presence will be in connection with the chamber of commerce celebration, marking resumption of navigation on the Tennessee river and opening of the ten million dollar dam and power house of the late Anthony N. Brady, of New York and Albany. Mr. Brady, the original promoter of the big project, did not live to see its completion. In fact he never visited the site where his millions were put into harnessing the Tennessee and furnishing equipment for production of 65,000 horsepower. He planned to be here, however. His son, Nicholas Brady, will come and bring with him a number of friends and other prominent men. Thomas Murray, vice-president of the New York Edison Company, who has been designing electrical engineer of the project, will attend.

Aside from the value of the Hale's Bar hydro-electric plant to the entire vicinity because of its great production of power, this project has a vast bearing on the general plan of improving the Tennessee river. It gives year round navigation over a large stretch of this important stream. With other projects of similar character that have been authorized and the plans completed by army engineers, there will be uninterrupted navigation from Tennessee river points to those on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, and to the Orient, via the Panama canal.

For seven years work has been in progress at Hale's Bar, under supervision of the secretary of war, although the government itself was building only the lock at the west end of the dam for raising and lowering boats. The project is now complete. Boats have passed through the lock. The dam is finished, the water has been impounded behind it and is now flowing over the spillway. All machinery is in place in the power house and the final steps are being taken preparatory to starting the water wheels and generators. Power will be generated during the visit, and inspection of the large party will comprise many visitors from a distance, and local people. The celebration will terminate with a grand banquet at the new Signal Mountain Inn, near a beautiful point overlooking a portion of the Tennessee river, which has been cleared of famous obstacles to navigation, such as the "suck," "pot," and "skillet," by the impounding of water at the dam.

Work of constructing the dam at Hale's Bar proved one of the most difficult and extended tasks in the history of hydro-electric development in the United States. Owing to the peculiar formation of the limestone underlying the river bed, progress was slow and expensive. There is, however, no dam in the world on which the inspection has been so rigid and so much care has been taken with a view to its absolute permanency.

The dam is built of Cyclopean concrete, 1,200 feet long, at an average height of 52 feet; is 11 feet 4 inches wide at the top, and varies in width at the bottom, according to depth of foundation, from 57 to 64 feet. The upstream face of the dam is vertical; the downstream sloping. There are 75 to 80 cubic yards of concrete to each lineal foot of the dam. The lock also is of Cyclopean concrete, with walls much higher than the dam. It is 60 feet wide and 300 feet long inside the gates and remarkable for the great size and height of the downstream gates, which are 50 feet high, the highest single lift in the world. Each leaf weighs 129 tons.

The power plant is of 65,000 horsepower capacity. It would run 20 large cement mills of 2,000 barrels a day, or 25 large cotton mills.

GROUP THREE AT ST. JOSEPH

Group Three, Missouri Bankers Association, met at the Elks Club, St. Joseph, on Wednesday morning. The meeting was called to order by John W. Broadus of St. Joseph, who is chairman of the group. Following the invocation by Frank E. Day, E. H. Zimmerman, president of the St. Joseph Clearing House Association, delivered the address of welcome and W. S. Wells, president Wells Banking Co., Platte City, Mo., the response. Addresses were made by Geo. E. Allen of New York on "Fundamentals of Banking" and by Wm. G. Edens of the Central Trust, Chicago, on "The Banker's Interest in Agriculture and Road Improvement." The morning session concluded with a discussion on practical banking subjects lead by Wm. McC. Martin, assistant trust officer Mississippi Valley Trust, St. Louis. The afternoon session was held at the Benton Club. Henry W. Yates, president Nebraska National, Omaha, spoke on the Owen-Glass currency bill. Among the entertainment features of this meeting were a luncheon at the Benton Club and theater in the evening at the Lyceum. H. W. Montgomery of Skidmore is secretary of Group Three.

MADE HEAD OF TRUST COMPANY

Mord Carter, vice-president of the Continental National, Indianapolis, Ind., has been elected president of the State Savings Bank and Trust Company, which was organized last June. The new company is in possession of its charter, but has not yet begun active business, pending a further sale of the stock. The temporary quarters are at 143 East Market Street, but a definite location will be chosen in the near future. Mr. Carter has a large acquaintance with the bankers throughout Indiana, having assisted in the organization of the Indiana Bankers Association, in which he held an official position. For four years he was a member of the lower house of the state legislature. He formerly lived at Danville, Ind., where he was president of the First National of Danville for ten years and manager of a trust company.

SOME OBJECTIONS TO CURRENCY BILL

First National, Joliet, has sent an open letter to Senators Lewis and Sherman at Washington entitled, "Some Objections to the Currency Bill," and probably the handiwork of the president, George Woodruff. "In conclusion," says Mr. Woodruff, much as a minister might say:

"We feel that the administration and congress are to be heartily congratulated upon their activity in taking up the campaign for currency legislation which was started so many years ago by the bankers and we look forward to the passage of a law that will be workable, fair and to the best interests of all classes."

Application for the organization of the Luling (Texas) National with a capital of $25,000 has been favorably acted on by the department of banking at Washington. The incorporators are Dr. S. J. Francis, Carl Waller, George H. Lampkin, L. F. Karnstadt and T. T. Brown.

Individual deposits in the national banks of Cincinnati on October 21st show an increase of $707,807.82 since August 9th. The deposits now are $39,167,617.77.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

Iowans are daily becoming more prominent in the currency debate now before congress. Not only have Senator Cummins and Congressman Prouty submitted bills but A. F. Dawson, president of the First National at Davenport, has forwarded a draft of a measure upon request of the banking and currency committee of the senate. Mr. Dawson was secretary to the late Senator Allison and afterwards served in congress. He is an authority on financial matters. When the country bankers went to Washington to converse with the representatives on currency matters, Mr. Dawson was one of the delegation. It is said that Mr. Dawson's measure provides for one central bank to be controlled by the government and fifteen branches, which would be in many respects the same general idea as that embodied in the Owen-Glass measure. Iowa bankers are feeling much better over the outlook. They believe that the request for a bill from Mr. Dawson means a disposition to evolve a plan which shall be in accord with the ideas of the banking and financial interests of the country.

Decrease in Deposits

The national banks of Des Moines show a falling off in deposits following the recent call as compared with the last preceding call. However, bankers point out that this is but an indication of the fact that money which was formerly in banks has been invested instead in beef and live stock. The drouth in Kansas and the forced rushing of Kansas cattle on the market proved highly pleasing to the Iowa farmers from a financial standpoint. They took advantage of the opportunities presented and purchased at low prices. This stuff will be fed and sold at high prices and the money thus realized will flow back into the vaults of the banks. The country banks have not been depositing so heavily in city banks recently and the effect was shown when the totals were computed at the recent request of the controller.

Bank Robbers Unsuccessful

Bank robbers made an attempt to get the money within the vaults of the New Market Savings one night last week but were not successful. H. J. Hancock, a business man at New Market, was passing the bank about 2 o'clock in the morning when two strangers appeared, pointed a gun at him and marched him to an empty box car, within which he was confined. It was 4 o'clock before he escaped from the box car and notified the town marshal. When the bank officials arrived they found evidence of an attempted robbery, as efforts had been made to force the combination. However, no explosives had been used. Secretary P. W. Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association was notified of the attempt and dispatched Detective Gus Patek, Iowa representative of the Burns agency, to the scene.

Bank Crook Asks Pardon

Secretary Hall has been asked to use his influence in favor of a pardon for Elmer Salyard, better known in Iowa as E. Southern, who is being held in Tacoma under charges of passing bogus checks. Salyard was convicted only a short time ago and it is unlikely that Secretary Hall will be very active in his behalf. The I. B. A. got on the man's trail when he passed a forged check on the Mechanics Savings Bank of Des Moines. He was about to be arrested when he heard that officers were after him and he made his escape in an automobile. He was located at Denver. When he was placed under arrest, Salyard was discovered to be wanted at Tacoma. Officers took charge of his big automobile. In his letter he puts up a plea to Secretary Hall, emphasizing the fact that his wife, daughter of a well known St. Paul family, is grieving her life out on his account. She is in Tacoma also, he writes.

Many Automobiles in Iowa

That Iowa is prosperous may be well imagined from the fact that over 70,000 automobiles have been licensed by the Iowa state automobile department. This is a big increase over the number licensed in Iowa last year. Already notice has been sent out that applications for next year will be received and filed and the state department is preparing to do a record breaking business in 1914.

Bank Wins Law Suit

One of the most widely advertised damage cases ever tried in Iowa was finished at Waterloo last week when the Morrison bank won a $40,000 verdict against W. R. Jameson, formerly a banker at Waterloo. The Morrison bank sued for $50,000, alleging that it loaned one E. A. Boggs $62,000 with which he was to conduct the business of the Central Iowa Granite Company. The money was loaned, plaintiff claimed, upon a showing made by Boggs, who presented a letter of credit signed by Jameson. Later the Boggs concern failed and the Morrison bank was left out in the cold. The trial lasted several days and attracted attention all over the state.

"Lost" Money Creates Excitement

One thousand dollars, expressed by Wells Fargo from a Cedar Rapids bank to the bank at Elberon one day last week, caused a riot in the latter town when it turned up missing. The money had arrived the afternoon before but it was too late to deliver it and the package had been locked up in the depot. The following morning the agent could not find it. Visions of robbery floated through his mind and he called in the officers. Doors and windows, however, had not been disturbed and just as detective Gust Patek was about to be summoned the parcel was discovered over in one corner of the room.

Starnes, Minneapolis, secretary-treasurer.

FAVORS CURRENCY BILL

Newton D. Alling, vice-president of the Nassau National Bank of New York, thinks that the country check collection system will be revolutionized by the enactment of the proposed federal reserve act. He is strongly in favor of the pending currency measure.

"Opponents of the Owen-Glass currency bill," said Mr. Alling, "attack the clause regarding the collection of country checks, claiming that it is not only hostile to the interests of the country bankers, but also that the expense involved by the federal reserve banks assuming this collection without charge would be so great as to wipe out any profits that there might be in any other branch of the banking business. Those who take this view do not seem to grasp the fact that, if the federal reserve banks are organized to receive on deposit at par, and without charge for exchange or collection, checks and drafts drawn by any of their depositors, all expenses are swept away. Still more is this so when section 20, which requires the reserve of all member banks to be retained in the reserve bank in their region, is considered.

"The check drawn on a member bank would be offset by the checks which it sent to the federal bank for collection, just as checks now sent to a local clearing house are offset by those received from the clearing house by any member bank.

"It is high time that the banks of the country went out of the balance-swapping business and devoted their time to simple banking. The federal reserve act will eliminate all of this unnecessary expense, and will collect or exchange all of the checks of the country for one-twentieth or less of the cost of to-day, and the tariff on business will be removed entirely. President Wilson spoke truly when he said that this bill would 'strike the shackles off business.' When he signs this bill he will with one stroke of his pen remove all vexing problems of the collection of country checks."

INDIANA BANK BUYS BONDS

The Fletcher-American Bank of Indianapolis recently bought $140,000 worth of railroad refunding bonds, to run twenty-five years at 4½ per cent, from the city of Fort Wayne, for $142,455. The bonds are being issued to take up matured ones given the Grand Rapids & Indiana and the Lake Shore railroads for putting their roads into Fort Wayne twenty-five years ago.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

In the fifth and probably the last call of 1913 by the comptroller of the currency, sixteen Spokane banks show a substantial gain in deposits of $1,432,130.51 over the call of August 9th, a circumstance that bankers point to as indicative of much easier financial conditions in the Spokane country. Total deposits at the call of October 21st were $31,858,787.34. The large increase in deposits shows a better financial condition prevailing in Spokane and the surrounding territory. Good fall collections have helped swell the total and the crop movement has played a large part in boosting deposits. The statements show the Spokane banks to be in a healthy condition and money is much easier.

Postal receipts in Spokane for the year ended September 30th totaled $494,197, an increase of $14,577 or 3.03 per cent over the figures for the preceding year. According to the report issued for the Spokane division, which includes all first-class offices in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, every office made an increase, the average for the four states being 13.2 per cent.

Joseph Bailey, recently appointed cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, has succeeded M. M. Cook as secretary of the Spokane Clearing House Association, Mr. Cook having left the banking business. Mr. Bailey began his career in Spokane in 1903 with the Old National. He was with that institution for six years, resigning to accept the position of assistant cashier of the National Bank of Commerce when it was organized in 1909. He has been active in the work of the Spokane Chapter of the American Institute of Banking. He is one of the city's champion tennis players.

After a three months' trip through Europe and eastern United States, Aaron Kuhn, former president and now a director of the Traders National in Spokane, has returned with an optimistic attitude regarding financial and business conditions. "Financial conditions in the East are good," states Mr. Kuhn. "There is a keen demand for money, and the tariff does not appear to be making any difference. In Europe, Germany is of the opinion that she is going to profit by the tariff. Business is much better on the continent, although money is still high and this is holding back development." Mr. Kuhn will spend three weeks looking over the various banks in the Spokane country in which he is interested. He will then go to Chicago, but plans to be in Spokane in January in time for the annual meeting of the Traders National.

The Farmers State has opened for business at Stevensville, Mont., giving that town two banks. Elmer Johnson is cashier and Cyrus L. Franks is assistant cashier. The bank is capitalized at $20,000 and occupies an attractive, modern building.

Despite the fact that the Old National issued no $5 bills in its general circulation, the figures of the last statements show the bank's circulation to be $999,995, just $5 short of the even million. "This is the first time this has ever happened," states W. D. Vincent, cashier. "It is easily explained. Somebody tore a $10 bill in two and presented one-half to the government for redemption, and it was charged to our account. If the other half of the bill is not offered for redemption the bank is the gainer to the extent of $5."

C. H. March, banker and attorney of Litchfield, Minn., and Mrs. March, after visiting for several days with Mr. March's brothers, F. M. March, president of the National Bank of Commerce, and G. K. March, have returned East. Mr. March is a heavy stockholder in the National Bank of Commerce. Mr. March states that he finds business conditions in Spokane the best they have been in four years and looks for continued improvement.

Speaking of the investment market and business conditions, J. E. Ferris of the firm of Ferris & Hardgrove, Spokane investment bankers, states: "The bond market has improved materially during the last month and is on the up grade. An improved bond market is usually the first step in the direction of renewed business activity, as during every period of financial doubt and hesitancy, money ceases to be active in business development and is held in the large money centers. When financial doubt and hesitancy disappear, investors first turn to securities, such as bonds, and then toward new enterprises and development propositions."

EDMONTON NEWS

Officials of the land titles office in Edmonton estimate that the revenue from the unearned increment tax on increased land values, which became operative on October 27th, will amount to fully $1,000,000 during the first year. This money, it is expected, will come through the assurance fund, upon which the government relies in guaranteeing land titles under the Torrens act. Hon. Arthur L. Sifton, premier and acting treasurer of the province, placed the probable receipts at $210,000 in presenting his budget to the legislature.

One day's operation of the new law will show just how it works. The receipts of the land office in Edmonton on October 29th, a normal day so far as the volume of business transacted is concerned, amounted to $1,271, of which $44.85 was collected on the increment tax, the rest being attributed to assurance fund receipts, as provided for under the law previous to the enactment of the increment tax.

This outcome of increment tax is arrived at through the circumstance that whereas to escape payment on the assurance fund it has heretofore been to the profit of those registering transfers to make declarations of value at a figure lower than the actual value, it happens, by the workings of the increment law, that it now stands parties registering transfers in hand to make the declarations up to the full value, lest they later be made to pay 5 per cent upon amounts on which, by a lower declaration, they can now save one-fifth to one-tenth of one per cent.

A specific instance will probably show best how the circumstances work out. A firm of realty dealers in Edmonton sent to the land office for registration a parcel of Jasper Avenue property, the purchase of which had been commenced some time ago and which had only recently been completed and put into shape for transfer. The custom at the land office had been to accept the affidavit of parties registering as to the value of the parcel registered, and the assurance fund is collected upon a basis of 20 cents per $100 of the first $5,000 for increase shown in the value and 10 cents per $100 on subsequent increase. The amount given as the value of the property in the particular instance referred to was $40,000, which, in all probability, may have been the purchase price at some more or less distant date when the deal for the purchase was undertaken. But a comparison of the price set out in the declaration with the city assessment showed that the property, upon which the valuation for purposes of registration was being given at $40,000, actually appeared in the city assessment rate as being valued at $64,000.

When it was explained to the purchaser that the amount set out in his declaration as to the actual value of the land purchased would become a basis from which future increment would be calculated, and that while by leaving his estimate of the value of the land at $40,000 he temporarily escaped payment to the assurance fund of 20 cents per $100, or $5,000 of the $24,000, and 10 cents per $100 on the subsequent $19,000, he actually laid the foundation for the collection by the government at some future date when the next transfer would be made of increment tax of 5 per cent upon the whole of the $24,000, he immediately brought his statement of valuation up to a level with the city's assessment valuation, the province thereby netting $29 toward assurance fund which, under the old system, would not have come into the public treasury.

Another specific instance of the amounts thus brought to the province was the sale of a block of acreage property adjoining the western city limits, where the valuation of the quarter section, 160 acres, was given at $90,000, but upon comparison with the city's assessment, was shown to be worth $250,000, the assurance fund being benefited to the extent of the payment of assurance upon $160,000.

This gain in amount collected through the assurance fund is the greatest shown, so far, in the working of the increment tax law, lately passed by the Alberta legislature and now is so much discussed among realty men and others. The high assessment of Edmonton property, against which there was much protesting upon the part of speculative property-holders, is now being shown to those who are registering transfers as not an altogether unwelcome innovation, and, incidentally, it has the effect of preventing the government from collecting a large amount of tax on increment.

The law provides that for the purpose of ascertaining the first taxable increment the assessed value shall be assumed to be the previous value of land within any incorporated city, town or village, and that the difference between that amount and the sale price is the amount upon which increment tax shall be charged.

IOWA BANK BUYS BONDS

The Winneshiek County State Bank of Decorah, Iowa, took the entire block of bonds issued by Winneshiek County recently, amounting to $65,000. The fact that the bank did this against competition from powerful outside bidders is pretty good evidence of the institution's strength.

GIVEN JUDGMENT AGAINST BANK

Warren S. Smith of Ypsilanti has been given judgment amounting to $1,640.92 against the City National of Lansing, Mich., by a jury in the circuit court. The litigation arose over a draft mailed by the bank to Smith which he claims he never received. The bank refused to issue another draft for the amount and Smith brought suit.

BUY INTEREST IN NEBRASKA NATIONAL

An interest in the Nebraska National, Omaha, has been bought by F. W. Clarke, vice-president of the Stockyards National of the same city, and Charles F. Coffey, a director in the Stockyards National and president of the First National of Chadron. Henry W. Yates, Sr., remains as president.

NEW MICHIGAN BANK

Clarkston (Mich.) citizens have subscribed stock to the amount of $20,000 for the establishment of a bank. Since the failure of the Jossman institution, the place has been without a bank. Many of the stockholders are those who lost heavily in the crash. Papers of incorporation have been forwarded to Lansing and as soon as they are returned the new bank will begin business.

SPEAKS ON INCOME TAX

The Cleveland Association of Credit Men held its first noon dinner of the season in Hotel Statler Thursday. E. E. Newman, assistant secretary of the Cleveland Trust, discussed the working of the income tax. W. E. Clarke, president of the association, presided.

EXPECTS COMMITTEE REPORT MONDAY

Vice-President Marshall is of the opinion that the senate committee will make a unanimous report on the currency bill next Monday. It is difficult to determine, he states, whether or not final action will be taken at the special session.

DETROIT BANKER RESIGNS

Directors of the Old Detroit National, Detroit, have accepted the resignation of John Ballantyne, one of the bank's vice-presidents, who plans to engage in another line of business. Mr. Ballantyne has been in charge of the bank's credit department a number of years.

BANKER CELEBRATES GOLDEN WEDDING

R. M. Brasher, the veteran assistant cashier of the Cincinnati United States subtreasury, recently celebrated his golden wedding. He was presented with a huge stand of American Beauty roses by the assistant treasurer, George Puchta, and his fellow workers, with instructions to share both the flowers and good wishes with Mrs. Brasher. Mr. Brasher has served, with the exception of eight years, continuously for a period of thirty-eight years in the Cincinnati subtreasury.

IRONWOOD CREDITORS RECEIVE DIVIDEND

A dividend of 10 per cent, amounting to $44,000, has been paid to creditors of the Bank of Ironwood, Ironwood, Mich., by W. S. Baird, administrator. This is the first disbursement since the failure of the institution, seventeen months ago. The amount still due the creditors approximates $400,000.

The Security State Bank and Trust Company, Gatesville, Tex., has been organized with a capital of $50,000. W. A. Waldrop is president; Judge J. H. Arnold and R. D. A. Tharp, vice-presidents, and Dan Burt, cashier. It is proposed to open for business on November 10th.

Lynn T. Miller, for several years assistant cashier of the Commercial National of Ithaca, Mich., has accepted the position of cashier of the Central State Savings, Shepherd, Mich.

DEATH OF ROBERT E. JAMES

Easton, Pa., November 12.—The Easton Trust Company at Easton, Pa., has announced the death of its president, the Honorable Robert E. James, on the morning of Monday, November 10, 1913. Mr. James was one of the best known bankers in the United States. He had served his constituents acceptably in the Pennsylvania legislature and in her celebrated constitutional convention he took a very active part which, owing to his fine legal training, had great influence in shaping the present constitution. In the American Bankers Association his valued services were given in the Savings Bank Section and in the Trust Company Section far beyond the average. As chairman of a special committee, he created the present admirable constitution of the American Bankers Association which probably has not a rival among all the voluntary organizations of its kind at the present time. Mr. James served the Pennsylvania Bankers Association in varied official capacities and on committees, and was honored with the presidency of the organization. It was while attending the Pittsburgh convention of that association last summer that he was stricken and obliged to be conveyed to his home at Easton. Several surgical operations followed in close succession in an attempt to save his life, the principal attack being one of gall-stones. Mr. James recovered at times and gave hope to his friends that he soon would be well. At the time of the American Bankers Association convention in Boston, he was still confined to his room, but directed the support of the new constitution which he had written from his home. His representatives on the floor were Charles H. McNider of Mason City, Iowa, and Sol Wexler of New Orleans. Every movement made was directed personally by Colonel James and the result will be a lasting tribute to his memory. Bankers everywhere will learn with sorrow of his untimely death.

Mrs. R. E. James received the following telegram from Arthur Reynolds, president of the American Bankers Association:

"The news of the passing of your husband will be received with great sorrow by all those who knew him. Mr. James enjoyed the full confidence of his friends and his integrity, fidelity and ability won for him the admiration of the banking fraternity. His work in the American Bankers Association was of a high order and his presence will be greatly missed at all our meetings. We mourn with you in your great loss. With personal expressions of sympathy, (Signed) ARTHUR REYNOLDS.

VETERAN CHICAGO BANKER DIES

John Williams MacGeagh, 72 years old, died at his home at 1246 North State Street Friday, supposedly of heart disease. Mr. MacGeagh was cashier of the Hibernian Banking Association and had been connected with that institution for the last forty-four years. He was unmarried.

He was born in Cookstown, Ireland, September 2, 1841. He came to America in 1861 and his first work was as a bookkeeper in a country store at Orillia, Canada, from 1861 to 1864. A short time later he came to Chicago and in 1869 started with the Hibernian Bank-

SAVINGS IN CHICAGO

According to the last report Chicago banks had savings deposits amounting to $234,359,430—a little better than an average of $100 per capita. The average for the state is $55.77 and for the United States $67.77 per capita.

BANKER ACQUIRES PROPERTY

John Bain of the West Englewood State Bank has purchased 350 lots in the Forest Ridge subdivision, Longwood, consisting of about eighty acres. The grantor was David P. Reighard of Pittsburgh.

GAS COMPANY TO INCREASE STOCK

Peoples Gas Light & Coke, Chicago, will increase its capital stock from $35,000,000 to $50,000,000, 10 per cent of the new stock to be offered to holders of the present stock at par.

The bankers of Kansas are going before the next legislature requesting a bill to put a farm adviser in every county.

WAGE LOAN BANK OPENS

First State Industrial Wage Loan Society opened for business on Monday of this week in the Union Bank building, 25 North Dearborn Street.

The society will lend money to responsible persons in amounts up to $250 at 3 per cent a month. The purpose is to provide a financial refuge for those persons who otherwise would be tempted to deal with extortionate lenders charging higher rates. It is announced that when the new business pays dividends exceeding 6 per cent it will reduce its rates to borrowers. The purpose of the enterprise is semi-philanthropic.

An applicant in order to secure a loan must disclose a real need for borrowing. Money which is to be used for Christmas purposes, amusements and the like, will not be advanced.

OLD BROKERAGE HOUSE FAILS

Announcement was made Thursday of the failure of the old banking and brokerage house of H. B. Hollins & Co., New York. Liabilities are estimated at five millions and assets at from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000. The failure is attributed to the withdrawal of large deposits which seriously impaired the working capital.

COL. JIM (JAMES P.) HINTON gave us the slip on a nice little news item from Hannibal, Mo. We have learned, however, that the new Mrs. Hinton is (or was) a belle of 22 summers and a leader in society.

EVERY one who ever met the distinguished ex-president of the Missouri association will send best wishes and congratulations to the young wife on securing the finest in the husband line that the state affords.

MEMORIAL addresses made by Ex-Presidents F. O. Watts, Lewis E. Pierson and E. F. Swinney at the Boston A. B. A. convention October 7th have been printed in a neat pamphlet for private circulation.

WILLIAM J. BURNS, who has just returned from Europe, declares that he found a fertile field in European cities for graft and grafters.

MR. BURNS, whose unusual detective methods are graphically pictured in the recently published novel "The Argyle Case," has made arrangements for opening detective agencies in France and Germany similar to the one managed by Asche Kayton in "The Argyle Case."

ASCHKE KAYTON, it will be remembered by all who have seen the play or read the novel founded on it, is no other than Burns himself.

'HARPER'S WIRELESS BOOK," published by the Harper Bros., is for boys and tells how and why all along the line. This is a Christmas tip.

OLD NATIONAL at Spokane has grown just a million a year for ten years, which, writes W. J. Kommers, is "nuff said" as to how it meets the demands of the public.

THE OLD NATIONAL is regarded as one of the financial pillars of the Northwest. Its success proves it.

'YOU ALL" know Sam W. Reyburn, president of the big Union Trust at Little Rock. Mild mannered, likable gentleman under normal conditions.

BUT the other day Ex-Governor Donaghey so far presumed upon Mr. Reyburn's peace loving disposition as to strike him in the face over a business disagreement.

THEN it was all off on peace congress lines and Sam W. just waded in and Donaghey was taken to the facial repair shop in a hack.

FIRST series of Missouri group meetings, just concluded, was successful and a further tribute to the sagacity of Secretary Keyser in selecting speakers and topics and in making campaign plans.

THE income tax naturally obtruded itself, but that grand old campaigner, Col. W. G. Edens, kept good roads pretty well to the fore.

IT required two special cars to carry all the "rainbow-chasers" from Chicago, St. Louis, New York and Kansas banks.

THE big road congress at St. Louis Monday and Tuesday drafted Col. Edens for its program also.

MISSOURI has bunched up her groups contiguous to the centers, gaining in railway facilities and attendance. Local issues, however, will predominate in the programs as heretofore.

E. M. TATE, son of Judge Ben Tate, has organized a new bank at LaPlata, Mo., with $35,000 capital. Mr. Tate formerly was with the Columbia Savings.

AT the Macon, Mo., group meeting one visitor interrupted Mr. Edens of Chicago, talking on good roads, to inquire about the condition of the highways in Illinois.

"GOOD for aeroplanes," said the colonel, without cracking a smile.

FIRST NATIONAL, St. Paul, is sending out James J. Hill's great Boston speech on "Industry, Credit and Banking" on request.

KENTUCKY ASSOCIATION has a surplus of $5,000 and is adding to it. Secretary Arch. B. Davis is a good business manager, which would be a better title for the really successful secretaries.

KENTUCKY also has a live president in Frank M. Gettys, who has prescribed "winter work" for the association.

PRESIDENT GETTYS wants a false statement act and one to punish those who check on "no funds."

KENTUCKY also has an ancient bankruptcy law giving preference to claims for material furnished over claims for money furnished. This has diverted money to manufacturers in other states to the great injury of Kentucky.

EVEN mining, a great industry in the state, is being hindered in its growth by this unfair-to-capital law.

WACHOVIA BANK AND TRUST CO. at Winston-Salem, N. C., has developed banking by mail to a place where it pays.

MISSOURI ASSOCIATION has a standing reward of $500 for each person captured who has robbed or held up a member bank. Only last week it paid out $1,000 for two such who got twelve years in the pen. Dandy work.

HANCHETT BOND CO., Chicago, keeps on hand a fine list of municipals of which it makes a specialty.

FIRST-SECOND NATIONAL stockholders at Pittsburgh rapidly are falling in line for the reopening of the big bank. Consents are coming in rapidly.

CREDITORS have signed in large numbers and great progress has been made in that direction. The Pittsburgh Clearing House is now making an examination of assets preparatory to the re-entry of the institution to the clearing house when reopened.

REHABILITATION of the First-Second would be the most important financial resurrection of recent years. It will mean much to Pittsburgh.

BANK OF SECURED SAVINGS in Pittsburgh has justified its significant title by showing rapid growth in deposits.

MR. FORGAN may never have used the bad word represented in the Wall Street Journal by a dash. Good story just the same.

"J. B." was at a New York banquet where the Guaranty Trust had distributed "A Digest of the Federal Reserve Act," and he was looking at the pamphlet.

"I CANT even swallow the—thing much less digest it," he said, and he's not the only one.

J. C. ENGLISH of the Traders National, Kansas City, Mo., is arranging for a special car to tour the Kansas group meetings the latter half of this month. Write for reservations.

SECRETARY W. W. BOWMAN has made up fine programs and the Kansas bankers enter very heartily into the group meeting plan. Large attendance at the meetings is promised.

NEW YORK state bankers in a migratory spirit held their annual convention in Ottawa. It was the convention hit of the year.

A COMMITTEE is looking for a 1914 location and we suggest Chicago. Perhaps a joint convention could be held and it could be made a corker.

THEN Illinois could return the compliment and meet in New York state in 1915. It would be no end of fun.

SENTIMENT in Boston is shown by an application made to the board of bank incorporation to merge the South End and the New England nationals and form the Hamilton Trust Company.

THE private bankers of New York state have organized their own state association and call it Private Bankers Association of the State of New York.

IT is private, too, for the sessions were behind closed doors and not even the constitution could be had for publication.

W. P. MANLY of Belfast is president and J. W. Butler of New York is secretary.

THE new private banking law in Pennsylvania has stood the test of the courts and William and Charles Ensign, doing a banking business as William Ensign & Son at North East, have each been sentenced to one year in the penitentiary.

THEY resisted the provisions of the new state law and refused to comply, and even when insolvent kept on receiving deposits, Public sentiment was against the bank's fight to resist supervision.

TENNESSEE'S new banking law will be put into operation by Joseph L. Hutton, the newly appointed banking commissioner

THE state association practically selects the commissioner, naming five candidates. Mr. Hutton, as directed by the law, has cancelled all banking connections.

NEW YORK has a commission at work revising and codifying her complex banking laws and the report will be made to the legislature February 1, 1914.

EVERY state in the union can benefit by the work done by the Van Tuyl commission, as much of it will be adaptable to any state in need of a new banking law.

AUGUST A. BUSCH has been elected director of several and president of one St.

Louis bank, succeeding to the positions held by the late Adolphus Busch.

JANUARY 1st work will begin on the new U. S. National Bank building at Omaha. It will be monumental in style and will hold the U. S. Trust Co., an allied institution.

NEWTON D. ALLING, vice-president of the National Nassau and leading chapter man of New York, has been elected a director.

H. R. YOUNG, a banker at Marion, has been named as "Blue Sky" inspector for Ohio by Bank Commissioner Lattanner. Look out for Warren Hayden!

WORK has been begun clearing the site for the new Merchants National building at St. Paul.

J. A. LEWIS, Frank O. Hicks and J. R. Leavell formed the St. Louis committee on entertainment and banquet for the joint group meeting in St. Louis on Tuesday.

FESTUS J. WADE spoke on the currency but refused to sing his famous Boston banquet solo.

FIFTY depositors in "Sol" Lewisohn's private bank at East Thirty-first Street and South Michigan Avenue waited in vain since Tuesday morning for the bank's doors to open.

RUMOR had it that the bank was solvent but that Sol did not like the present designs of the courts upon his personal liberty well enough to stay here. The receiver discovered $5.38 in cash in the bank.

SIXTY days in jail isn't a thing to be thought of lightly.

SOL'S bank was known as "The Traders Bank," the title being in a sense fairly descriptive.

JOS. T. TALBERT of the National City, New York, supported himself in youth by picking cotton. C. V. Rich, another v. p. in the same institution, was a Chicago newsboy. H. R. Eldridge and F. A. Vanderlip were stenographers.

SAMUEL McROBERTS was a Kansas school teacher and nearly the whole upper end of the staff were Chicagoans during the real development period.

IF New York had gotten all the Chicago bankers she had bid for, the banks here might have been closed up. Well, of course, there are a few eligibles left in Iowa.

LONDON stock exchange has suspended the brokers who distributed the American Marconi shares to English victims.

A CERTAIN exchange way down East could improve its record by doing a few similar stunts.

THE women of the Illinois federated clubs had the good sense to invite the president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association out to address the Evanston division on Wednesday last.

HE talked good roads and poured out compliments like a human cornucopia. Col.

Edeus had announced his Missouri speaking tour as positively his last "farewell appearance" for 1913.

CHICAGO & NORTHWESTERN RAILWAY has ordered 80 new locomotives. That doesn't look like hard times or crop failure.

NEW YORK seems to have oversold the general stock market much as it did the 2 per cent market and with about the same result.

MARY GARDEN'S costume in "Thais" was appraised in court at $534. or, in other words, at $1,000 a yard.

FRANK GOTCH is teaching the tango out in Iowa. Toe hold barred.

AN accomplished crook opened up in Chicago a few weeks ago by depositing $150 in a convenient bank.

HE then began cashing his own checks for larger sums about his headquarters and with acquaintances, but always he deposited the money obtained in time to cover his checks when they came in.

IN three months he built up such a rating for his personal checks by keeping them always good that in one day he cashed $4,800 worth and disappeared. Clever scheme.

YE good Republican country editor will be obliged to you for the name of any new crime which he can charge up to Tammany. Times are hard.

THE "trouble lamp" was listed as a regular fitting by automobile manufacturers until they noticed that it hurt business in a suggestive way.

SOME bankers carry a "trouble lamp" in their very countenances, outdoing the old-styled undertaker, even.

THEN there are those who attend bankers' meetings where the new currency bill is under discussion.

ONE yells "flat money," another howls "inflation" and his neighbor says it means "contraction," until the public laughs jeeringly.

DON'T carry a "trouble lamp" about with you. Don't talk panic, poor business and flood waters. Be an optimist. It will help lots.

WHEN Group Four, Illinois, holds its next meeting it is planned to ask the Central Trust for the loan of as many elephants as may be needed for the sight-seeing tour.

NATIONAL CITIZENS LEAGUE SUSPENDS

On November 1st the offices of the National Citizens League in Chicago were closed. The corporation will continue its existence for some time yet, but activity will be abandoned. The financial affairs of the League have been settled. There will be no further issues of "Banking Reform." The League states that while "an acceptable banking law has not yet been passed such legislative progress has been made that there is no shadow of doubt that legislation is certain. It may be a matter of only a few weeks. It cannot be a matter of more than a few months. From no source worth considering has come any suggestion to continue the present banking and currency system. There is a unanimous opinion that there must be a reform and that it must be comprehensive, effective and satisfactory."

"No work the League could do would change this situation," says the announcement. "The League not only did not undertake to get a bill through congress; it specifically disclaimed any such intention. It did undertake an educational campaign, whose final result, it was hoped, would be the creation of a general sentiment in demand of banking reform. As the evidence that such sentiment has been effectively created, and in manifestation of its existence and force, a banking reform bill admitted to be at least 80 per cent good, has passed the lower house of congress. The senate banking and currency committee is proceeding carefully to increase the percentage of good.

"To those who have contributed money and support to the movement for a sound banking system the executive committee in Chicago extends thanks and the assurance that the co-operation has been appreciated. The work has been trying at times. The League has been misunderstood at times. It has sometimes been subjected to harsh criticism. It would have been miraculous if, in such a campaign, mistakes had not been made. It would have been more miraculous if any constructive effort of the kind had not been criticized. But generally, after the first, and perhaps natural, suspicion had been removed, the response was hearty and earnest and the support loyal and patriotic. The support, it is said in modesty, was deserved because there was never an instant when the executive forces of the League were swayed by partisanship, selfishness or the impulse to favor any class, any measure or any section. A definite plan and a definite policy was laid down in the beginning and was never departed from. It was so nearly correct that it was never necessary to consider departing from it."

The press of the country is thanked and highly praised for "splendid co-operative" work.

WESTERN CONDITIONS

Business in the West is slowing up somewhat, but the recession is not of an alarming character. The best way, perhaps, to describe the situation is to state that business is marking time pending the outcome of certain legislative measures prominently before the public at present.

Money is holding firm with 6 per cent as the minimum and the call rate about one-half of one per cent lower. Chicago bankers as a whole are of the opinion that stiff rates will prevail until after the first of the year, despite the fact that agricultural demands will not be so heavy a few weeks hence as now. It is contended that, even if the business recession be carried further, a situation which would have a tendency to bring about cheaper rates for money, the fact that money is tight throughout the world would enable the present rates to be maintained. The conditions which have been described have been productive of caution and conservatism and the disposition to go slow for a time is apparent everywhere.

Influence of the Banking Law on Foreign Exchange

Fred L. Kent, vice-president of the Bankers Trust, New York, says a central bank would have avoided panic of 1907

One very important and principal reason why it is necessary that a proper banking system be established in the United States is our present lack of properly concentrated effort to protect our gold supply in times of need.

In the fall of 1907 the banks engaged in the foreign exchange business imported, including arrivals in January, about $107,000,000 in gold. But there was a period of time extending a little over 48 hours during which there was hesitation upon the part of the bankers as to how to act. This uncertainty resulted in the stoppage of the purchase of foreign bills for a sufficient number of hours to multiply the uneasiness that was spreading throughout the country.

If there had never been a refusal or hesitation on the part of any banker in the country to purchase drafts drawn against cotton, grain, meat, etc., the great congestion that occurred in the credits drawn against such commodities would never have happened. If we had had a central bank in the United States at that time empowered to do a foreign exchange business and purchase gold and bullion and rediscount for bankers, the panic would unquestionably never have developed.

In the first place, the banks themselves would not have been afraid to purchase the exchange, as they would have known that they could sell it to the central bank if unable to use it, or, in the case of domestic shipments, that they could have rediscounted the bills at the central bank.

In the second place the central bank itself would have been in active operation making purchases of bills either from the banks, if it had only had power to buy bills from them, or otherwise in the market, and from the banks.

The strained conditions that were developing could have been recognized and anticipated, and there would never have been one moment during which any dealer in our commodities would have been at a loss to know whether he was going to be able to finance his sales.

With a system of twelve regional banks, such as are contemplated in the present bill under consideration, there is considerable doubt as to whether conditions would not have been worse rather than better, for the expansion could undoubtedly have gone further before a break came, and it is doubtful whether divided regional banks could operate with any greater certainty and security in the foreign market than the regular banks which were then dealing in foreign exchange.

If instead of twelve regional banks there had been four, it is also doubtful whether they could have accomplished anything more than was done by the foreign exchange banks which imported the $107,000,000. There is a possibility, however, that the momentary hesitation in the purchase of bills which vitalized the undercurrent of fear might have been avoided. One reason why four regional banks could not have been as effective as a central institution would lie in the fact that there would of necessity be competition between them, and questions of profit and loss would inevitably come up when it came to the point of buying gold.

Supposing these four regional banks were situated in New York, Chicago, New Orleans and San Francisco, we should probably find that the New York regional bank would purchase foreign exchange in the New York market, which would cover commodities of many descriptions; we should find that the New Orleans regional bank would purchase cotton bills; that the Chicago regional bank would purchase meat bills, and that the San Francisco regional bank would purchase Oriental exchange. The New York institution, because of its situation in the principal import and export city of the country, would be the natural one to import gold. In order to be effective in its undertaking, it might be necessary to take off of the hands of the New Orleans and Chicago regional banks the exchange that they were carrying. If this were true, the question of rate might become a cause of considerable friction between them.

For instance, if the New Orleans and Chicago regional banks purchased, say, sixty-day sight bills on London at 4.84½ and carried them for, say thirty days, and the market demand exchange dropped in the meantime, because of the conditions that had developed to, say, 4.84, the New Orleans and Chicago banks would meet with a heavy loss if they turned their sixty-day sight bills purchased under such circumstances over to the New York regional banks at the market rate of the day. This would have represented a rate of 4.84, less thirty days' interest at the prevailing London rate, which might easily have made the value of the bills only 4.81½. If therefore the New Orleans and Chicago banks turned their bills over to the New York regional bank, they would have lost the use of the money for thirty days, and in addition three cents a pound, or $3,000 for every £100,000 delivered by them. They might argue that if they could hold these bills until maturity the demand rate might recover and that consequently they might receive a proper interest on their investment. The New York regional bank would not, of course, be willing to pay any more for the bills than the market warranted, and if the federal reserve board in Washington attempted to straighten out the squabble valuable time would be lost that might endanger the whole position.

If the federal bank ruled against the New Orleans and Chicago banks and forced them to sell their exchange at a loss, it would unquestionably make them feel as though the New York regional bank had been favored, which might prevent a proper desire to co-operate in the future. If the New York institution were forced to pay a higher rate for the bills than the market warranted, it would naturally feel abused, and its managers could properly say that there was no reason why the New York bank should bear the burden of bringing in gold, which was of value and necessary for the good of the whole country.

In the case of a central bank, the purchase of foreign exchange could be made anywhere in the United States and could be handled as the needs of the moment seemed to require. The credits for all bills purchased could be passed through the New York branch of the central bank at once. This institution would then be in a position to operate as the market seemed to require and would undoubtedly be able to protect itself from being caught with quantities of bills that would represent a large loss if turned into gold. The same conditions would be true in the case of balances held abroad. If four separate regional institutions carried their own balances, they would not be worth as much to any one of them in case of necessity, and if the gold operations were to be carried on by the New York bank and it required the balances of the other three regional banks in order to properly protect the country, friction might again develop, as the regional banks outside of New York might refuse to sell their exchange at the low rates that might prevail, unless forced to do so. In the case of one central bank such balances would be under the control of one manager and could be used to the best advantage.

Balances in account with foreign banks might at times be the principal asset that the regional banks in this country would have to purchase gold, for they could not carry sufficient time bills in their portfolio at all times of the year to give them very much power if trouble should develop at certain seasons. This is true because a very large percentage of the exports from this country from, say, the middle of August on to, say, the middle of February are in sixty and ninety day sight bills, whereas the balance of the year the percentage is very much smaller. The lightest months of export are those of May, June, July and August, and practically the only sixty and ninety day sight bills that are purchasable during those months are finance bills issued by bankers who expect to cover them with shipments against grain and cotton, which mature in the fall. The same reasons which would cause the issue of the finance bills by other bankers might make them unprofitable for regional banks to purchase and carry to maturity.

If the regional banks pay no interest on deposits, they could well afford to carry large balances with European banks and accept the rates of interest that such banks pay upon balances. These rates would probably vary from 1 per cent to, say, 4 per cent at different periods of the year in different years. Such balances could be used to buy bills of exchange in the foreign bill markets, when the return could be improved by so doing. Barring of this nature would not in any way compete or conflict with the business of the ordinary American foreign exchange bank.

If we had had a central bank in 1907, we unquestionably could have borrowed gold of the Bank of France against the deposits of bills or other security in the same manner that the Bank of England did, and so have directly relieved our situation, and much sooner than was otherwise possible. Foreign interests at that time would have been glad, indeed, to have advanced gold under such circumstances if they had had any bank of great responsibility to deal with that represented this country. The individual banks all did their part, but they could not operate with the same effectiveness that a central bank could have done had it been in existence, as their power was divided, and each proposition had to be based largely on the question of profit, even though it is true that the banks of New York paid out at that time many thousands of dollars in order to obtain gold and currency which they shipped to country institutions without such costs.

If we have twelve regional banks, no one of them could have sufficient capital and power to command the credit that would be necessary in order to have direct dealing with European central banks, whereas in the case of a central bank it would command such respect that it could take part with the great European banks in protecting each other. Even one of four regional banks might not be large enough to meet the requirements. This might be true even if such bank were larger in capital and deposits than the European central banks, for those managing the foreign institutions would always recognize the fact that the four regional banks were only as strong as the power of the federal board to hold them together, because they would know that in case of crisis in this country such board would require the New York regional bank, for instance, to loan to any of the other regional banks, and if this were done, because of inflation in some other portion of this country, the foreign banks would be the first to take fright. With a great central bank, properly managed, the United States, in being able to take part with the great European banks in relieving strained situations that might occur in different localities, would be in position to command help for this country when it might need it and other countries did not.

In the case of world stringency every country, would, of course, have to look out for itself, and the question of where gold went would depend largely on trade balances and relative financial conditions. It would seem wiser for this country to maintain the free gold position that prevails in England rather than the close position of France or Germany.
